ETHIOPIAN TROOPS RUSH TO HALT ITALY'S ADVANCE; KINGDOM MENACED AS INVADERS GOBBLE TERRITORY

Atlanta-to-Coast Road To Be Dedicated Friday

HUGE MOTORCADE OFF FOR SAVANNAH FOR CELEBRATION

Distinguished Georgians Will Help Dedicate New All-Paved Route From State Capitol to the Sea.

LAURENS BARBECUE PLANNED AT DUBLIN

When the Atlanta-to-Savannah motorcade leaves the Washington street viaduct next Friday morning, starting its run over the new paved short route between the state's two largest cities, the hundreds of automobiles in line will carry a representative cross-section of the leading citizens of Georgia of this time and age.

And as the long line of cars stretches into ever longer distance with the addition of new entries from every town and city along the route, more and more will the most distinguished citizens of Georgia be found in its ranks.

For a motorcade of this character, dedicating a great new highway to the service of the people of the state and of their tourist guests, is an event of primary importance in this day of universal motor travel and as such no official of town, city, county or state can stay out if circumstances make it at all possible for him to go.

Not only from the actual route of the motorcade itself, but from every section of the state have come applications for places in the line, accompanied by enthusiastic letters telling how the writers are looking forward to the event. Especially those who were members of the great motorcade of a year ago which, sponsored by The Constitution and the Savannah Morning News, officially opened the other great route, the "Four Capitals" highway.

This time the 'caders will ride by way of McDonough and Jackson to Macon, where they will be greeted by all the enthusiasm that citizens of the Central City can engender. After a brief stop in Macon the line of cars will procede to Dublin, where they will stop for dinner.

This will take the form of one of the famous Laurens county barbecues, served in Stubbs park, a beautiful wooded tract near the center of the city. In case of rain the 'cue will be served in the adjacent gymnasium.

All Dublin Is Ready.

The entire city of Dublin has done nothing for weeks but prepare for and

Publisher Is Freed In Morals Charge

ST. PAUL, Nov. 9.—(AP)—A district court jury today acquitted Walter W. Liggett, Minneapolis magazine writer and newspaper publisher, charged with a morals offense against a minor girl in March, 1934, in a Minneapolis hotel.

The writer charged that the accusation was part of a "political conspiracy" agaist him, but offered no evidence to that effect.

Ga. Wins, Tech Loses; Notre Dame Beaten

The Southeastern conference title race tightened appreciably Saturday when Georgia stormed back into the picture by defeating Tulane, 26 to 13, at New Orleans and L. S. U. beat Mississippi State, 28 to 13. It focused conference attention on the game next Saturday between Georgia and L. S. U.

Tech went down before a mighty Auburn running attack, 33 to 7. Alabama went outside the conference to beat Clemson, 33 to 0. North Carolina continued its unbeaten and untied record by overwhelming V. M. I., 56 to 0.

Notre Dame fell before Northwestern, 14 to 7, thus eliminating another of the unbeaten, but Minnesota kept her record clear by beating Iowa, 13 to 6.

Princeton took Harvard, 35 to 0, in the east, and California's flag still flies as a result of a 14-to-0 beating administered to Washington.

Details of all major games and scores of all games will be found in the sports section.

COMMUNITY CHEST TO OPEN CAMPAIGN AT CHURCH RALLY

Joint Session Next Sunday Will Mark Opening of Drive To Meet Needs of Suffering Humanity.

A great rally of all church congregations of Atlanta, including all denominations, was arranged Saturday as an opening feature of the Community Chest campaign that begins November 18.

This meeting that will assemble thousands of Atlanta's leading men and women, will be held at the First Baptist church at 2:30 Sunday, November 17.

A brilliant program of music is being arranged and the entire event will be broadcast over a hook-up of the three Atlanta radio stations.

November 17 already has been designated Church Day in the Community Chest campaign, and special events are planned in most of the churches. The day will reach a climax in the rally, which will be unique.

Atlanta's best-known groups of church singers, and a number of leading vocalists and instrumentalists, are volunteering to take part in the program and short talks will be made by a group of outstanding ministers of all creeds and faiths.

The public is urged to attend and watch the program as it passes before the microphones.

Commendation for the plan came Saturday from all sides as interest grew steadily in the plan.

GEORGIA RECOVERY COST ESTIMATED AT $336,500,000

State Director Cocke Lists Benefits Accrued to Citizens by Program Carried Out by Government.

Erle Cocke, Georgia director of the National Emergency Council, yesterday made public figures showing this state has benefitted by more than $336,500,000 from President Roosevelt's recovery program.

Cocke announced figures on the expenditures of the various governmental agencies aiding Georgians covering the period of March, 1933, to November 1, 1935.

Commenting, Cocke said:

"There has been expended in the state of Georgia up to November 1, 1935, by the federal government incidental to the Recovery Program, an amount in excess of $313,800,000, of which approximaely $173,200,000 has been disbursed in the way of loans to save property from foreclosure and to furnish cash for financing operations, and approximately $140,600,000 has been expended in emergency funds, used primarily for construction to promote recovery.

Farm Mortgage Loans.

"Closely correlated with the above but what might not absolutely be termed strictly emergency expenditures are the farm mortgage loans made by the Federal Land Bank amounting to $11,500,000 and federal seed and feed loans amounting to $11,200,000. Should these be added to the above, such expenditures in Georgia would total in excess of $336,500,000."

Cocke's report shows that in February, 1934, there were approximately 135,000 cases on relief rolls, representing in round figures 625,000 individuals.

"As of November 1, 1935," Cocke

POLITICS IN RELIEF CHARGED TO 'DEAL'

Democrats Answer Cost Is More Than Paid for by Nation's Recovery.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Democratic raillery over Governor Alf Landon's chances to become a presidential nominee and another republican charge of misuse of relief funds tonight rounded out a week of political speculations.

Following on the Tuesday elections, which pleased neither major party completely, the powers-that-be or would-be in both were slowly, tentatively getting down to business about 1936.

Postmaster-General Farley and Attorney-General Cummings, speaking in New Haven, moved to meet opposition emphasis on the spending issue with argument that recovery has more than made up for the costs.

Chairman Hastings, of the republican senatorial campaign committee, contended "relief as administered by the New Deal reeks with politics and everyone is beginning to know it." His statement was by way of challenge to the insistence by Harry L. Hopkins that politics has no place in the FERA.

Vandenberg Next.

Increased talk about the Kansas governor to lead the G. O. P. was characterized both by Farley and his publicity director here, Charles Michelson, as "trial balloon" stuff. They said Landon was getting a whirl only after Senator Borah, of Idaho, and Colonel Frank Knox, of Illinois. Michelson added Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, probably would be next.

This naming of names contrasted with conflicting claims earlier in the week that the New Deal was "vindicated" and "repudiated" by Tuesday ballots. Had the results been more preponderant in either direction, the interpretations could not have been so disputable.

Two facts not obscured by the comments were that the republicans certainly had more to crow about than after the 1932 and 1934 sweeps, and that returns in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Kentucky mixed good with bad tidings for each party. The leaders appeared relieved to have these state contests behind, so they could get going in earnest for the national showdown.

Various possibilities to oppose the Roosevelt-Garner ticket still denied being "candidates." The final judge of what was sincerity or sham remained the individual voter. Realists detected more eloquence between the lines than in the sentences of some potential nominees.

"Look at Record" Strategy.

On the administration side, the most direct inkling yet of campaign tactics passed virtually unnoticed. It was in the word, from an unimpeachable quarter, that President Roosevelt realizes he and his policies will be the '36 issue, barring unexpected developments; he wants it so and is inclined at present to let "the record"

F. D. R., Canadian Prime Minister Agree on Reciprocal Trade Pact

Mackenzie King Ends Two-Day Conference With Roosevelt and Both Announce Complete Agreement in Plan To Strengthen Trade Relations.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—(UP) "Complete agreement" on the objectives to be obtained by a reciprocal trade agreement between Canada and the United States was announced today by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Mackenzie King, of Canada.

The announcement was made in a joint statement issued by the President and the prime minister following a series of conferences between the two which started yesterday afternoon and continued until noon today. The prime minister was a house guest at the White House overnight.

The statement, issued at the White House, said:

"The President of the United States and the prime minister of Canada have considered the question of increased trade which has been discussed for some time by the representatives of the two nations. There is complete agreement on the objective of a greatly increased flow of trade for the benefit of both countries and substantial progress has been made towards this end. It is recognized that such an increase would be beneficially felt in all activities, because trade is but another word for increased employment, transportation and consumption."

KINGSFORD-SMITH SEARCH CONTINUES

Unsighted for Two Days, Famed Aviator May Be Still Afloat in Sea.

(Copyright, 1935, by United Press.)

SINGAPORE, Straits Settlement, Nov. 9.—(UP)—Through dense jungles of the peninsula and over the turbulent waters of the Adaman sea and the shark-infested Bay of Bengal, a gigantic search went on tonight for Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith and J. T. Pethybridge, missing more than 48 hours on an England-to-Australia flight.

Chief hope of finding the daring Australian aviator and his companion was based on the fact that Kingsford-Smith once pulled through after being lost 12 days when his plane was forced down in one of the worst parts of the Australian brush, a region inhabited by cannibals.

The search centered from a point 150 miles off the Malayan peninsula where his ship was last seen late Thursday, and in the jungles of the peninsula and the dangerous islands off the coast.

Beat Jungle Lairs.

Burma and Malaya natives beat the dark jungles, Chinese junks poked their way up creeks and inlets off the west coast, Royal Air Force bombers and private planes skimmed the sea and hundreds of ships, both on and off the regular steamer lanes, were on the lookout.

One of those who joined the search was C. J. Melrose, fellow Australian flyer, who gave up his own solo flight to Australia when he heard Kingsford-Smith and Pethybridge were missing.

Melrose was the last person known to have seen Kingsford-Smith's Lockheed monoplane, the Lady Southern Cross.

Late Thursday he spotted it as it fought its way across the stormy Adaman sea. The Lady Southern Cross was only 200 feet above the shark-infested waters and great spurts of flames were shooting from its exhaust, he said.

Previously, the United Press correspondent at Alor Star, up the coast, wired that Kingsford-Smith's plane passed Rangoon, Burma, Thursday afternoon at 1 p. m., central standard

G. O. P. Banking Head Boosting Roosevelt

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Amadeo P. Giannini, of San Francisco, chairman of the advisory board of the Bank of America and retired president of that institution, today voiced confidence in President Roosevelt.

Describing himself as a "progressive republican," Mr. Giannini told interviewers:

"I don't believe in kicking out the man who has done the job. Things are on the up and up and the thing we've been working for—prosperity—is here."

He is en route to New Orleans to attend a bankers' convention.

COUNTY WILL AID SEWER PROGRAM

Commissioner Almand Declares Fulton Will Be Ready To Act This Week

Fulton county definitely will take part in the gigantic $6,000,000 sewer program for the city and county, Commissioner Ed L. Almand, chairman of the public works department, announced yesterday.

Almand said county engineers are now studying figures and specifications of the sewer lines and disposal plants and will be ready to confer with city engineers Tuesday in preparation for a final agreement as to the method of Fulton paying its share of the costs.

Fulton will be expected to make a specific proposition Tuesday, according to Alderman Frank Reynolds, chairman of city council sewer committee.

The county is asked to furnish $536,000 of the $6,000,000 program, the city having raised $1,000,000 for that purpose to combine with the $4,500,000 donated by the WPA and PWA.

Unless the county contributes, say city officials, sewer systems in Buckhead, East Point, Shadow Lawn and Lakewood will be connected with the disposal plants or the main sewer lines.

Reynolds asserted that the city is ready to proceed and R. L. McDougall, state WPA administrator, has said several thousands of men will be put to work immediately plans are completed between the county and city.

W. A. Hansell, assistant city construction engineer, said locations for disposal plants could not be decided until the county definitely assures the city that it will contribute more than half a million dollars.

"As soon as we find out exactly what is expected of Fulton county, we will work out a plan where our share will be donated," Commissioner Almand said.

The commissioner declared he had heard nothing of a rumored bond issue by Fulton county in order to raise the money.

15 Persons Are Injured As Bleacher Rails Fall

HAMILTON, N. Y., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Fourteen persons, most of them Syracusans, were injured as a railing on top of the bleachers on Colgate's athletic field collapsed today, hurling 20 persons 25 feet to the ground.

The rail let got in the third quarter of the Colgate-Syracuse freshman football game.

Graduate Manager William Reid said that he had had the railing rebraced just one week ago and that it had been inspected by a representative of an insurance company.

The bleachers are approximately three years old.

Impressive Ceremonies Planned For Armistice Day in Atlanta

Armistice Day will be observed here with impressive martial, patriotic and religious ceremonies. Atlanta, with the nation, will bow on the day that marks the 17th anniversary of the declaration of a truce which ended a war to which more than 8,000,000 men gave their lives.

Both the joy and grief that covered the world on the chilly, gray day when peace was declared will return tomorrow and in the midst of colorful parades and the boomings of cannons the citizenry will pause for a moment of silent prayer.

Governor Talmadge and Mayor Key have decreed that the day be one of prayer and thanksgiving. All offices of state and those in the city hall will be closed. Though most business houses and federal offices will run as usual, and 60,000 Atlanta children will attend school, banks will be closed and it was thought yesterday that some federal employes would be given a partial holiday. All departments under the jurisdiction of the county commission will close, it was announced.

There will be the American Legion parade, an air demonstration at the municipal airport, and special programs during the chapel exercises of the schools.

Parade at 10 O'Clock.

A parade, including in its ranks almost every military unit and patriotic society in the city, will begin at 10

JAPANESE INSIST ON NORTH CHINA'S INDEPENDENT RULE

Death of Sailor at Hands of Sino Citizen May MeanInvasion by Troops From Island Empire.

By F. M. FISHER.
(Copyright, 1935, by United Press.)

PEIPING, China, Nov. 9.—(UP) Japan, through General Kenji Doihara, head of its military intelligence service in China, today demanded an independent regime be set up in north China immediately.

The demand, reportedly made at Tientsin, coincided with a new Sino-Japanese incident at Shanghai—the death of a Japanese sailor following an attack by an alleged Chinese civilian—which recalled the Japanese army's attack on Shanghai in 1932 and brought an immediate Japanese order that its troops take positions around the international settlement in the port city.

The combination of the two incidents undoubtedly has created the most serious crisis between China and Japan since 1932 when Japan invaded Manchuria.

Ten Chinese Arrested.

Doihara, a short, chunky little man sometimes called the "Lawrence of Manchuria," has been on the spot always in the past when trouble broke out between China and Japan. His reported demand today merely brings into the open what rumor and reports of the past week have increasingly hinted at.

Only yesterday, Japanese military police arrested 10 Chinese political and educational leaders in Peiping

WOMAN IS KILLED IN AUTO SMASHUP

Mrs. W. N. Floyd Killed After Negro Cuts Corner Sharply, Police Say.

A young woman was killed and several persons were injured in automobile crashes last night.

The death of the woman, Mrs. W. N. Floyd, 23, of 669 Cascade avenue, S. W., who was killed instantly, was the forty-third fatal motor crash within the city limits since the first of the year, and the first automobile fatality this month, the last one being October 27, when J. J. Compton, 299 Techwood avenue, N. E., was fatally injured.

At the same time, the fatal crash last night marked not quite two weeks, a day lacking to make the two-week period, when there were no motor deaths within the city limits. Last month, however, nine persons were killed in motor accidents.

City police, meanwhile, yesterday credited The Constitution's safety campaign for the comparatively small number of accidents, fatal or otherwise, as students of William A. Bass Junior High school joined hundreds of others in pledging themselves to safety.

Jugular Vein Severed.

The crash, which brought instant death to Mrs. Floyd, from a severed jugular vein, inflicted when impact hurled her through the windshield, occurred about 8 o'clock at Humphries and Peters streets, S. W.

According to police, the young woman was seated beside her husband, W. N. Floyd, who was driving, when a car driven by J. D. Walker, negro, 377 Henry street, S. E., crashed into the Floyd car.

The negro was driving south on Peters street, and the Floyd car was proceeding north. The crash came as Walker, police said, cut the corner sharply.

Mrs. Floyd was dead upon arrival at Grady hospital.

The other occupants of the Floyd machine, who were seated in the rear, were Mrs. Alice Atkinson, 43, and Miss Lucille Atkinson, 16, both of Route 5, Jackson, Ga.

They were taken to Georgia Baptist hospital, Mrs. Atkinson suffering a broken nose and scalp wounds, and the girl suffering shock and lacerations.

They and Floyd, who was also cut and bruised, were discharged following treatment.

Other Driver Unhurt.

Walker was unhurt, but a passenger in his car, Marie Ellison, negro, 478 Humphries street, S. W., suffered a scalp wound. She was treated at Grady hospital and discharged.

Motorcycle Patrolmen M. L. Thomas and H. B. Creecy arrested Walker on a charge of reckless driving. He will be arraigned Tuesday morning in recorder's court.

Another accident, in which two persons were injured, occurred about 9:30 o'clock on the Marietta highway, about 10 miles east of Smyrna, Ga., when a car driven by J. D. Kemp, 21, 75

ITALIAN ADVANCE PENETRATES FAR INTO ENEMY LAND

Synchronized Push Aimed at British-Controlled Lake Tana; May Mean New Diplomatic Conflict

By HENRY T. GORRELL.
(Copyright, 1935, by United Press.)

ROME, Nov. 9.—(UP)—A synchronized push from the north and south carried Italian troops deeper into Ethiopia today.

Official reports from the war fronts said that, while the main army was concentrating for a major stand at Makale, columns moved from the south toward the important towns of Jijiga and Harar and from the north toward Lake Tana region, heart of Great Britain's plans for irrigation developments on the Blue Nile.

General Rodolfo Graziani is advancing through the southern Ogaden province, where unseasonal rains have greatly impeded activities. However, his army has captured Gorrahei, comparatively strategic point, in its dogged push. Finally, General Graziani hopes to meet the northern army at the Djibouti-Addis Ababa railroad past Jijiga and Harar to intercept Ethiopia's only modern life line to the sea.

Aim at Lake.

Out of northwest Eritrea native Askaris are driving southward, well across the Setit river frontier, in a concentration directed at Lake Tana. There was no mistaking that the push was aimed at the lake and its implications with British interests are the most alarming in international circles.

Moving with the Askaris were troops led by General Pietro Maravigna from Aksum. An official communique today said the Ethiopian chieftain, Fitaurari Gabre Medin, had surrendered to Maravigna.

The northern armies are expected to encounter Ethiopians at Gondar and Debra Tabor to the west of the lake, Socota in the center and Amba Alagi on the east in heavy battles for control of the valuable region.

Ras Kassa, considered by many as Ethiopia's strongest military leader, is reported concentrating forces to defend Debra Tabor and his almost equally famous son is expected to lead troops at Gondar.

The triple move out of the north will be one of the major tests for Italians during the Ethiopian campaign. Any fighting will have to be

EMPEROR PLANS COUNTERATTACK

Two Important Caravan Routes to Addis Ababa Fall Into Hands of Il Duce; Armies Far Apart

By R. H. HIPPELHEUSER.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Thousands of Ethiopian warriors rushed to the northern front today to halt the advance of Mussolini's empire-building legions.

Emperor Haile Selassie, it is expected, will have half a million well-armed troops on all fronts by November 20.

Long-range artillery equipment, rifles and ammunition are being brought to Addis Ababa almost daily and are dispatched at once to the field.

The Ethiopian government said it had started its first major aggressive counter-offensive against the Roman invaders. In the far northwest of Walkait province, up against British Sudan, Dedjazmatch Ayelu has mobilized his forces for an invasion of Eritrea.

This movement is designed to envelope the Italian forces now holding the area around Aduwa, Adigrat and Aksum south to Makale.

If successful, it would also serve to halt the Italian advance southward on the west end of the northern front. In this sector, the invaders have operated in the direction of Lake Tana, the source of water for British Sudan and Egypt.

To protect his only modern outlet with the modern world, Haile Selassie dispatched Danakil tribesmen, from the eastern desert areas, into Aussa province to defend the Addis Ababa-Djibouti railroad.

Italians Command Routes.

With the capture of Makale in the north and Gorrahei in the southern-southeastern area—both important caravan centers on the principal route into the interior—the Italians declared:

"The road to Harar is open."

41 Naval Planes Land Near Honolulu

HONOLULU, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Forty-one United States naval planes swooped down on lonely French Frigate shoals late today, completing without incident the first problem of a series to be worked out in 10 days of sky maneuvering over the mid-Pacific.

Word of the arrival of the first squadron of six planes on the rocky shoals 550 miles west of here was flashed to Honolulu at 2:55 p. m. (7:25 p. m., central standard time), and 30 minutes later the entire fleet was reported resting safely on the shoals waters. The fastest planes had completed the flight from Pearl Harbor, where they took off this morning, in 5 hours and 45 minutes.

Today's flight was the first in a series of tactical problems to be worked out among the widely separated islands to the west and north of Honolulu.

'GUILTY' PLEA BARGAIN OF CRIMINAL REJECTED

U. S. Scorns Romantic Gesture of Gangster for Freedom of Woman.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—(AP)—A gangster's offer to serve time to secure the freedom of his woman companion was scorned today by the government.

The Justice Department rejected the offer of William Weaver, a kidnap suspect, to trade a "guilty" plea for the freedom of Myrtle Eaton.

Government lawyers said it was the first romantic gesture of the kind they'd met.

Weaver, indicted with the Barker-Karpis gang for the kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, a St. Paul banker, was caught by federal agents in Florida this fall. The Eaton woman and a two-year-old boy were living with him in a hideout were also taken by the agents.

Although Weaver's companion was already wanted for "conspiracy" in the Bremer case, the government charged her also with harboring the criminal.

Weaver, who is awaiting trial in St. Paul, offered to change his plea of "not guilty" to "guilty" if the government would free the Eaton woman.

District attorneys in Florida and in St. Paul both recommended that Weaver's offer be accepted, Justice Department officers said, but crime experts who studied the case here ruled against the gangland gesture.

Weaver might have planned to benefit personally by the change of plea, they said. If Weaver is convicted after his "not guilty" plea, he may face a heavy penalty. Other members of the kidnap gang are serving life sentences.

A "guilty" plea, on the other hand, might incline a court to leniency.

Government lawyers said they reiterated to Weaver their policy of not bargaining with known criminals.

Final Details of Roosevelt Day Being Worked Out by Committees

State-Wide Motorcade Group Named Yesterday; Officials Make Plea Asking Atlantans To Leave Cars at Home To Prevent Traffic Congestion.

With the Roosevelt Home-coming celebration less than three weeks off, all committees, including the state-wide motorcade committee appointed yesterday, were hard at work arranging final details of the President's visit, which is expected to bring at least 100,000 visitors to Atlanta and provide the greatest crowd in the history of the south.

The motorcade committee, which is headed by J. R. Gray, editor of the Atlanta Journal, was made public yesterday by General Chairman Erle Cocke.

At the same time, Wiley Moore, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce and chairman of the Roosevelt committee on decorations, issued a statement in which he indorsed Major Trammell Scott's plea to Atlantans to leave their motor cars at home home-coming day in order that the visitors may have space to park the tens of thousands of cars they will bring to Atlanta.

Plans Progress Favorably.

Meanwhile Chairman Cocke said that plans were going forward favorably and that all indications were that the throng would be up to expectations and that the city would be able to handle the crowd without difficulty.

"Thousands of homes will be thrown open to visitors," Chairman Cocke said. "It will be Atlanta's greatest crowd by far, but we have no doubt but that it will be taken care of satisfactorily."

In his statement, Moore said:

"There will undoubtedly be a tremendous crowd in the city during President Roosevelt's visit and unless all of the people living in the metropolitan area make the necessary sacrifice and co-operate to the fullest extent by leaving their cars at home, traffic within a radius of 12 miles will be so completely conjested that probably the day will be spoiled for thousands of people.

"Reports coming from virtually every community in the state of Georgia, as well as outside the state, indicate that folk from everywhere will converge here in Atlanta for this celebration.

Friendship Obligation.

"If our own people will leave their cars at home our traffic lanes will remain open for our visitors. Garages and parking places will provide space for them and traffic, with the fine co-operation of the city and county police departments, will be able to flow smoothly and freely in all parts of the city.

"Atlanta, as the host to thousands of people, owes an obligation of friendship and hospitality to our neighbors and friends and I am sure that all of our local people will continue to show the fine spirit of friendship that has made Atlanta one of the outstanding cities of the country."

NEW YORK PARLEYS ENDED BY HAMILTON

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—(AP)—George B. Hamilton, state treasurer of Georgia and president of the National Association of State Treasurers, Comptrollers and Auditors, left today for Atlanta after a conference on national association matters.

"We are going to make the organization work more tangible. Up to now it has been mostly a social matterd," said Hamilton.

He conferred with State Auditor Walter Darby, of New Jersey, and announced a meeting of the executive board will be held in March to go more deeply into the subject of making the group a service organization exchanging business and professional information.

Jacksonville Boy Scouts Given Telescope

J. J. Stoy, father of Walter J. Stoy II, is shown above with the six-inch Newton reflector telescope which the father constructed from abandoned materials and which the son has presented to Boy Scout Troop No. 41, Jacksonville. It has an 8-F aperture and experts say it is a real professional job. Staff photo by Kenneth Rogers.

Jacksonville Boy Scouts To Use Telescope Made by Atlanta Man

When members of Boy Scout Troop No. 41, Jacksonville, go star gazing in the future, they will be well equipped.

They will have the advantage of a six-inch telescope presented to the troop by J. J. Stoy, accountant, working in the office of B. Graham West, Atlanta, city comptroller, who constructed the valuable piece.

Stoy ground the mirror, dismantled an old microscope and use other left overs to make one of the most successful 'scopes yet developed in the local amateur colony.

His son, Walter J. Stoy II, presented it to the Jacksonville troop, after his father had made him a present of it.

The heavenly luminaries are brought closer and the pyrotechnics of the sky are vividly seen.

So whether the Jacksonville troop wishes to view the moon, Venus, Mars or any of the other stars, moons, satellites or constellations, they may do so with the knowledge they are equipped to see much more than the average troop will ever have the opportunity of witnessing.

Although the cost of the scope was about $50, it would market for about $350, according to experts.

'Car Spotting' by Busy Salesmen Worries State License Officials

A new activity called "car spotting" was described yesterday by Chairman Paul H. Doyal, of the Georgia Revenue Commission, as the source of a major headache among the country's motor vehicle license administrators.

"It's driving this department bughouse," Doyal said in telling of the trouble he said car spotters were causing the state motor registration bureau.

Here's how it works, Doyal said: Notebook in hand, a salesman trudges the sidewalks, looking at parked cars. He may be a salesman for anything from radiator caps to $10,000 cars. He looks over the line against the curb. He sees one automobile with worn tires and writes down the license number. He sees one that looks pretty old. He takes the number. Next day he calls at the state registration department and asks the names and addresses of owners of the license numbers in his book. Then, armed with the names and needs of his prospective customers, he goes after the business.

Telephone clerks estimate 200 calls reach the registration office each day, with only about 20 of them on official business.

"Our telephones are blocked sometimes with car-spotting calls from salesmen or just from boys who want to know who that girl was who waved at them," Doyal complained.

And there are more than 400,000 automobiles registered in Georgia this year—most in its history.

The state is permitted by law to sell its complete registration, and does so each year. But as to requests for classified files, letters and phone calls—

"It's costing the state money," Doyal maintains. "It's defeating the official purpose of the registration information service and it blocks the phones to peace officers in real emergencies. Something's just got to be done."

MURDER DOCKET READY FOR TRIAL

Three Men and Woman Face Jury in Death of Nicholas Neely.

Three men and a woman will go on trial for the murder of Nicholas Neely, FERA worker, Tuesday before Judge James C. Davis, of the Stone Mountain circuit, who is presiding over a division of Fulton superior court.

They are Nettie Spruill, Paul Ewing, G. J. Smith and James Odum, who were indicted for murder after a coroner's jury had rendered a verdict of suicide in the Neely case.

Neely's body was found July 4 in Maddox park by a party of picnickers. Circumstances indicated that he had shot himself in the head, but Assistant Solicitor John Hudson and Special Investigator George Pounds, and Donald Drukenmiller, a chemist, investigated further. Subsequently the Spruill woman and Ewing and Smith were arrested here while Odum was captured in Bluefield, W. Va., and returned to Atlanta.

Alvin Downs, who shot and killed his father, C. C. Downs, and his father's secretary, Mrs. Myrtle Carter, will be retried November 19 before Judge Virlyn B. Moore. A mistrial resulted when Downs was first tried in September. Six other murder cases, all negroes, will be tried the week of November 18, while five negro murders will be heard this week in addition to the Neely case, according to the trial calendar drawn by Lewis P. Jones, calendar clerk.

Superior courts will be closed tomorrow because of Armistice Day.

U. S. REFUSES BARGAIN WITH BREMER SUSPECT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Justice Department lawyers revealed today they had rejected an offer of William Weaver, Bremer kidnap suspect, to plead guilty in exchange for the freedom of his companion, Myrtle Eaton.

Weaver and the Eaton woman were arrested by federal agents this fall in a Florida hideout, where they were living under an assumed name with a two-year-old boy.

Justice Department officials said district attorneys in Florida and St. Paul, Minn., had both recommended that Weaver's offer be accepted.

BANK SUPERVISORS NAME H. W. HORSEY

Delaware Official Elected President as National Convention Is Ended Here.

Harold W. Horsey, state bank commissioner of Delaware, yesterday was elected president of the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks, succeeding R. E. Reichert, bank commissioner of Michigan.

Detroit was selected unanimously as the 1937 convention city. An invitation from Honolulu, Hawaii, brought applause.

Other officers elected were:

S. N. Schafer, Wisconsin commissioner of banking, first vice president, succeeding W. D. Gordon, of Harrisburg, Pa.; R. E. Gormley, Georgia superintendent of banks, second vice president, succeeding Howard H. Hansen, Washington state supervisor of banking; O. H. Moberly, Missouri commissioner of finances, third vice president, succeeding Joseph A. Broderick, New York city, and R. N. Sims, New Orleans, La., secretary-treasurer, succeeding himself.

J. F. T. O'Connor, comptroller of the currency, recited figures to the state supervisors which he said showed the "indestructability" of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

He took figures for a 13-year period (1921-1933) "embracing an unprecedented period of bank failures," and said that even during those years the corporation would have been able to function.

"My figures are given to establish the stability and the soundness of the corporation and to prove its ability to meet its contract under deposit insurance," O'Connor said.

O'Connor said that in his opinion "the banking acts of 1933-1935 tend more toward stabilization for banking in the country than toward unification."

O'Connor argued that the "man on the streets" was entitled to the same protection on his deposits as public officials.

"Every banker in this nation," said O'Connor, "as long as he has been a banker, has insured deposits.

"Public and state officials took out the banks' best bonds to insure their deposits. It was hard to explain to the man on the streets why he shouldn't have the same protection.

"God knows he needed it," O'Connor said, continuing:

"When he went to borrow bankers wanted to know 'was your property insured?'

"The cost of funds to maintain the FDIC is largely being borne by the large banks and not by the small ones.

"I know a large bank," the comptroller said, "that has one and one-half per cent of its deposits insured. You can't get much lower than that. Yet that bank is required to write a check for a half million dollars.

"You men have had a part in one of the greatest chapters written into the history of banking in America."

VETERANS ORGANIZE NEW ATLANTA GROUP

The United States War Veterans, a new organization of veterans of all wars, with associate members including civilians who served in any national or state official position during war time, with members of the national guard, officers' reserve corps, reserve officers' training corps, graduates of citizens' military training camps and others who are eligible for membership, was organized in Atlanta yesterday, with state headquarters at 25 Pryor street, S. W.

Objects of the society are patriotic and fraternal, and it will advocate interests of all veterans and their widows and orphans, work for adequate national defense, better government and lower taxes in all political subdivisions and will vigorously oppose communism.

The Independent Veteran, published in Atlanta, has been made the official organ of the society.

Self-Diagnosis Is Not the Safe Way to Handle Physical Ailments be SURE ABOUT THOSE PAINS AROUND the Heart

Angina pectoris is described by a well-known medical authority as "any pain within two feet of the heart, which is brought on by exercise or emotion and relieved by rest." Angina pectoris is caused from a diseased condition of the small arteries, which supply the muscles of the heart with blood.

The heart, being chiefly muscle, requires the same constant flow of blood through its tissues, and in much the same way, as the other parts of the body. These small arteries branch many times, and, when healthy, supply plenty of blood to meet any demand of the heart.

When the walls of these arteries become weak through infection or hardening, any undue excitement, emotion or exercise may bring on a sudden contracted condition, that shuts off the blood supply, causing the excruciating pain called "Angina pectoris."

There is no confusion in the mind of a person having Angina as to their having had a violent pain, and they must be relieved at once, or it becomes worse, and it is a very serious matter. Many a person has died with Angina pectoris because a doctor could not get to him in time to administer a speedy, relaxing hypodermic.

If you are subject to pains around the heart, be thoroughly examined. If there is an Angina tendency, your physician may help you overcome the underlying cause, and advise you concerning a regime of living to make you more comfortable.

Should the pains you suspect be from a less serious source, the assurance is certainly worth while to you and your family.

ALLEGED SHOPLIFTER NABBED IN STORE HERE

Attempting to steal a diamond-pointed drill, according to police, Charlie Crowe, 55, Louisville, Ky., was arrested yesterday in the Sears-Roebuck & Company store at 675 Ponce de Leon avenue, N. E., by Special Officer F. K. Langston.

Crowe was held for a hearing Tuesday morning before Recorder John L. Cone, in default of $1,000 bond. He was charged with disorderly conduct, larceny.

According to Lieutenant P. A. McKibben, Crowe's finger-print record revealed he was arrested in April, 1934, in Gallion, Ohio. At that time, six pistols were alleged found in his possession, one of which was identified later as being stolen from a Mechanicsburg (Ohio) man.

The record was not complete, however, McKibben said, and a further check will be made with Ohio authorities.

BOOTLEGGER'S AUTO CRASHES INTO HEARSE

A hearse was badly damaged and 24 gallons of whisky were seized by police yesterday after a negro motorist whom police were chasing jumped out of his car and fled, his car striking the hearse.

The crash occurred at Auburn near Piedmont avenue, N. E. Radio Patrolmen M. B. Johnson and W. C. Patrick were pursuing the man, suspected of being a bootlegger, police said.

When the car neared the intersection, he jumped from the machine, which crashed into the hearse of Murdaugh brothers, parked in front of their establishment at 171 Auburn avenue. The negro then fled on foot.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Herman Black, 68, publisher of the Chicago Evening American for 17 years and since June, 1933, chairman of the board of the Evening American Publishing Company, died early today at his home in suburban Highland Park. He had been ill for several weeks.

Mr. Black was born in Milwaukee July 12, 1867. He started his newspaper career as advertising manager of the Milwaukee Journal, and at the age of 49 came to Chicago at the invitation of William Randolph Hearst.

His widow, Mrs. Stella Apple Black; a daughter, Miss Mary Black, and a son, John H. Back, survive. The son is manager of the Wisconsin News, of Milwaukee.

MRS. GEORGE McCLELLAND.

WILMINGTON, Nov. 9.—(UP)—Funeral plans were being completed today for Mrs. George Orrell McClelland, president of the State Auxiliary of the American Legion, who died at her home here late last night.

Mrs. McClelland died of heart disease, with which she had been afflicted for less than three weeks. She became ill last October 21, the day she was installed as president of the Legion Auxiliary, and grew steadily worse.

She had long been active in affairs of the auxiliary, and was elected president last August 5.

Survivors include her husband, Colonel Royce S. McClelland, commander of the 252d coast artillery; a sister, Mrs. J. P. Wilson, of Warsaw, and three brothers, Thomas R. Orrell and Louis B. Orrell, of Houston, Texas, and Norwood Orrell, of Wilmington.

NEW DEAL CHARGED WITH RELIEF POLITICS

talk instead of duplicating 1932 speechmaking.

Whether he will adhere to this depends on the republican ticket and platform. Plenty can happen between now and June to set the best plans awry. Those in touch with him said another choice between him and former President Hoover would be welcomed.

The attitude of the ex-President toward the nomination still had politicians guessing. Little doubt existed of his determination to exert his titular leadership at least on the platform.

Should strife over the ticket threaten to overshadow principles he deems fundamental, he may speak out more personally in party councils than to date. If it comes to a point where the party can better be united behind him than behind another, friends here would not look for him to shirk.

Just how Mr. Hoover goes about his efforts for party harmony will be watched closely in the months ahead. The democratic organization was shown again in the Farley speech and the Michelson statement tonight to be counting heavily on the AAA as a wedge in the opposition.

Landon's Chances.

Governor Landon's main political asset, wrote Michelson, is that his state might go for him and "he might have a general influence in the corn-hog and grain belt."

Citing Kansas support of the AAA, he said the eastern "old guard" probably would not consider nominating a Kansan unless "convinced he could get nowhere. They might be willing to offer him as a sacrifice on two counts: First, that as they have to have a candidate, it might as well be Landon as another; and second, they have been plagued by the progressive element in their party so long that they see a possible value in demonstrating that a westerner being given the chance only proved there was no salvation in such a choice."

"There is another equally difficult hurdle for Governor Landon," Michelson proceeded. "He campaigned for and won the governorship on the prohibition issue. His slogan was 'Keep Kansas Dry' and his supporters hailed him as the leader of the new crusade for re-establishment of national prohibition. Now that would hardly sit comfortably on the wanton wet east. Fancy New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, not to mention Illinois and Wisconsin, being willing to change their cocktail parlors back to speakeasies."

PEDESTRIAN RECOVERS CACHED BURGLAR LOOT

The loot was recovered about 9 o'clock, about an hour after burglars entered the wholesale establishment through a rear door. A bicycle was also found near the loot.

ATLANTA CEREMONIES FOR ARMISTICE DAY

o'clock at Whitehall and Mitchell streets. It will pass down Whitehall and West Peachtree streets to North avenue, where it will turn for the stadium at Georgia Tech. At Grant field there will be the roar of guns in salute, the blare of bands and addresses on heroism and the dead.

An address of welcome will be made by Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Georgia Tech. Major General George Van Horn Moseley, commander of the fourth corps area, will speak on national defense. In addition to concerts by the drum and bugle corps of the American Legion, there will be a massed band concert under the direction of A. J. Garing, band master of Georgia Tech.

Commander R. A. Garner will call the assembly to attention at 11 o'clock and there will follow two minutes of silent prayer. He asks that guests and trops sit in the west stands.

The Americanism committee of the American Legion asks that when the flag of the United States passes by all boys and men, not in uniform, stand erect, face the parade, remove their hats and hold them over the left breast. All girls and ladies should stand erect and face the parade, provided they are not seated back of the sidelines of the parade.

Airport Program.

At 2 o'clock celebration will begin at the municipal airport, with an address of welcome by Mayor Key. Major Al Williams, flying ace, will take the air at 3 o'clock for the first of his aerial acrobatics. He will do loops, rolls and spins and will describe each of his maneuvers by means of radio.

Before the aviator appears again at 4:30 o'clock, model airplanes will be judged. Jack Gray, airport manager, said yesterday special arrangements had been made for the parking of cars and that Major Williams would appear for the second time in order to give school children ample time to get to the field.

For schools, at their chapel exercises, the American Legion has arranged addresses with an armistice theme. Speakers at the schools include Franklin Chalmers, Girls' High school; J. E. Thrift, Joe Brown Junior High school; J. Walter LeCraw and A. DuFresne, Spring Street; Linton S. James, Frank L. Stanton school; William G. McRae, Formwalt school; John I. Kelley, Jerome Jones school; Marvin G. Russell, David T. Howard Junior High, and J. Emmett Baird, Perkerson school.

Ceremony at Cathedral.

At 10:45 o'clock this morning Major General George Van Horn Moseley and his entire staff will attend the ceremonies for reserve officers and other military units at the Procathedral of St. Philip. Dean Raimundo de Ovies will welcome the assembly and Canon William S. Turner, chaplain of the chapter of the Reserve Officers' Association, will preach.

There will be no sessions of the recorders' courts in this city tomorrow, it was announced yesterday.

The courts presided over by Recorders John L. Cone and A. W. Callaway, which usually hold four sessions daily, will not convene until Tuesday morning, according to the announcement, due to the Armistice Day holiday.

Other Georgia cities will pay reverent tribute to those who served and died in the World War.

Macon participants will parade to the city auditorium to hear Erle Cocke, director of the National Emergency Council for Georgia.

Two state commanders, Ben T. Watkins, of Macon, of the American Legion, and Frank Greene, of Atlanta, heading veterans of foreign wars, will speak twice at Brunswick, once to school children and again to veterans at a barbecue at Blythe Island.

Savannah's Armistice Day will start shortly after dawn when 118th field artillery guns roar out 21-gun salutes on all sides of the city. In Johnson Square, the Armistice address will be made by General W. L. Grayson, past national commander of the United Spanish War Veterans.

Speaker E. D. Rivers, of the state house of representatives, will speak at LaGrange; Fonville McWhorter, of Atlanta, speaks at Milledgeville; Roy V. Harris, of Augusta, appears at Sandersville; B. C. Kitchens, commander of sixth district Legion posts, at Eatonton, and Edgar B. Dunlap, of Gainesville, former state Legion commander, at North Georgia College, Dahlonega.

PULPITS PRAY FOR PEACE ON EVE OF ARMISTICE DAY.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

The blessings of world peace will be beseeched today in thousands of pulpits as religious services opened observance of the seventeenth anniversary of the World War armistice—tomorrow.

The Federal Council of Churches of Christ and many other denominational and nonsectarian groups had urged universal expression of the prayer.

Pastors pointed to the conflict raging in Ethiopia and the still not completely extinguished threat of its spread to other nations as evidence that the lesson of the World War had not been grasped.

"Can we forget the joy of that day (November 11, 1918)?" asked Bishop George Craig Stewart, of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Chicago, in a statement pleading peace's cause.

He said that in spite of the battling in Ethiopia, and perhaps an impending more general conflagration, "the movement for eventual peace which must be established is gaining momentum."

For tomorrow's celebration of the termination of the great conflict in 1918, World War veterans everywhere planned military and memorial gatherings.

In Washington, the traditional honors to the thousands of World War dead included an address by President Roosevelt at Arlington national cemetery. The President was to start his speech at 10:45 a. m. (eastern standard time) and finish at 11 a. m., the hour at which the thunder of the guns on the western front in France was stilled forever.

From Paris the bugler who sounded that call to "cease firing" was to blow again the same bugle in a holiday broadcast at 3:45 p. m. (eastern standard time). Marshal Weygandt, French World War commander, was to speak.

World War days of allied camaraderie will be recalled in New York's celebration of the holiday by the current visit of the British cruiser York.

Rival organizations planned parades in several cities tomorrow. At Tulsa, veterans arranged to honor "the colors" in a procession in opposition to another "without flag waving" which the Christian Youth Council called to minimize "the romantic side of war." Peace rallies by antifascist and communist organizations in Milwaukee and other cities denounced war.

ETHIOPIAN SOLDIERS ARE RUSHED TO FRONT

sitions, only with scouting patrols, however, for the time being.

In their drive on Harar, the armies were still more than 600 miles apart, with Harar in the center.

Before Harar, the Italians had to face a vast defense concentration on the plateau of Dessye, north of Harar and east of Addis Ababa. On the southern front, a defense force at Jijiga guarded the approach to the Ethiopian interior.

The fascisti are also operating due east on the Eritrean border near French Somaliland. Italian cavalry were camped last night around Mount Mussa Ali. The defenders have frequently raided the Italian supply trains in this area. These eastern forces were nearest the strategic points of the Ethiopian interior; but they are smaller in numbers and are faced with the worst desert conditions.

Long Fight Seen.

If, and when, the Italian gain Harar and the intervening territory is occupied and developed—as the Italian engineers have done from Aduwa to Makale—Il Duce's armies will have gained the eastern strip of Haile Selassie's empire and will have linked the provinces of Eritrea and Italian Somaliland.

At the rate the Itallans have progressed so far, this would take months.

The offensive, undoubtedly, was delayed because of peace talks in Europe; but the peace talks have brought only a deadlock and have threatened to continue deadlocked until after the British parliamentary elections November 14.

To avoid straining the relations between Italy and England any further, the government has ordered the fascist-controlled press to end its anti-British propaganda. It has ordered students and others to halt the anti-British demonstrations.

Despite the silence in diplomatic circles, well-informed Italian circles said progress was being made toward a definite Anglo-Italian understanding.

HOUSE OF SAVOY SENDS ANOTHER MEMBER TO FRONT

NAPLES, Italy, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Italy's ruling family, the House of Savoy, sent another of its members tonight to assist in the fascist occupation of Ethiopia.

The Duke of Pistoia, a cousin of King Victor Emmanuel III, sailed on the Sardinia to command the 23rd of March division of blackshirts.

His brother, Prince Adalberto of Savoy, Duke of Bergamo, sailed September 29 from Taranto.

Crown Prince Umberto, General Federico Biastrocchi, Undersecretary of war, and members of the general staff escorted the Duke of Pistoia to his transport. The ship carried 2,700 soldiers and 300 officers of the first of February blackshirt division.

KING GEORGE APPROVES IMPOSITION OF SANCTIONS

LONDON, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Imposition of sanctions against Italy was formally approved today by King George.

As the king, at a meeting of the privy council, gave his approval, it was stated in British quarters that new orders-in-council probably will be forthcoming because of modifications recently agreed to at Geneva.

It was stated the new orders would exempt from the boycott goods purchased from Italy for which full payment was made before October 19; exempt printed matter such as books, maps, music and newspapers, and authorize the establishment of a clearing house to collect debts due British dealers from Italy.

Some British circles understood there would soon be further conversations between Premier Mussolini and Sir Eric Drummond, British ambassador to Italy.

done in precipitous mountains familiar to the Ethiopians.

Capture War Supplies.

Communique No. 41, issued today, said that General Emilio De Bono had advised that his second army corps had sent a detachment exploring between Aksum and the Takkase river, encountering and defeating several bands of warriors.

"Fitaurari Gabre Mendin presented himself to the military authorities at Selaclaca with his group of armed men and placed himself under the orders of the command of our column," the communique quoted De Bono.

"The leaders, notables and clergy of the region of Adiet submitted," it continued. "In the eastern lowlands the Danakil column continued its advance and reached Damale.

"The enemy fled, abandoning in their wake cannon, machine guns, hundreds of rifles, motor lorries and an abundance of materials and foodstuffs. Or soldiers are pursuing the enemy despite the fact that the Fanfan river is swollen to torrent."

General De Bono praised the work of the air corps in aiding in all the operations.

U. OF ALABAMA HEAD IS URGED TO CONTINUE

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Nov. 9.—(UP)—A resolution urging Dr. George H. Denny to continue as president of the University of Alabama was adopted by the school's board of trustees in its annual session here today.

A reliable source said President Denny did not tender his resignation but details of the meeting were not made public.

COLLEGE ASSOCIATION RAPPED BY AUGUSTAN

AUGUSTA, Ga., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Chairman Ferdinand Phinizy, of the finance committee of the Richmond (Augusta) county board of education, today characterized as a "teachers' racket" a part of the activities of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary schools.

The remarks were made during discussion of a need for adding 12 additional rooms to the Richmond County Academy, boys' high school.

Phinizy told the board the requirements of the association were a handicap in endeavoring to meet economies necessary throughout most systems in the south.

The academy has been put on the "warned list" because the enrollment per teacher exceeds standards set up by the association.

The board of education voted to send to the association convention Mrs. Ben E. Lester, a member, to represent the "taxpaying end" of the system along with J. L. Skinner, president of the junior college of Augusta.

30 PCT. HOG INCREASE URGED BY AAA GROUP

Prompt Approval of Recommendation by Chester Davis Expected.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—(UP)—The AAA today announced its advisory committee of farmers and state agricultural specialists had recommended an increase of approximately 30 per cent in hog production for the 1936 corn-hog program.

The committee of about 40 which has been studying details of the new corn-hog section and the report is expected to receive prompt approval by Administrator Chester C. Davis.

The new contracts to be offered for 1936 and 1937 would permit signers to produce 100 per cent of their base hog production, under the recommendations.

AAA officials estimated this would result in a 30 per cent increase in pig production in 1936 and an increase in federally inspected slaughter of from seven to nine million head in 1936-37 over the slaughter expected in the present year, which began October 1.

Such production would be about 20 per cent under the annual average production in 1932-33. The AAA pointed out that, although hog production in 1935 was limited to 90 per cent of the 1932-33 base, none of the major hog-producing states attained the maximum.

The recommended hog adjustment payment was $2.50 for each hog up to 50 per cent of each signer's base. Under this provision the farmer with a base of 100 hogs would receive $125 providing he raised a minimum of 50, but would be allowed no increase if he were to raise the maximum.

GEORGIA'S RECOVERY COSTING $336,500,000

said, "these have been reduced in excess of 75 per cent and by November 15, it is anticipated that the balance of those on relief rolls will be working on WPA or other works projects."

The detailed figures disclose loans by the various agencies, such as the Community Credit Corporation, the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, the Federal Housing Administration and the Federal Land Bank, totaled $195,983,165, of which $137,911,730 has been paid back; leaving a balance owed to the government of $58,071,435.

Direct Assistance.

The emergency relief organizations—the CWA, GERA and FERA have expended $63,300,000 for direct assistance during their activity.

The PWA spending has reached $7,650,000, the Civilian Conservation Corps $13,500,000, the Bureau of Public Roads $14,800,000; the Forestry Service $1,750,000, the National Park Service $1,000,000 and the Agricultural Adjustment Administration $28,382,000, both for direct benefits and cotton options.

The War Department and other agencies have spent $10,000,000 and the works program, exclusive of the Civilian Conservation Corps and the Resettlement Administration, $1,700,000.

The figure on direct benefits through the AAA are as of September 1, 1935, since figures since that time are unavailable.

"The above funds," Cocke in explaining a recapitulation tables which accompanied his figures, "represent only expenditures directly incidental to the recovery program and of course, do not include the millions of dollars expended by the federal government during this period through regular appropriations and channels for construction and pay rolls, such as the War Department, Department of Commerce, Department of Agriculture, Department of Labor, etc., nor do the above figures, except in the case of the CWA, GERA and FERA and works program, include administrative pay rolls of those charged with carrying out the work.

List of Benefits.

"A partial list of the benefits derived by the people of Georgia from loans, will include:

"Under the Home Owners' Loan Corporation 14,693 homes were saved from foreclosure in every county in Georgia (except two) and over $2,000,000 back taxes were paid into these counties as a result of the loans, creating approximately 30,000 jobs for repairing such house.

"Loans made by the land bank commissioner and the Federal Land Bank under the Farm Credit Administration resulted in the saving of approximately 20,500 farms probable foreclosure.

"As a result of the loans made by the Production Credit Corporation, Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation and Federal Seed and Feed Loan office, the farmers of Georgia were enabled to carry on and operate over 135,000 crop farms during this period.

"As a result of the federal housing program $18,800,000 in dollar value of modernization and repairs to homes have been created, making available 32,510 jobs for people in Georgia.

"Likewise should be noticed the $140,600,000 emergency funds spent, a large portion of which represents expenditures under the CWA, GERA and FERA programs. Special attention should be called to the fact that the people who were afforded relief have actually given back to their communities with the same money with which they have been relieved, as much as they have received in dollars through construction of various projects in carrying out the numerous programs distributed over practically every community in the state."

566 Projects Under Way.

At the present time, Cocke said, under the Emergency Relief Act of 1935, now commonly known as the "works program," 566 projects are under way in practically every Georgia county covering the building of schoolhouses, athletic stadiums, waterworks, sewers, airports, municipal buildings, community houses, swimming pools, gymnasiums, etc., and are giving employment to more than 30,000 persons on relief rolls.

He said allotments for 700 additional projects were made available the first fo the month which are getting started employing thousands of additional workers. Approximately 2,000 college students and 4,000 high school pupils are receiving assistance from the National Youth Administration operating under the works program.

Cocke said there are approximately 13,700 enrollers in CCC camps throughout Georgia who are receiving assistance, as are about 13,500 farmers who are being rehabilitated and given a new start in life by the Resettlement Administration, practically all of whom were formerly on relief rolls.

WOMEN WILL SELL POPPIES TUESDAY

Annual Drive of Legion Auxiliary Will Benefit Disabled Veterans.

Several hundred women of the American Legion auxiliary, assisted by many members of civic and patriotic organizations, will sell poppies on the streets of Atlanta Tuesday for the benefit of disabled veterans and their families. Mrs. Arthur Hazzard will direct the corps of workers.

An appeal for a wide sale of poppies came yesterday from Commander Robert A. Garner, of Atlanta Post No. 1, of the American Legion.

"Our relief fund is made possible each year by the sale of poppies, and every dollar derived from their sale in Atlanta is spent to aid ex-servicemen and their families," he said. "The need is more urgent this year than ever before. I hope Atlantans will co-operate with our efforts."

Poppies are made by veterans in hospitals. One cent is paid the veteran for every poppy he makes.

ATLANTA WOMAN DIES IN AUTOMOBILE CRASH

Rice street, N. W., overturned several times.

Lights on a curb momentarily blinded the driver, according to police, and he lost control of the machine. The driver was unhurt, but his passengers, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Ingram, 24, 593 Simmons street, N. W.; Miss Elsie Wade, 17, 207 Mills street, N. W., and James Hughes, 19, 1006 Marietta street, N. W., were injured.

Ingram suffered a broken shoulder, and Hughes suffered internal injuries. The others were cut and bruised and shocked. All were treated at Grady hospital. Hughes was admitted, while the others were discharged after treatment.

Students Aid Drive.

The Bass students plan to obtain the names of their friends and parents on safe driving pledges, which contain the seven simple rules which, if followed, will save hundreds of lives annually in the state.

Troop 93, Boy Scouts of America, an organization of young negro boys, yesterday turned in 137 signed pledges and then took with them more than 100 additional pledges, which they expect to have signed this week.

The Rev. James E. W. Stewart, scoutmaster of the troop, said much interest is being shown by the boys in The Constitution's safety campaign.

Plans were also being made yesterday in several Georgia cities by various civic groups to follow the example of the Decatur Lions Club, which Friday outlined a complete safety-education program for that city.

The Lions are cooperating wholeheartedly with the Safety Council of The Constitution, and have announced they intend to teach Decatur residents safety in driving, in their homes, in their schools, and on the streets.

Officers agree that the seven rules will prevent the horrible sights they witness so often, of flesh torn and burned in twisted masses of metal which a moment before were ablebodied persons riding in comfortable automobiles.

Many accidents are caused by persons who do not know the ordinary traffic signals. Do you know them Look at the illustration carried with this article and memorize the proper signal. It might save your life some day, or perhaps tomorrow.

In another section of The Constitution is carried the safe driving pledge and the rules which will reduce the number of deaths and injuries in Georgia this year. Sign it and return it to The Constitution Safety Council at once.

PRESIDENT IS TOLD FARMERS PAYING DEBTS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—(AP)—A report that farmers are paying their debts was given to President Roosevelt today by W. I. Myers, governor of the Farm Credit Administration.

About 83 per cent of total interest payments due were paid up on October 30," Myers said after seeing the President. "While repayment of principals are not due in many cases for some time, we have received $11,000,000 in payments on principals."

The Farm Credit Administration said this is "the acid test of an improvement in agriculture."

FEDERAL JOB PROGRAM ONLY HALF FULFILLED

1,737,610 Working Compared to 3½ Million Planned; Pace Spurred.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—(AP)—With the administration still short of the half-way mark in its drive to provide 3,500,000 jobs, figures made public today showed it must double its recently accelerated work relief pace to meet the December 1 goal.

Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator, said the number put to work in the week ending November 2 totaled 194,425, compared with 121,715 in the preceding week.

The total given jobs in place of direct relief November 2, however, was only 1,737,610, in contrast with the original plan to have the entire 3,500,000 employables at work a day earlier.

If the new December 1 goal is attained, 1,762,390 jobs remained to be provided in the four weeks beginning November 2, weekly average of 440,597.

Hopkins nevertheless expressed renewed confidence that the program would succeed. Simultaneously he cut four additional states—Ohio, South Carolina, Mississippi and Connecticut—off direct relief.

Issue Reclouded.

What this actually meant, however, became uncertain when he declined to say how much he had simultaneously allotted these states to supplement earlier November grants. Ohio already had received $2,084,000; South Carolina, $349,688; Mississippi, $442,580; Connecticut, $401,500.

Most of the 13 other states similarly cut off direct relief received supplementary allotments. Hopkins said only that "the allotments have ended for the 17 states because works program employment is either well enough along, or will be soon, to take care of employables transferred from the relief rolls, and also the needs of unemployables are provided for by states and their localities."

Hopkins' employment report indicated that WPA may have to supply about 2,750,000 jobs if the December 1 objective is reached.

Other federal agencies were taking care of 174,685, an increase of only 2,656 in the week ending November 2, while the Civilian Conservation Corps showed a 26,697 decline to 555,717.

The WPA, providing employment for the first time in Iowa and Maine, boosted its total in the week by 219,666 jobs to 1,007,208.

New Profits Approved.

Comptroller-General J. R. McCarl meanwhile gave WPA another boost by approving an additional $167,010,853 worth of projects. This raised the total of approved projects, available for selection for WPA state administrators to $3,097,347,250. Release of $4,684,349 in WPA allotments made $1,023,785,632 available for expenditure.

Among states for which projects were approved was Arizona, which so far has no WPA employment. The total actually employed in the work relief program declined during the week in that state, the District of Columbia, Idaho, Massachusetts and Montana.

In all except Arizona, the lag by other agencies accounted for these declines, and talk was renewed in some quarters of new cancellations to increase WPA's present earmarking of $1,250,000,000.

To date continuance of direct relief has cost more than $350,000,000 above the $880,000,000 first estimated. In addition, many activities of the old relief administration, such as transient aid, help for college students, and emergency education, will simply be continued under the name of WPA projects.

The first public indication that the program would not reach its 3,500,000-job goal by November 1 came from President Roosevelt. Although Hopkins insisted at the time that this schedule would be maintained, he later acknowledged that not more than 3,150,000 would be at work by the end of October. Today's figures showed the program was 1,412,390 jobs short of his reduced objective.

Employed in South.

Following are the work relief employment figures in southern states; The second figure, which is included in the first, showing WPA employment—

Alabama 47,932 and 36,181; Arkansas, 38,108 and 23,082; Florida, 40,657 and 23,190; Georgia, 47,082 and 27,254; Kentucky 33,040 and 18,642; Louisiana, 24,881 and 14,022; Maryland, 10,733 and 4,763; Mississippi, 25,330 and 10,731; Missouri, 28,009 and 5,645; North Carolina, 25,978 and 9,221; South Carolina, 26,011 and 11,154; Tennessee, 29,853 and 14,256; Texas, 46,702 and 10,788; Virginia, 27,091 and 11,867.

S. C. MERGES 2 OFFICES IN ROAD FUND BATTLE

Move Is Included in Application for '36-'37 Highway Appropriations.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Governor Olin Johnston announced today that the office of chief highway commissioner was being merged with that of secretary-treasurer in a request for 1936-37 highway appropriations.

The move would combine the posts formerly held by Ben M. Sawyer, chief commissioner, who was a special target for the executive criticism of the ousted road regime, and O. P. Bourke, secretary and treasurer of the highway department.

Johnston said Joe Calus, new executive manager of the department, was including the change in a request to the state budget commission under which highway administrative costs would be cut "about 12 per cent."

The Governor added that economies in all phases of highway affairs were estimated to "save the people about $400,000 a year."

Other developments during the day in the fast-moving sequence of events since the Governor seized control of the road department by a military coup included:

(1) Payment of $1,326 in compensation and partial maintenance cost of troops from October 28 through November 7.

(2) Sending of instructions to highway field agents to turn in all available motor vehicle license receipts in cash since banking and postofice money order facilities were closed temporarily to the road administration.

(3) Withholding of federal aid contracts for $200,000 in construction let November 5 while the Governor conferred with Dr. Charles H. Moorefield, federal district engineer, after Washington had announced that no further federal aid would be approved for the present.

CHURCHES TO OPEN CHEST CAMPAIGN

Peachtree Christian church, president of the Evangelical Ministers' Association, and chairman of the Committee on Church Contact of the Community Chest campaign, declared that the idea of the interdenominational meeting of the church people of Atlanta would emphasize the unity that is fundamental in the Chest.

"Anything that will focus attention on the great work of the Community Chest is a splendid thing," Dr. Burns said, "and this great meeting will bring Atlanta together in a way nothing else can do.

"The ministers of Atlanta are absolutely with the Chest. They know the details of the work of caring for the needy, the work of building and ministering that goes on day in and day out, meeting human needs in their own community.

"They know that if Atlanta people ever understand the things the Chest does every day for the unfortunate there would be no question of failure in this campaign."

Dr. W. A. Shelton, pastor of the Glenn Memorial church and president of the Atlanta Christian Council, gave his enthusiastic support to the rally.

"Atlanta must put over this campaign," Dr. Shelton said, "and whatever the churches can do to help will be done. This idea of a great meeting to assemble the people of our community to catch the spirit of the Community Chest is one of the finest things that has come out of the Chest movement in the 12 years it has been in Atlanta."

Dr. Stuart Oglesby, pastor of the Central Presbyterian church, said:

"The members of the churches of Atlanta always stand solidly behind the Chest. This year they realize it is more important than ever before for us to reach our goal of caring for our needy neighbors.

"This meeting at the First Baptist church is a tremendous unifying force for the churches of Atlanta. It will accomplish a great deal in arousing sentiment for the Community Chest."

Dr. Herman L. Turner, pastor of the Covenant Presbyterian church and vice president of the Community Crest, said the meeting was a golden opportunity for the churches to break down lines of denomination and creed and get solidly behind a movement for the benefit of the whole community.

MARYLAND MAN KILLED IN BASEMENT OF HOME

FREDERICK, Md., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Manuel Silva, 40-year-old ships carpenter, was killed in the cellar of his home at Doub, near here, his body taken to Montgomery county and dumped beside the road, Sheriff Roy M. Hiltner said tonight.

The man's badly charred body was found near Rockville today. His automobile was located two miles away. No motive was apparent.

Sheriff Hiltner said it was clear that Silva had been killed in the cellar of his home. Blood stains were found there and there were signs that a terrific struggle had taken place. Bits of flesh also were found in the cellar.

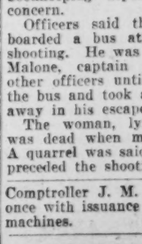

SHOT IN BACK KILLS NEW ORLEANS WOMAN

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 9.—(AP)—A woman, Miss May Saucier, 26, was shot dead in the street here today. She was shot four times in the back and killed almost instantly by a man, whom police suspected of being her sweetheart.

Police trailed the man, about 40 years old. Both Miss Saucier and the suspect were employed in the bookkeeping department of a local concern.

Officers said the woman's slayer boarded a bus at the scene of the shooting. He was followed by Alfred Malone, captain of detectives and other officers until he alighted from the bus and took a taxicab and sped away in his escape.

The woman, lying in the street, was dead when medical aid arrived. A quarrel was said by police to have preceded the shooting.

GREAT MOTORCADE TO LEAVE FRIDAY

talk of the motorcade. All the leading citizens are members of the various committees assigned to different duties to make the day a huge success. There will be two bands, the Atlanta firemen's band the band of the 122d Infantry, national guard, to provide music and a committee of Dublin's loveliest young ladies will serve the barbecue and act as the city's official hostesses.

From Dublin the route proceeds through Swainsboro, Statesboro and other cities to Savannah, where the trail will officially end at the Hotel DeSoto, headquarters for the 'caders there.

"It is a pleasure to tell you of the genuine enthusiasm the entire city of Savannah is displaying over the approaching motorcade," writes Andrew H. Smith, manager of the Hotel Savannah and president of the Georgia Hotel Association. "Savannah residents are expecting the largest throng ever to take part in a motorcade in this state and are preparing to give the participants a real Savannah welcome."

The Savannah program covers Friday night, after the arrival late in the afternoon, Saturday and Saturday night.

There will be a buffet supper at the DeSoto Friday, a grand ball and street dances in the evening, with music by some of the greatest bands and orchestras in south Georgia.

Special programs of cabaret entertainment have been arranged in the Dancing Tavern, the DeSoto's famous night club, and also in the equally popular night resort of the Hotel Savannah.

On Saturday the motorcade will reform for a tour of points of interest, with an oyster roast and shore dinner at noon at the country club. Entertainment will feature a boxing card in the club auditorium.

Saturday night's program will repeat the dances and night club offerings of Friday.

The motorcade is sponsored by The Constitution, the Savannah Morning News and the Macon Telegraph.

Registration, which should be made as early as possible in order to assure a place in line, should be sent either to the motorcade office on the sixth floor of The Constitution building, to the Atlanta Motor Club office at the Biltmore hotel or to the mayor or chairman of the motorcade committee of any of the cities on the 280-mile route.

Many Distinguished Guests.

The Atlanta Firemen's Band will accompany the motorcade, while a detachment of Atlanta motorcycle police and a group of motorcycle men of the Georgia national guard will direct the actual running of the motorcade, set the pace and assist the local officers in each city and town in handling the emergency traffic situation.

Among the distinguished guests who have already reserved places for their cars in the motorcade are:

Mayor Key, Atlanta; Congressman Hugh Peterson, Ailey; Congressman Carl Vinson, Milledgeville; Mayor Len C. Baldwin, Marietta; Chief O. J. Parker, Atlanta fire department; Tom Wisdom, state auditor; John B. Spivey, legislator, Swainsboro; Joe S. Burgin, legislator, Buena Vista; Belmont Dennis, editor, Covington News; M. D. Jefferson, mayor of Chatsworth; Raleigh Drennon, city councilman; Lloyd A. Walker, city purchasing agent; Hal Stanley, state commissioner of labor; E. G. Weathers, legislator, Millen; Dr. R. C. Coleman, state board of examiners; Colonel J. M. Wilkerson, governor's staff; J. C. Beasely, state senator, Glennville; J. D. Kirkland, state senator, Metter; M. J. Yoemans, attorney-general of Georgia; E. E. Lindsey, chairman state board of control; Mayor J. J. Cooper, Cedartown; Mayor J. L. Renfroe, Statesboro; Mayor Ernest M. Smith, McDonough; Judge Max L. Atlanta Motorcycle Police Who Will Assist in Directing Motorcade

A fleet of Atlanta motorcycle policemen, headed by Lieutenant Reggie McLean, will join with National Guard motorcycle men in pacing the great motorcade to Savannah Friday when leading citizens of Georgia will dedicate the new all-paved route from Atlanta to the sea. The 'cade is being sponsored by The Atlanta Constitution, the Macon Telegraph and the Savannah Morning News. The men shown are, left to right, M. L. Thomas, C. A. Cook, P. E. Edwards, Lieutenant R. H. McLean, T. M. Parker, Herman Clay and H. B. Creecy. Staff photo.

FINAL DETAILS WORKED OUT AT TOWNS ALONG ROUTE

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 9.—Final details for the largest and most lavishly entertained motorcade ever held in Georgia were worked out at a meeting here today.

Representatives of The Constitution, Macon Telegraph, Savannah News, Macon Chamber of Commerce, Atlanta Motor Club, the City of Savannah, made a final trip over the 280 miles ribbon of concrete and were enthusiastically received by city and county officials in all towns en route.

Jackson, Jeffersonville and Swainsboro have requested special stops so they may distribute drinks, cigars, cigarets, etc., to the motorcaders.

Traffic regulations were discussed and special arrangements were made in all towns to insure safety and comfort to all participants in this spectacular state-wide celebration.

From 10 to 30 cars will join the huge caravan at each of the towns on the highway.

Gas To Be Delivered.

Due to the great number of cars that will be in line when the cade arrives at Dublin, Mayor M. A. Chapman has arranged as a new and special service to have gasoline delivered to the cars while they are parked during the lunch hour. This will avoid the breaking up of the procession to secure gas from filling stations, Mayor Chapman told the committee today.

Arrangements for entertaining the motorcade are nearing completion at Dublin. Citizens of Dublin and Laurens county are co-operating toward making the day a success.

Miss Earnestine Adams, popular young Dublin lady, will head the committee on hospitality. Mrs. W. W. Ward, past worthy grand matron of the Order of Eastern Star of Georgia, will head the hostess committee and W. H. Lovett former state senator from this district and prominent Dublin businessman, will head the host committee. The number of people who will serve on the various committees will total about 400 and the objective of each one of these will be to make the motorcaders' visit to Dublin something to be long remembered.

Barbecue, Laurens county style, will be served by an experienced committee headed by W. H. Shuman. The usual accompaniments and probably some unusual ones will be served along with this and it is recommended that all motorcaders be present for this luncheon.

Special invitations have been issued by the city of Dublin to the following mayors of surrounding towns to participate in the event: W. M. Allen, Allentown; H. G. Burch, Cadwell; W. G. Linder, Danville; R. L. Hogan, Dudley; H. B. Hatcher, Wrightsville; H. N. Baker, Irwinton; W. M. Whitehurst, Jeffersonville; W. G. Thompson, Montrose; J. A. Davidson, Rentz; T. W. Cullens, Soperton; Thomas Gamble, Savannah, and others.

CHINA CLIPPER ENDS FIRST STAGE OF HOP

ALAMEDA, Cal., Nov. 9.—(AP)—A new queen, 62 tons gross, came to the Pacific air lanes today when the China Clipper headed up the Mexican coast for San Diego, en route here to start trans-oceanic service between California and the orient.

Leaving Acapulco, Mexico, at 6:25 a. m., central standard time, the big Pan-American Airways liner hummed northward with her four 800-horsepower motors at nearly full throttle, her San Diego arrival time was set tentatively for 7 p. m. (C. S. T.)

San Diego is the China Clipper's next-to-last stop on a wide swing from Miami, Fla., to her base on San Francisco bay.

The Clipper made a 50-second ascent from the waters of Acapulco's mountain-bound harbor. Her massive motors lifted the streamlined ship's 62-ton burden—25 tons of plane, 12 of gasoline and 25 of load—without any show of effort.

After two weeks of inspections and premilinaries, the Clipper will depart November 22 on her initial flight to Manila—first of what will eventually become routine trans-Pacific hops.

Mail alone will be carried on the first five trips. After that, regular passenger and cargo service will be inaugurated.

Police Arrest Five Girls, Bust Up Nude Show for Famous New Yorkers

By FRED MYERS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—(UP)—Representatives of 800 top flight members of the country's artistic and professional circles hunted today for Jeanette Rice, a woman with no sense of humor nor taste for art.

Miss Rice, address and station of life unknown, thought that for 60 girls to parade nude and nearly nude before 800 men was "lewd and indecent." She complained to police that such was being done last night at the thirtieth annual benefit show of the Society of Illustrators in the theater of the Heckscher Foundation for Children.

Police raided the theater and arrested five young women who had to borrow overcoats from members of the audience before they could brave a chill night in a patrol wagon. The police "advised" members of the audience to "leave quietly."

It was said on high authority that three city magistrates were there, too.

In the cast assisting the girls were McClelland Barclay and John La Gatta, illustrators; Soglow, Worthman and Haenigsen.

A patrolman who had stood in front of the theater throughout the show said:

"Them plainclothes guys have lots of nerve. I wouldn't of raided that place for a million!"

The curtain just had fallen on the eighth act of a 16-act show when Lieutenant Harry Lavin skipped up the stage steps and flagged the audience to silence with a gold-braided cap.

"I am a police officer," he shouted. "This show is stopped. It is an indecent show and we have seized the girls. I advise all you gentlemen to leave quietly."

The audience applauded violently.

"I mean it," Lavin insisted doggedly. "We've pinched the show and it's all over."

It took him 10 minutes to convince the tuxedoed and swallow-tailed men in front of him that he was not part of the show. Many of them didn't believe until they saw five girls, wrapped in men's overcoats and tears, being hustled to a patrol wagon. Lavin said he picked those five from the 60 girls backstage "because they didn't have a stitch of clothing on them."

A. J. Powers, president of the Powers Production Corporation, and Herbert Bayard Swope led a rush of the audience to the succor of the girls but were pushed away by Lavin's men. More than 100 men followed the patrol wagon to a police station and damned policemen until the booking sergeant couldn't hear the girls sob their names. They finally wrote them on the book themselves:

Inez Kaegertsen, 24, a stenographer; Collette Nicks, 23, model; Robbie Senton, 22, dancer; Sarilla Bell, 27, model, and Marian Faist, student.

The gallants with them posted $50 bond for each. They will appear in Harlem court Thursday.

The raid didn't stop the party, which is given for the benefit of indigent artists annually, although it prevented presentation of some of the most promising tableaux of the show. The program revealed that the last eight acts would have offered "lewder and funnier, a revealing exposition of the forma divinia, by, with and of Otto Soglow," and "Polly Adler's house, an emergency relief measure."

Some of the acts that scandalized the unknown Miss Rice and Lieutenant Lavin in the first half of the show were prepared by Rube Goldberg, Gladys Parker, Wallace Morgan and Walter Klett. One scene, offering dialog between a girl in confidential mood and her doctor, made dashing use of a life-size anatomical chart.

Cooper, who produced the show, said he thought some "snooping, disgruntled" person obtained a ticket by misrepresentation to make a complaint possible. Police would tell nothing of the complainant except her name.

The producer hinted that maybe one of the wives who were permitted to attend a Thursday dress rehearsal was responsible.

"The show was risque," he said, "without any doubt. But it wasn't indecent. It has been staged privately for 30 years and no one ever got fresh with a girl or made a bawdy remark. The girls are the finest I know and all from good families."

He said he thought the girls "probably will not have to appear in court."

"I think the police will realize they got a bull by the tail," he said.

WOMEN LAUNCH DRIVE FOR MORE JUDGES

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—(AP)—The National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs today launched a drive for the appointment of more women to judicial posts.

Announcement of the campaign was made by the organization's president, Miss Charl Ormond Williams, who appealed to bar associations to "recommend a greater number of equipped, qualified women lawyers for judicial posts."

Coincident with the drive, the federation released an "honor roll" of women judges, including:

Florence E. Allen, only woman justice of the United States circuit court of appeals, appointed March, 1934; Genevieve Cline, judge of United States customs court of New York, first woman appointed a federal judge, 1928; Edith M. Atkinson, Miami juvenile judge; Judge Camille Kelley, Memphis, Tenn., juvenile court; Judge Virginia H. Mayfield, Birmingham, Ala.

time. This was two hours before Melrose saw it.

Plane May Be Afloat.

Melrose and two bombing planes of the Royal Air Force left at dawn for Victoria Point, 700 miles from here on the southern tip of Burma. They planned to operate from the point.

In all, 37 planes of the Royal Air Force were detailed to the search. The 10,850-ton aircraft carrier Hermes was ordered to get up steam and prepare to leave to join other craft now engaged in the hunt.

In discussing chances for the lost pair to pull through, airmen here pointed to Kingsford-Smith's widely recognized ingenuity and daring.

They said his plane, if it landed safely on the sea, might float for three days. They considered that he might have landed on one of the many desolate islands off the coast. In that case he might not be heard from for days since means of communication are lacking.

Hope that Kingsford-Smith would be able to keep his plane afloat three days if he landed it safely on the water was based on the fact that he carried a special set of shears designed to cut bolts and thereby jettison the engine.

EX-CONVICT ARRESTED IN SLAYING OF TROOPER

New Jersey Trooper Is Killed By Point-Blank Shotgun Blast in Face

ELIZABETH, N. J., Nov. 9.—(AP)—An ex-convict with a long police record was held on suspicion of murder tonight by authorities investigating the highway slaying of State Trooper Warren G. Yenser.

The prisoner, identified by police as Edward Witowski, alias Metelski, 26, of Newark, was arrested two hours after the 28-year-old trooper was killed by a shotgun blast fired by one of two occupants of a speeding automobile.

Witowski steadfastly denied any connection with the shooting, but his first statement that he slept at home last night was declared untrue, police said, by his mother.

Detective Michael Mottley, who went to Newark to check on Witowski's story, quoted the prisoner's mother as saying she had not seen Witowski in two or three years.

Definitely Linked.

After several hours' questioning, Witowski was placed in a cell while police investigated other angles of his story.

"We definitely link Metelski as one of the participants in the shooting," Acting Police Chief Frank Brennan said.

Patrolman Alexander Geiger arrested the man at the Pennsylvania railroad station after noticing his shoes and clothes were muddy and that briars were stuck to his clothing. A railroad ticket to Philadelphia was found in his pocket.

The arrest followed the finding of the blood-stained car irom which the fatal shot had been fired. It had been abandoned in the Elizabethport section of the city, after a second gun battle with radio policemen.

The car carried Pennsylvania license plates. Philadelphia police learned it had been stolen in Philadelphia last night. Police sought to obtain fingerprints of its occupants from the steering wheel and body.

Fired Into Face.

Yenser, a member of the state police force for five years, and Trooper John Matey were patrolling the Brunswick pike, between New Brunswick and Princeton at dawn when the auto sped by in the direction of Elizabeth.

The troopers gave chase, with Matey at the wheel and Yenser on the running board, and overtook the fleeing machine. One of the men raised a sawed-off shotgun and fired point blank at Yenser. The charge of leaden slugs struck him full in the face.

Matey pulled Yenser into the car and fired several shots at the other auto. He continued the chase then drove to General hospital. Yenser was dead on arrival.

Later, two radio patrolmen spotted the fugitive car on First street and began another pursuit. Several shots were exchanged. The men abandoned their auto and fled.

Georgia Shows Big Gain in Construction and Industrial Activity

OUTSIDE CAPITAL IS BEING INVESTED IN MANY PLANTS

Manufacturers' Record Construction Editor Says Building in South Gains 110 Per Cent.

By CARROLL E. WILLIAMS,
Construction News Editor,
Manufacturers' Record.

Southern construction activity in the first 10 months of 1935 is featured by a more than 110 per cent gain in privately financed building operations, compared with the same period of 1934, the totals being, respectively, $60,275,000 and $27,531,000. Industrial expansion plays an increasingly important part in swelling the construction volume in the southern states, strikingly revealed by considering the gain of more than 38 per cent in the valuation of awards in the first 10 months of this year, compared with the total for the like period of the preceding year, $86,050,000, and $62,255,000, respectively.

Total awards to November 1 for construction, engineering and building work of all classes of $441,420,000, compared with $422,157,000 for the corresponding period of the preceding year, representing a gain of about 5 per cent.

And Georgia is among the states that lead the south in a revival of industrial and construction activity. The gains during this year have been substantial; the outlook for further extension of the gains is bright.

$4,000,000 Savannah Plant.

The major industrial development enterprise now under way in Georgia and one of the largest of the 1935 projects for the entire south, is the $4,000,000 plant for the Union Bag & Paper Corporation, of New York city, at Savannah. The decision to build the plant at Savannah was made only after an intensive survey of sites along the Atlantic seaboard. This project is a typical illustration of what diversification means, for not only will employment be provided directly for some 900 persons, but an additional 500 will be engaged in the woods. Moreover, it will purchase, largely from farm owners, pine wood in a single year that will put $300,000 into the pockets of Georgia rural woodland owners.

It is not a far stretch of the imagination to look forward to the time when timber-growing will take its proper place among farm crops. This portends further diversification, for the poor grades of wood will be utilized in the making of pulp and paper, while the better grades will be turned into lumber, and finally into finished products in wood-working establishments.

The manner in which modernization of industrial plants has gone forward of late is illustrated by the expenditure of a large sum for improving power plant facilities at the Savannah Sugar Refining Corporation's factory.

Lock and Dam Built.

Looking ahead to the time when production of manufacturing establishments and the movement of products of mines, forests, and farms will be under way in volume, construction is proceeding on a $1,500,000 lock and dam at Savannah bluff, the first step in deepening the channel from Augusta to Savannah. The project is scheduled for completion by the end of next year.

Communities that figure in the waterworks expansion activities include Elberton, Davisboro, Gordon, Gray, Milan, Screven, Woodland, Athens, Augusta, Elberton, Omega, Thunderbolt, Savannah; Dublin, Decatur, Hamilton, Dalton, Roswell, Darien, Rome, Forsyth, St. Mary's, Ringgold, and Cleveland.

Sewer improvement projects under way and proposed are located in Dalton, Washington, Atlanta, Monticello, Griffin, Savannah, Rome, Cleveland, Hapeville, Chatsworth, etc.

Among the power developments under way and proposed are projects at Brunswick, Bainbridge, Milledgeville, Savannah, etc.

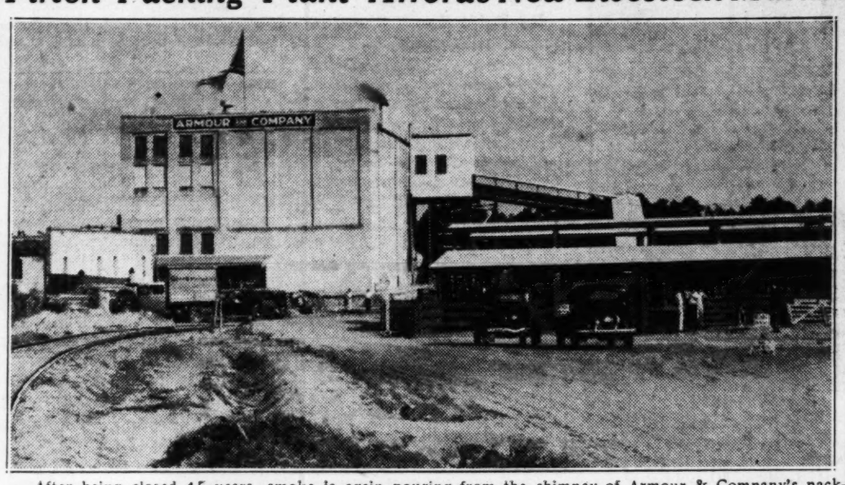

A diversity of miscellaneous enterprises make up recently incorporated companies formed in Georgia. Local and outside capitalists are making investments in these enterprises. Employing from five to four hundred persons each, such enterprises turn out a wide variety of products for near-by and nation-wide consumption. Included are canning and meat packing plants, bottling establishments, pharmaceuticals, dairies and creameries, peanut shelling and storage houses, machinery, breweries, garment factories and textile mills at scattered points through the state.

The extension of power lines to rural areas, which is under way now on a major scale, promises not only to take the drudgery out of farm housewives' work, but will supplement manpower on the farm with horsepower via wires, thereby increasing production efficiency and in a measure making up for the lack of farm help.

Availability of power systems in rural areas is fostering, too, the establishment in agricultural communities of numerous small industries to turn out a diversity of products. These plants oftentimes consume in the manufacture of finished products commodities which farmers market for cash.

So it is that through the south as a whole and Georgia in particular diversification—agricultural and industrial—go hand in hand.

Tifton Packing Plant Affords New Livestock Market

After being closed 15 years, smoke is again pouring from the chimney of Armour & Company's packing plant at Tifton, which means that a new market for hogs and cattle grown by the farmers in that section, has been provided. The firm has spent $200,000 reconditioning the plant, which is capable of processing several hundred animals a day. Pens have been built to care for the livestock purchased daily from the growers. The plant, shown above, is five stories, with cold-storage rooms on each floor.

Tifton Business Given Big Boost As Armour Reopens Packing Plant

By JOHN G. HERRING,
Editor Tifton Gazette.

TIFTON, Ga., Nov. 9.—The large packing plant of Armour & Company here resumed killing operations this week after being shut down for about 15 years. The various departments of the plant are being brought into operation gradually and indications are that the plant will not be in full operation in all departments before the latter part of the month.

The plant has been completely reconditioned since announcement was made late in August that packing house operations would be resumed at Tifton. The magnitude of this undertaking may be realized when it is stated that about $200,000 has been spent in putting the plant in first-class condition. Federal inspectors, whose approval was necessary before the plant could be opened, stated that the rehabilitated Tifton plant is one of the most modern and up-to-date packing houses in the country. The plant meets all federal requirements for packing plants.

Uses Many Animals.

The Tifton plant has a killing capacity of 60 hogs, 15 to 25 calves and 10 to 15 cattle an hour. About 100 people will be employed regularly when the plant is in full operation. In addition to slaughtering livestock, the plant will make sausage and lard, and cure and smoke bacon, sausage and some beef products.

The plant has been remodeled from the first floor to the fifth, including the installation of new insulation, floors, windows, skylights and a general overhauling of the power plant. New stock pens were built, which will accomodate 500 cattle and 1,000 hogs. The plant is located on a 43-acre tract just east of Tifton. All driveways on the plant property are to be paved. During the peak of the remodeling operations 450 persons were employed in three shifts.

The packing plant has its own power plant, makes its own ice, has its own water system and generates its own electricity.

Announcement that the Armour plant would reopen was greeted with the utmost enthusiasm here and has resulted in business improvements along all lines. The most notable has been in the boost in real estate trading and the erection of a number of new houses. Several houses are now under construction and more are planned for the near future.

Farmers to Diversify.

The plant is expected to prove an incentive to farmers throughout this section to greatly diversify their crops by growing more livestock, sale for which will be found at the Armour plant.

Armour & Company has received every desired co-operation from the people of Tifton in the details of bringing the plant back into operation. The enthusiasm with which the reopening of the plant is wecomed is demonstrated by the heavy advertising patronage received by the Daily Tifton Gazette for the special Armour welcoming edition, which will be issued Monday.

RAINS TO HASTEN FALL PLANTINGS

Cotton Crop Gathered and Grain Will Now Be Sown in State.

A protracted drouth, lasting since late September, has been broken in many sections of Georgia.

Rains during the past week were reported from a number of sections, bringing hope of yields from fall and winter crops already planted and of those yet to be planted. The showers also aided grazing lands and improved rapidly diminishing water supplies.

G. W. Mindling, of the Atlanta Weather Bureau, said "most of the state is in pretty good shape now, but there are some places in the southeastern and central sections that still need rain."

Moultrie, Cairo, Bainbridge, Albany, Thomasville, Eatonton, Milledgeville, Perry, Americus, Albany, Pelham, Camilla, Atlanta and Macon were among points reporting rains during the week.

The dry fall has enabled practically all the crops grown, including more than a million bales of cotton, to be harvested without loss by rainy weather. The rains will now enable farmers to sow grain and other crops, including many vegetable and truck crops throughout the state.

HOME IN GEORGIA READY FOR F. D. R.

Dr. Hoke Moves Out as Little White House Is Made Ready.

By GLEN RAMSEY.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Within a fortnight, President Roosevelt comes "home" to Pine mountain.

So Dr. Michael Hoke is getting ready to move out of the hillside "nautical" house, his annual moving day.

Dr. Hoke is one of the country's leading orthopedic surgeons. His skill has made useful citizens out of crippled youngsters. While the President is doing his big job of running the nation, Dr. Hoke occupies the "Little White House."

The surgeon is helping Mr. Roosevelt's Warm Springs Foundation strengthen muscles or trying to overcome the after effects of infantile paralysis—young and old, rich and poor.

Sitting on the "deck" of the small white wooden dwelling—it's a porch or veranda to you—the President enjoys the green of the pineclad hills.

Thanksgiving night—the Foundation patients never forget that event when the President carves the big Georgia turkey for them.

Of course, dignitaries of the country come to see him. Many famous folk have driven up the mountainside since he became chief executive but here they find a simple American, living simply.

This year Mr. Roosevelt is scheduled to arrive about November 20 and nine days later speak in Atlanta. Georgians have made it a "home-coming" celebration and expect to have 100,000 people to hear him.

Being a distinguished "Georgian" he will make the 70-mile trip the day after carving the turkey to Atlanta, to receive homage.

CHATTAHOOCHEE CONTROL PROJECT GETS UNDER WAY

Huge Government Job of Checking River Floods Started at West Point; Many Employed.

WEST POINT, Ga., Nov. 8.—(AP)—Chugging tractors, rumbling dump trucks and a snorting steam shovel are being manned by more than 200 workers as the Chattahoochee river flood control project gets under.

Seven tractors, 140 trucks, one steam shovel and numerous cars for transporting workers from three counties are in use on the river.

The $560,000 project, approved by the President and launched under direction of War Department engineers, is designed to eliminate the menace of floods from this fertile valley, dotted with cotton mills.

Ground has been cleared and plowed for construction of the levee in West Point, to be started this week. The river channel will be widened at a number of points to prevent chokes which have sent flood waters into the valley many times in past years.

Engineers said the pay roll, now approximately $600 a week, is to be tripled by the end of this month, and later increased still further.

The engineers are headed by Colonel R. S. Thomas, of the United States War Department corps of engineers. He is a district engineer stationed at Mobile, Ala.

Work to be done here and along the river in Alabama will reduce the stream's flood stages by approximately 5 1-2 feet, engineers have computed and keep it within its banks except in the rarest extremes.

Past floods have incurred millions of dollars in damages in this city and the Alabama towns of Lanett, Shawmut, Langdale, Riverview, and Fairfax. Only three deaths are recorded in accounts of the floods.

The project includes construction of an extra span on the east side of the short bridge over the river here.

Citizens and civic clubs, particularly the Rotary Club, worked for 16 years on plans to secure the project, now well under way.

SCHOOL BOARD PLANS PEACE MEETING SERIES

Efforts To Settle Row Over Architect Fees Set for This Week.

Adjustment of the board of education row over retention of architects to start an $800,000 school construction program will be attempted in a series of meetings to be held early this week.

The controversy has continued the board for the past several weeks and yesterday appeared no nearer a solution than when it was first precipitated.

A fund was dedicated by the board to Maddox and Murphy Junior High schools, but the need for architects has made it necessary to supplement the $5,000 left of the $275,000 and diversion of the sums set up for Maddox and Murphy appears the only solution of the problem facing the board.

It was predicted yesterday that a compromise will be attempted through which $5,000 each will be transferred from the $25,000 set up respectively for Madox and Murphy to supplement the $5,000 now available. This would make an aggregate sum of $15,000 which would be available at once for architectural services, it was pointed out.

Only eight of the 15 projects contained in the original board setup have yet been approved by WPA. The eight projects total $472,638.50 of the aggregate of $1,185,458.50 requested of WPA for the 15 projects and several repairing and grading undertakings.

Those opposing diversion of the Maddox and Murphy funds yesterday contended that $15,00 would be ample to pay architects on the projects already approved, although they refused to consider any compromise of the federal aid muddle unless it came as an official compromise attempt from those who seek to divert all the Maddox and Murphy funds.

George W. Powell, chairman of the buildings and grounds committee of the board, yesterday called a meeting for 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the city hall for the purpose of attempting to work out a program. Representatives of architectural firms will attend and will tell the committee just how much credit the architects can give for work already done by the school department in preparation of plans for the 15 projects.

Jones H. Ewing, chairman of the bond commission, has called a meeting of the body for 10 o'clock Tuesday morning in an effort to compose board differences.

The meeting is scheduled just a few hours before the regular meeting of the board Tuesday afternoon.

In any event a real effort to dissipate board dissension and to compose differences between warring factions will be made early in the week with a view of expediting start on the school program.

The eight projects approved by WPA and on which work can start immediately after proper plans and specifications are available are:

Faith, $36,782; Howard, $52,212; Connally, $51,874.50; Washington, $60,621; Henry Grady Boys' High, $105,814; Inman, $37,699; Haygood, $80,456; Key, $47,180. Total $472,638.50.

HALF OF TECHWOOD TO OPEN IN JANUARY

Half of the 610 apartment units in the Techwood low-rent housing project will be ready for occupancy by January and all the units of University project will be ready in April, it was announced yesterday by D. A. Calhoun, district manager of PWA housing division.

The remaining half of the Techwood units will be ready for tenants in March, according to forecasts.

Mayor Key and federal officials believed yesterday that details regarding city charges for water services will be worked out agreeably to both governments within the next few days.

Federal officials have suggested a wholesale water rate, but city authorities contend that such a procedure would break down the water rate structure of Atlanta and would be unfair to other apartment house owners.

GRID PLAYER IS KILLED BY VIGOROUS TACKLE

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Injured in a football game at Senatobia, Miss., yesterday, James Long, 19, of Union City, a member of the squad of the University of Tennessee Junior College, died at a hospital here early today.

During the third quarter of the game between the Junior Vols and the Northwest Mississippi Junior College, Long, a halfback, was tackled vigorously. His head struck the ground. Teammates helped him to a bench. Apparently not seriously injured, he watched the last few minutes of play. Suddenly he toppled over, and was carried unconscious from the field. A blood clot on the brain caused his death.

U. S. INDUSTRY IS ASKED FOR RECOVERY NEEDS

Co-ordinator for President Seeks Answer by December 9.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—(AP)—George L. Berry specifically asked industry today to be ready to tell him December 9 what steps should be taken to accelerate industrial recovery and to eliminate unemployment.

The President's co-ordinator for industrial co-operation added he would seek directly an answer as to whether NRA should be continued in some permanent form.

The second of two questions phrased by Berry for discussion at the joint conference of labor and industry here a month from today was whether the country wanted new legislation "for preserving to the nation such social and economic advantages as were gained through previous emergency enactments."

In explanation, he said in a statement that the first question, concerning accelerated recovery, "raises the vital long-range problem of placing the industrial and economic life of the nation on a more stable basis."

Decision Needed.

The other, he added, "calls for a decision as to whether congress should or should not attempt legislation for continuance of NRA in some permanent form."

That question, Berry asserted, already had brought forth many opinions, "but a direct, decisive answer would exert a profound influence over the course of events during the next session of congress."

He reiterated that all management and labor representatives of industry would be welcome at the conference, whether directly invited or not. He did not wish to prevent attendance of anyone because of any particular point of view, he said.

Steps Taken.

Steps have been taken, Berry indicated, to prevent the conference from being used as a sounding board for either pro or anti-New Deal orators. The full joint meeting, which will discuss only procedure, is to meet at 10 a. m., and adjourn at noon.

"There will be no speeches," Berry said in his letter of invitation.

Representatives of related industries then are to meet together to determine their points of view. They then are to select representatives—one from labor, one from management—to a council of industrial progress. If the members so choose, they may make this council permanent.

"It is my conviction that if the management and labor, comprising industry, confer and are able to decide what action will most effectively promote and stabilize the well-being of industry in the United States, lasting and constructive results will be achieved," Berry said.

FINAL TRIBUTE PAID REV. "BILLY" SUNDAY

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—(AP)—A crowd which included hundreds of his converts paid final tribute today to the Rev. William A. "Billy" Sunday at funeral services at the Moody Memorial church for the famous "sawdust trail" evangelist.

Dr. John Timothy Stone, former minister of the fashionable First Presbyterian church and now president of the Chicago Theological Seminary, said in a brief tribute:

"This cannot be a day of mourning, but a day of coronation and welcome to many who know him on the other side. Few will be welcomed there more than he.

"There has been no greater soul among American citizens or men. 'Billy' Sunday was loyal, devoted, eager, intense, fervent, positive, impulsive, sympathetic, human, humorous guileless, plain, pointed, forceful, direct, colorful, conscientious, strong and sweet."

METALS ARE FIRM

Zinc Advances $2; Copper Unchanged.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Zinc prices were advanced $2 a ton by all but one seller late this week when publication of October statistics revealed the firm position of the metal. Demand picked up sharply prior to the price rise. The figures on October shipments were reported as the largest for any month since October, 1929.

There was some increase in demand for lead, but the price for the metal was unchanged.

Copper buying remained in limited volume at the unchanged basis of 9 1-4 cents per pound for electrolytic.

Tin prices moved irregularly. Future quotations sagged somewhat due to the larger production quotas recently announced by the international tin committee.

Although slight declines occurred in the rate of steel ingot production, the trade was anticipating improved demand from the automobile trade, railroads and structural projects. The possibility of price rises by January 1 was also viewed as a stimulant to buying. A firm undertone continued, with some semi-finished steel prices marked up $2 per ton and rises reported in the scrap market. Finished steel prices were unchanged.

GANGSTERS FAIL TO HIT FLEEING HUMAN TARGET

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—(AP)—A carload of gangland executioners bungled their job today when their intended victim escaped, apparently unharmed, after a wild exchange of shots.

The gunmen, cruising along Seventeenth street on the lower west side, opened fire on an unidentified pedestrian who whipped out a pistol and returned the fire as he ran.

A group of boys playing in a nearby lot said the fleeing target stumbled just before he dived into a tenement house, but police found no traces to indicate he had been wounded.

About a dozen gangsters, including Arthur (Dutch Schultz) Flegenheimer, have been slain in the current underworld war.

FOREMAN IS PUSHING POWER APPLICATIONS

Orders Thorough Study of Requests From Cities for Plant Loans.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—(AP)—A thoroughgoing study of all applications for federal aid in setting up municipal power plants was being pursued today by PWA officials.

Dr. Clark Foreman, head of the PWA power division which was set up to give special consideration to such projects, said 12 engineers had been called in from the field to compile lists of approved projects and those left stranded by the reduction in PWA's work relief allotment.

Speculation arose immediately over the possibility that the Roosevelt administration was planning a new step in the public utility field.

Foreman insisted, however, that the engineers were only making lists, and that what would be done about projects deemed desirable depended on "how much money there is available and whether the communities want to operate their own power plants."

The PWA survey followed several recent indications of the administration's continued interest in power "yardsticks" and closer regulation of public utilities.

Secretary Ickes and Harry L. Hopkins joined last week in serving notice that despite the December 15 deadline for starting all work relief projects, municipal power allotments would not be canceled if delays were caused by "unfair attacks" in the courts.

James M. Landis, of the Securities Commission, replied to the Baltimore decision of this week which held the holding company act unconstitutional with the warning that companies not registering with the commission by December 1, might cast a hint of illegality upon their future activities.

A Federal Power Commission survey of sources and rates of electric current is under way and a report on the federal government's numerous power activities is being drafted by the National Power Policy Committee.

Ickes, who is chairman of that committee as well as PWA administrator, recently asserted that there was a "common source" for numerous legal attacks on PWA municipal power allotments. A test case, brought by the Oklahoma Utilities Company to bar a PWA allotment to Hominy, Okla., is to be taken to the supreme court. This week the circuit court of appeals sent it back to the District of Columbia supreme court, which had ruled against PWA for reargument.

Foreman said one purpose of the new study was to determine just how much PWA already has allotted to power plants. Of PWA's $330,000,000 work relief allotment, $6,106,835 went for 63 municipal generation systems, and $1,966,490 for 23 distribution systems.

Latest figures indicated that the old PWA appropriation supplied $192,518,900 for public power plants, besides $50,000,000 for the Tennessee Valley Authority. Allotments to municipalities totaled $46,268,900, while $146,250,000 went to Bonneville and Grand Coulee dams on the Columbia river, Fort Peck dam on the Missouri, Boulder dam in Colorado, and the Casper-Alcova project in Wyoming.

DO AS DOCTORS DO FOR CONSTIPATION

More than 50,000 Doctors Recommend and Use PLUTO WATER
for Quicker, Safer Relief

When a doctor is constipated, what does he take for relief? That ought to prove beyond question how safe, how gentle, how effective a laxative is.

Now here's an amazing fact! More than 50,000 doctors use Pluto Water themselves to keep "regular." And—recommend it for their patients. For they know, from personal experience, that Pluto is the sure way to eliminate dangerous accumulated poisons. They know it is not a habit-forming medicine. They know its action is gentle and quick.

What Doctors Say

For instance, Dr. H. A. O. of Wisconsin, writes: "I not only prescribe Pluto almost daily, but use it personally every other day." Dr. W. M. of Michigan advises: "Pluto is the only laxative." And Dr. J. A. R. of Texas, says: "I use Pluto Water personally to cleanse my system."

Your own doctor, too, will tell you there is nothing better. And—will warn you against habit-forming drugs of all kinds. That's why you also can always depend on this famous laxative.

So, the next time you are constipated, do as doctors do. Follow the gentle "water way" to relief. Take the tasteless, non habit-forming dose—1/5 glass Pluto with 4/5 hot water. In one hour or less you'll get relief. And what a remarkable difference it makes!

Remember, too, Pluto Water is simply a saline laxative mineral water bottled at famous French Lick Springs, Indiana. All drug stores have it. Two sizes—25c and 50c. Two hundred million bottles of Pluto have been used—millions more each year. The most economical, most effective laxative you can buy! Get some today.

EYEWITNESS RELATES MARY LINCOLN STORY

Daughter of Former Naval Officer Discloses Meeting President's Wife.

By BESS FURMAN,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—(AP)—An authentic, eyewitness story about Mary Todd Lincoln came today from Mrs. W. De Meissner, of historic Georgetown.

A quest for someone who knew the martyred president's wife was started by Maury Madison, who spent three years compiling a pictorial history of Mrs. Lincoln but asserted he never met anyone who knew her.

Mrs. De Meissner, white-haired daughter of an admiral, and the widow of a secretary of the old Imperial Russian embassy, laughingly disclosed that "at the age of eight, I was marched up with my 14-year-old sister and presented to her."

Telling her story in a fine old brick home, with miniatures on the mantlepiece, rose wreaths on the fine old carpet, and an antique desk of elaborate inlay, Mrs. De Meissner said Mrs. Lincoln visited the Brooklyn navy yard in 1863.

"My father, Rear Admiral William Radford, was executive staff officer at the time," Mrs. De Meissner continued, "ranked only by Admiral Hiram Paulding, in command of the yard, so it fell to my mother and Mrs. Paulding to present the wives of the officers of the navy yard and their families to Mrs. Lincoln.

"The North Carolina was the receiving ship, with Captain Richard Meade in charge. There was a dais put on deck, with a chair on it, like a throne, and Mrs. Lincoln was to take her place there to receive.

"Remember, the war was at its height, and hatred was intense. In front of the dais, Captain Meade had spread a tremendous Confederate flag, in such a way she would have to walk across it.

"When she came to it, she stopped plumb, and ordered the flag taken up. She was most dignified. Only when the men had taken up that flag did she take her place in the dais."

REUNION PLANNED FOR DAYLITE LODGE

Abit Nix Will Be Principal Speaker at Session Wednesday.

Plans for the sixth annual birthday party and home-coming of Daylite Lodge No. 125, F. & A. M., have been completed, Claud H. Ariail, worshipful master of the lodge, announced yesterday.

Abit Nix, Athens, grand master of Masons in Georgia, will be the principal speaker, and will be introduced by Past Grand Master Joe A. Moore, of Milledgeville. Judge E. D. Thomas, past grand master; Raymund Daniel, past grand master, and other dignitaries in Masonry will take part in the program.

Entertainment features of the program are in charge of John J. Cocking, who will present talented artists of the radio. Also O. B. Keeler, of the Journal staff, will deliver an humorous address.

The meeting will be opened at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, November 13, and will be open to all Masons, their wives and friends, and will be concluded by a barbecue and Brunswick stew luncheon in the banquet hall of the Masonic temple, corner of Peachtree and Cain street, at noon.

The lodge is unique in that it is the only Masonic lodge in Atlanta meeting regularly in the daytime, and one of the few in the entire United States.

HIGH HONOR WON BY MISS ROBSON

Atlantan Heads Hospitality Committee for Convention at New Orleans.

The Association of Bank Women has announced the election of Miss Mabel D. Robson, manager of the woman's department of the First National Bank of Atlanta, as chairman of the hospitality committee of its convention, which will be held in New Orleans, November 10 to 13 at the same time as the annual meeting of the American Bankers' Association.

Miss Robson is regional vice president for the Southeastern Division of the Associated Bank Women. In New Orleans she will preside at the luncheon to be held in the Vieux Carre on Monday, November 11, when Dorothy Dix will be the principal speaker. She also will preside at the luncheon to be held at the New Orleans Country Club on Wednesday, November 13.

At the Vieux Carre luncheon the bank women all will have the opportunity of meeting personally Dorothy Dix, one of New Orleans' most prominent professional women. After Dorothy Dix's informal remarks, Mrs. Helen Pitkin Schertz, a writer and speaker intimately familiar with the historic and romantic Vieux Carre, will talk on the history of the famous quarter, and then personally guide the party through this fascinating section of New Orleans, whose narrow streets were laid out by Bienville's engineer in 1718. The tour of the French quarter will include Old Absinthe House, built in 1798, unique in its second-story cellar; the Cabildo, which was the seat of both French and Spanish colonial governments; quaint shops, old mansions and delightful courtyards not usually seen by tourists.

Grand Jury Expected To Resume Probe of County Board and Police

No Formal Call for Witnesses Issued But Information on Both Situations Is Volunteered; Barrow Group's Data Is Ready.

The affairs of the politically-divided board of county commissioners and a further probe of the Atlanta police department undoubtedly will be taken up by the November-December grand jury this week.

Though Thomas A. Moye, foreman of the grand jury, and W. G. Rauch, secretary, have made no comment on the plans of the jury, it appeared certain yesterday that interested persons will push investigations of the commission and the police force.

No call has been issued for witnesses to appear before the jury this week, it was understood, but several have volunteered information concerning the county situation and the city police if the grand jury desires it.

J. G. Barrow, member of the September-October grand jury who was chairman of the committee which investigated the city force, said yesterday that information gathered by his group has been placed in the hands of Solicitor-General John A. Boykin.

Johnson to Push Charges.

He said he will furnish the grand jury with any further facts that he might have if called. Barrow and a committee interviewed many witnesses during the last grand jury term and uncovered a great deal of evidence of petty mooching by city office and some facts that indicate clearly police have been supplying "protection" to bootleggers and lottery operators. The September grand jury presentments concerning the police were general in nature, recommending certain changes, but the "inside facts" were not made public.

It was understood that Solicitor-General Boykin will give serious consideration to the charges made against patrolmen, and it was said probable that charges will be preferred in some instances.

Commissioner Edwin F. Johnson, leader of the majority faction of the county board, last grand jury term made five alleged indictable charges against Commissioner George F. Longino, leader of the minority faction, but the September grand jury gave Longino a clean slate.

It was authoritatively learned by The Constitution that Johnson plans to push these and possibly other charges against the minority leader before the current grand jury.

Also, Longino has pointed to new "waste and extravagance" since the September jury declared the county is living within its budget, and he has declared the majority bloc is balancing the budget by the sale of the county's resources.

He plans to give additional evidence to the November grand jury, if Foreman Moye summons him before that body.

A fourth condition which will probably be investigated by Moye and the jurors are the charges of H. G. King, vice foreman of the September-October grand jury, that "powerful influences" were brought to bear on his grand jury by "certain interests" in an effort to force the grand jury to "whitewash" the probe of county affairs.

King likewise asserted that threatening letters purportedly written to Walter S. Pharr, foreman of the September-October grand jury, were "hoaxes" in his opinion and he said he desired to ferret out the source of the alleged intimidating threats made against Pharr.

The September-October vice foreman announced that he will go before the present grand jury with this information if he is called.

The differences which have split the county commission as wide as the poles appear no nearer to being ironed out than they were before the last grand jury sought to bring about cooperation of the leaders of the two factions, Johnson and Longino.

The majority bloc, of Johnson, Chairman C. R. Adams and Commissioner Ed L. Almand, ignored the suggestion of the September grand jury that commissioners resign unless they could agree to co-operate. Dr. Adams made a proposition to the commissioners at the last meeting of the county board to the effect that closer co-operation would be brought by cooperation of the commissioners with every grand jury, but, despite the adoption of his resolution, Johnson and Longino were engaged in a bitter argument over a trifle when the meeting adjourned.

The controlling group slapped Longino's face figuratively at the session by voting to take away the county car the minority leader had been using and to turn it over to the police department.

Longino then asked that the commission follow through on the recommendations of economy made by the last grand jury in its presentments, that all county cars be sold with the exception of those used by law enforcement officers. The board took no direct action.

Foreman Moye and the grand jury have been occupied with other matters since they were sworn in Monday and have not considered the county situation at all, so far as could be learned.

In addition to routine business, the November grand jury held several special meetings to investigate the charges of Sam Worthy, convicted perjurer, against Solicitor-General Boykin. Worthy charged that Boykin committed perjury in his trial, but the grand jury returned no bills on the four counts which were prosecuted by Solicitor-General Pro Tem. Elbert P. Tuttle. The solicitor-general was completely exonerated.

A WAVERING STREAM OF FLICKERING LIGHT

The Egyptians of the period about 2500 B. C. had achieved a culture and learning that placed their nation among the foremost of the world. Their famous pyramids, monuments to their engineering skill, symbolize the sun-god Ra and were built as tombs of kings, queens, and other members of royal families. The hieroglyphic picture-writing of ancient Egypt was one of the first forms of written expression. Masters of the jewelers' art, the Egyptians designed beautiful golden adornments, set with precious gems.

A High Priest of Isis, queen of gods, intones the sacred phrases of everlasting life. Glistening Nubians deposit their baskets of choice food and precious jewels in the temple of the departed king . . . his final resting place in the heart of a pyramid. ¶ The last rites completed, the serpentine procession winds away . . . along the languid Nile, drifting silently through the black Egyptian night ¶ Slaves hold their oil-dipped torches high . . . heedless of crumbling fire . . . of hot sparks on their quivering dark skins. A wavering stream of flickering light casts grotesque shadows on desert sands. ¶ The processional torch of Egypt, culminating a glowing lineage, dates back through thousands of years, to the first tiny flicker of flame before a primitive cave-dwelling! Just a torch . . . a ball of oil-soaked reeds wrapped around a rod . . . but it represented another tremendous step in the advance of civilization . . . in man's conflict with darkness.

Today, Electricity gives light that eyes, blind in the dark, may see as by Nature's sunlight. Man's day no longer ends with the setting sun . . . visual tasks continue on, far into the night. Eyes must work under all kinds of lighting conditions. ¶ Scientists, devoting countless years in their efforts to preserve eyesight, have reduced seeing to a science. They know that eyes perform any task more easily with proper lighting . . . that the more exacting the task the better the light must be. ¶ Not only does science tell how much light we need, but also has provided an instrument, the Sight Meter, which measures light as accurately and easily as a thermometer measures heat. Our home lighting specialists are using this Sight Meter to check the light in thousands of customers' homes. They are making suggestions for rearrangement of lamps and fixtures . . . bringing new lighting beauty to homes and new comfort to eyes. Any of our customers may use this service, without cost or obligation.

A beautiful reproduction of this and previous illustrations drawn by the widely-known artist, Wilbur G. Kurtz, may be obtained on request to this Company, 463 Electric Building, Atlanta, Georgia. On attractive paper, it is suitable for framing. All advertising matter is deleted. This is Number Two of a series, "Light Through the Ages."

MEXICAN HIGHWAY WILL STIMULATE TRAVEL FROM U. S.

Road From Dallas, Texas to Mexico City Will Be Opened for Tourists Early in December.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 9.—(UP)—The flow of auto traffic between the United States and Mexico is due to increase rapidly, reaching a climax with the official inauguration of the Laredo-Mexico City highway in December, according to present indications.

The end of the dry season is at hand, another sign that more motorists will use the "high drive." On the inaugural day 1,500 automobiles are expected to start from Dallas, Texas, to increase the vast cavalcade.

A considerable portion of the road—which is 770 miles long—is over mountains. These have been carefully graded and "terraced." These terraces were completed in September.

For all practical purposes, the road has been completed, but considerable work of paving, oiling, and bridge-building will continue far into 1936.

Four Bridges Unfinished.

Motorists at various places are now forced to use ferries. Four bridges are being built, and according to the Department of Communications and Public Works they will be completed as follows:

Bridges over the Axtla and Moctezuma rivers, October, 1935.

Bridge over the Tasquillo river, February, 1936.

Bridge over the Tampaon river, April, 1936.

Approximately 3,500 men have been working on the highway in recent months, principally in the mountainous region around Jacale and Matlapa.

The highway, which eventually will be a link of the proposed Argentina-Alaska motor road originally was scheduled to be opened to traffic in June, 1933. Last year it was hoped to inaugurate it before the close of 1934. Various delays, however, have prolonged the work. It has been more expensive—both in the number of lives lost in work accidents and in pesos—than was estimated originally.

Offers Scenic Wonders.

Now, however, the road is a reality, and affords all sorts of spectacles and scenic wonders to the motorist. From Laredo, Texas, to Monterrey, it is as good as any paved highway anywhere. This stretch of 151 miles includes a 45-mile straightaway in the desert.

From the industrial city of Monterrey—often called the "Pittsburgh of Mexico," the road leads over the mountains to Saltillo, capital of the state of Coahuila, through a region where longhorned cattle abound.

Leaving Coahuila, the drive goes through the fruit-growing section of Mexico to Ciudad Victoria, the capital of Tamaulipas state. Then on to Valles, in the state of San Luis Potosi, and thereafter comes the mountain climb to the Mexican plateau. It was in this section where the work was delayed.

Rises to Tableland.

Between Valles and Jacala, in the state of Hidalgo, the road winds, leaving behind the tropical part of Mexico's gulf region, and reaching the tableland.

After Jacala the motorist arrives at the big mining center of Pachuca, and from then on it is a relatively short ride into the capital.

Experienced motorists already have made the trip from the United States border to Mexico City in only two days.

The Mexican government, while showing a great interest in the highway, has at the same time maintained a candid attitude as to actual progress of construction.

True Facts Presented.

In the past, when reports would arise in the United States that the highway already had been completed, the Mexican Highway Commission would be the first to deny it, and to state the true facts. Such reports, which circulated as far back as 1932, were generally attributed either to mistaken information, or to the misguided zeal of tourist seekers.

Even now the road has not yet been declared officially opened, but motorists are using it satisfactorily. Some motorists, who do not care to make the hard mountain climb, drive down to Monterrey and then ship their cars to Mexico City. Once here, roads leading in all directions will carry the tourist to places of interest.

Every facility is being offered motorists, but strict compliance with all regulations, posting of bond, etc., is demanded of them. Some motorists have said that they considered the "red-tape" a little more complicated than they feel would be really necessary.

PEASANTS HALT MARCH AGAINST MME. LUPESCU

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Nov. 9.—(AP)—A gigantic demonstration against Madame Magda Lupescu scheduled for November 14 was called off today by the national executive committee of the peasant party after a conference with King Carol.

Rumania's political situation was greatly pacified.

Peasant leaders had threatened that more than 200,000 farmers were determined to march on the capital next Thursday to demonstrate against Madame Lupescu, red-haired friend of Carol, and "all she stands for" and to demand other reforms.

After an audience with the king, Ion Mahalache, president of the peasant party, and Nicholas Lupu, of the executive board, announced that personal talks with the monarch had clarified the political situation so that the demonstration was not necessary.

Political circles interpreted the action to mean that the peasant leaders had been promised by Carol that their party would be given a chance to form a new government after January.

SEVERAL ARE INJURED IN DOUBLE TORNADO

MUSKOGEE, Okla., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Two tornadoes struck north of Muskogee late today, one at Porter, the other at Wagoner. Several persons were injured and farm homes damaged over an area of 25 or 30 square miles.

Mr. and Mrs. Twig Johnson, who live five miles southeast of Wagoner, were brought to a hospital here. Their condition was believed critical.

Two other persons were reported injured at Porter.

Ex-Tailor Rides in Ancient Pomp To Become Lord Mayor of London

Sir Percy Vincent Takes Oath as 613th "My Lord the Maire" Amid Medieval Magnificence; J. P. Morgan Contributes Wagon to Glittering Parade.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Dazzling in scarlet robe, London's new lord mayor, Sir Percy Vincent, drove in medieval "pomp and circumstance" from ancient Guild Hall to the Royal Law Courts today to take his oath of office.

A stack of wheat on a decorated wagon drawn by four spanking Percheron horses, "lent" from the Buckinghamshire farm of J. P. Morgan, gave an American touch to the annual parade.

By order of Sir Percy, the procession had a rural theme, floats and paraders representing "a pageant of agriculture and country life." Third in line came the exhibition from the farm of Morgan—one of America's leading financiers, but just a country squire in England.

The official program listed the Morgan ection: "Decorated wain (wagon) drawn by four Percheron horses and carrying a small stack of wheat decorative of bread; wheat and horses lent by J. Pierpont Morgan."

Through densely packed streets, in a modern version of Dick Whittington, Sir Percy went in the name of the city of London "to sue, prosecute, defend and lay claim" to centuries-old rights and privileges before the bewigged lord chief justice.

Starting life as a draper's assistant, he today became the 613th lord mayor of London since the then walled city chose Henry Fitz-Alwyn as "My Lord the Maire" in 1189 A. D.

He drove in glittering state, borne in the lumbering, 178-year-old gilded coach known as "Old Gingerbread," drawn by six steeds.

Gleaming cuirasses of the horse guards, befurred and bechained aldermen, dignitaries from the "worshipful companies" in their purple robes, state trumpeters, the common crier, the sword bearer, the mace bearer, the sheriffs and many another magnificent figure—surpassed onl, by the lord mayor himself—drew the "ohs" and "ahs" of the surging thousands along the way.

At the historic law courts in the Strand the lord mayor climbed down from the high-stepped coach and, still wearing his hat, stood before the lord chief justice, Lord Hewart, and was sworn to office.

KENTUCKY POLL SHOWS BIG NEW DEAL VICTORY

G. O. P. Strongholds Go Democratic in Landslide for Chandler.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Final urban returns from Tuesday's general election in Kentucky showed tonight that democrats who elected their state ticket by a landslide majority polled their banner votes in populous centers, formerly republican strongholds.

With only 92 of the state's 4,219 precincts uncounted, the majority of Lieutenant Governor A. B. (Happy) Chandler, democrat, over Judge King Swope, republican, for governor, mounted to 92,130. Most of the missing precincts were in rural districts. Chandler had 544,826 and Swope 452,696.

Complete unofficial returns from the third congressional district, made up of metropolitan Louisville, gave Chandler, who campaigned as a New Dealer, a majority of 17,027 over Swope, who bid for votes solely on state issues. This represented an actual turnover of 30,932 votes the democrats compared to four years ago when the republican nominee for governor carried the district by 13,905. The district gave President Roosevelt a majority of 5,265.

The fifth congressional district in northern Kentucky, including Covington and Newport almost outdid the first district in western Kentucky, a democratic "Gibraltar," in voting for Chandler.

The ninth congressional district in southeastern Kentucky mountains, traditional republican, alone withstood the democratic sweep with a majority of more than 35,000 for Swope.

THREE FLIERS KILLED WHEN PLANES COLLIDE

ED HOWE COMPOSING HIS 'GREATEST BOOK'

Philosopher Says "He Will Tell All Life Taught Him" in Prize Writing.

ATCHISON, Kas., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Ed Howe, ailing "Sage of Potato Hill," said tonight "I'm 82 and through"—but in the next breath announced he's working still on his "greatest book."

On the eve of his departure for Miami, Fla., to spend the winter, the noted editor and writer said he plans to "bum" and amuse himself with "interesting people."

"I can't read and I can't write," he mused, "so I'm going to amuse myself that way. The only way I can learn now is to associate with intelligent people."

Howe was forced to forego reading and writing after a recent operation to remove cataracts failed to improve his eyes. He is aided now by his niece, Miss Adelaide Howe, who is his secretary.

Discussing his book, "Final Conclusions," which it was indicated he had abandoned when he admitted days ago that his eyes were no better, Howe said:

"Every man's ambition is to write the greatest book in the world. I'm going to tell what life has taught me in my book, and I'm going to be candid. No newspaperman is ever able to write his candid opinion.

"Then I want to leave the book to posterity—to avoid getting hanged by people who believe the same things I do."

The philosopher-editor said he is booked for visits this winter with H. L. Mencken, editor and author, and Westbrook Pegler, columnist. He is a bit skeptical about seeing the latter, however.

"Pegler," he said, "is a notorious social liar. He has promised to visit me before but never showed up."

There will be many a dinner on Howe's Miami social program too—but he'll go "not to eat, but to sit 'em out and learn from the conversation of intelligent people."

PETTEWAY TO RUN IN GOVERNOR'S RACE

TAMPA, Fla., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Judge Raleigh Petteway, of the Hillsborough county criminal court, today announced he would seek the democratic nomination for governor next year.

In a formal announcement he said his friends had told him they feared an honest man could not be elected as the state's chief executive.

MT. VESUVIUS ERUPTS, EMITS LAVA STREAMS

Four Fissues Form at Base of Cone; Villagers Indifferent.

NAPLES, Nov. 9.—(UP)—Four new fissures in Mount Vesuvius emitted thick streams of lava, smoke and heavy surphur fumes today after an eruption late last night.

The eruptive cone of the great volcano, inside the crater, exploded last night over a 60-foot line and four fissures formed at the base of the cone.

Through the night and this morning the fissures emitted their lava in thick streams, so far within the crater, and the volcano rumbled menacingly.

Should the lava overflow the crater, villages on the northeastern slopes of Vesuvius would be in danger, but Professor Alessandro Malladra, director of Vesuvius observatory, said that the eruption was a normal phenomenon, the result of prolonged rains, and that the villages were in no imminent danger at present.

The flow of lava seemed to be subsiding this afternoo. and authorities hoped that the weather would permit week-end visits to the outer fringes of the crater to view the red-gold rivulets.

Villagers, accustomed to the spectacle, were calm and even indifferent.

4 ACES IN LEAD

Defending Champions Are 1,510 Points Ahead.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Despite a 900-point penalty imposed upon their opponents for lateness, Harold S. Vanderbilt's second seeded team trailed Louis H. Watson's quartet by 1,370 points at the end of the first half of their 64-hand semi-final match for the Vanderbilt cup team-of-four contract bridge championship.

Oswald Jacoby's four aces, defending champions, led T. Huber Boscowitz's four by 1,510 points.

Watson and two of his teammates, Samuel Fry Jr. and Edward Hymes Jr., were 90 minutes late for the afternoon session because they went to see their alma mater, Columbia University, play football against Syracuse University. M. D. Maier, fourth member, did not attend.

Captain Alfred M. Gruenther, tournament director, penalized the Watson team 10 points for each minute of delay.

Jacoby, David Burnstine, Howard Schenken and Michael T. Gottlieb picked up 1,000 points on the last two hands of their match with Charles Goren, of Philadelphia; Charles Lochridge, John Rau and A. Mitchell Barnes. Captain Boscowitz does not play afternoons.

Vanderbilt, Waldemar Von Zedtwitz, Theodore Lightner and B. Jay Becker trailed by only 30 points at the end of the first 16 boards.

The finals of the tournament will be played Monday and Tuesday.

PHILIPPINES PREPARE FOR DEBUT AS NATION

Elaborate Ceremonies November 15 To Mark Inauguration.

By REUEL S. MOORE.
United Press Staff Correspondent.

MANILA, Nov. 9.—(UP)—The Philippine commonwealth will be inaugurated November 15 with formalities and pomp befitting the historic day marking the islands' progress.

The United States will be represented at the ceremonies by Vice President John N. Garner, Secretary of War George H. Dern and congressmen. The highest executive post in the islands will pass from Governor-General Frank Murphy to President-Elect Manuel L. Quezon.

Another chapter will be written in the history of Malacanang palace. It will become the residence of the president, as provided by law. Murphy will become high commissioner and will establish his seat of activity in new quarters for which congress has made appropriation.

Notables Filled Post.

Murphy becomes the last of 11 governors-general appointed by presidents since 1901. Men famous in American history have held the post, among them William H. Taft, first governor-general appointed by President McKinley. General Leonard Wood resigned from the army to accept his appointment from President Harding. He died in 1927, the only governor-general to die in office.

Others well known in American life who filled the high office were Henry L. Stimson, Dwight F. Davis and Theodore Roosevelt Jr.

An elaborate inaugural display has been arranged for several reasons, chief being the realization by Filipino leaders of the part America has played in advancing the Philippines. Then, too, the impressive ceremonies will have an important effect on the populace.

Quezon Makes Pledge.

In a pre-inaugural pledge, President-Elect Quezon promised that there would be "more government and less politics." He said he would start observing this pledge in choosing his cabinet.

The president-elect is optimistic concerning financial stability and public order in the new commonwealth.

"The financial position is excellent," he said. "There are not only surpluses accumulated from the yearly operations of the government, but we have cash that has been lying in deposit for several years from the gold fund as the result of accumulation of interest, which raises this fund to more than the law requires."

Quezon said that aid to industry, while contrary to the American theory of keeping the government out of business was practiced by the governments of major European powers, and also by Japan. The Philippine government will have to give such aid in the Philippines, he declared.

"Such aid is particularly needed," Quezon continued, "in the case of industries wherein there is no or insufficient capital available for development."

Looks to Defenses.

The president-elect cited the problem of national defense as one which might create extraordinary demands justifying drawing on the accumulated surpluses mentioned for its capital structure.

The coalition platform on which Quezon was elected, recommends ultimate adherence of the Philippines to the League of Nations. When asked what his attitude was in the light of the present League crisis over the Italo-Ethiopian situation, he said: "We will wait and see."

Quezon pointed out that while the Philippines would be eligible for membership in the League, it would be impossible for the islands to become a member without the consent of the United States, which retains control over Philippine foreign relations during the commonwealth.

He said there were no immediate plans concerning League membership, however.

RECORD SALES END N. Y. AUTO SHOW

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—(AP)—The National Automobile Show closed its 36th annual run tonight and Alfred Reeves, manager, promptly labeled it "the largest retail selling show since 1929."

"Some companies have almost doubled their sales with the average more than 60 per cent above those for the show last January," said Reeves, vice president and general manager of the Automobile Manufacturers' Association.

Exhibitors generally praised the plan of holding the show in November instead of January.

Reeves declared there was an "unusually bright outlook" for 1936 in both the domestic and export markets.

MISSING GIRL FOUND; BRUTALLY MANGLED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—(AP)—The brutally mangled body of Corinna Loring, 26-year-old Mt. Ranier (Md.) girl who disappeared from her home this week on the eve of her wedding, was found today in a clump of trees near here.

The murdered girl's head had been crushed. A rope was around her neck, and a bag was found near by. Thirty feet away from the body was a pool of dried blood.

Coroner Oscar Lavine, of Mt. Ranier, said Miss Loring had been dead several days. Her disappearance was discovered last Monday night when her fiance, Richard Tear, went to her home but failed to find her. She had been left alone in the house.

Miss Loring and Tear were to have been married last Wednesday.

Wife of Youngest British Prince Voted World's Best Dressed Woman

Duchess of Kent Placed Ahead of Mrs. Harrisons Williams, American, Who Often Has Won Vote of Paris.

(Copyright, 1935, by United Press.)

PARIS, Nov. 9.—(UP)—The Duchess of Kent was selected as the most fashionable woman in the world today by a poll of famous Paris dressmakers. The former Princess Marina, of Greece, heads a list of the world's 12 best-dressed women who were selected for the United Press by a jury of fashion experts.

The total list of the world's best-dressed women included.

1. Duchess of Kent. 2. Mrs. Harrison Williams. 3. Mrs. Reginald Fellowes. 4. Princess Louise Mdvani. 5. Baroness Eugene de Rothschild. 6. Princess Sixte de Bourbon Parme. 7. Behum Aga Khan. 8. Mrs. Robert McAdoo. 9. Viscountess C. Bénoist-D'Azy. 10. Hon. Mrs. Richard Norton. 11. Senora Martinez Hoz. 12. Princess Charles Murat.

The beautiful Duchess of Kent figured little in the public eye until the announcement, a year and a half ago, of her engagement to Prince George, fourth son of the king and queen of England.

Tall and slender, with great dignity of bearing, the young royal bride soon became a popular public figure because of her gracious and friendly manner. Women all over the world were interested in her wedding gown and in her trousseau, which were made especially for her at Molyneux's Paris house. When the beautiful young princess appeared in public during the jubilee celebrations she created a sensation with her smart outfits. London shops set employes working overtime to copy her chic and unusual hats. The small peaked felt hat with a perky quill was copied in every city in England, as were some of the large-brimmed hats.

The duchess, with her large brown eyes and curly light-brown hair, favors tones of brown, beige and rose in her wardrobe. She wears simple tweed suits for daytime and for traveling. Her afternoon gowns, slightly more ornate but still simple in design, are usually trimmed with fur. Her evening gowns follow sweeping lines, sometimes are draped and sometimes are quite plain. She favors rather ornate belts and her favorite jewels are pearls. She is seldom seen without small button pearl earrings.

Molyneux, the Paris and London couturier, attributes smartness to an unerring sense of taste and a rare feeling of simplicity.

Mrs. Harrison Williams, the second on the list, is one of New York's most famous hostesses. She is tall and dark and is particularly noted for her beautiful complexion. She likes bright colors and usually chooses costumes in reds, blues and black set off by touches of white. Mrs. Williams' jewels and furs are as famous on both continents as is her well-known wardrobe.

Daisy Fellowes (the Honorable Mrs. Reginald) is known as one of the best dressed women in London and Paris. She is dressed by Molyneux and Schiaparelli and both dressmakers claim that she is their best "worldly mannikin." For daytime, she favors severe sport clothes and for afternoon and evening carries off fashion eccentricities with more flare than any other European.

Princess Louise Van Allen Mdivani, formerly the wife of Prince Alexis, is a fragile looking blonde. She accentuates her blondness by wearing pastel colors or black and white.

Baroness Eugene de Rothschild, the former Kitty Spottiswood, of Philadelphia, has been called one of the world's most fascinating women. Although spending most of her time in Vienna, Baroness de Rothschild purchases all of her clothes in Paris.

Princess Sixte de Bourbon Parme, descendant of one of the oldest and most aristocratic French families, is still dressing very quietly as her husband died a little over a year ago. Having discarded her smart peaked cap and long veil, she now wears black set off with smart white touches, or costumes in various shades of grey.

The Begum Aga Khan, formerly a French candy girl and milliner, is considered seventh on the list of the world's best dressed women.

Mrs. Robert McAdoo, another American, is famed for her smart sports wear. Dressed by Patou, Mrs. McAdoo favors the warm reds, greens and blues for daytime wear in simple suits and tailored ensembles. For evening, she prefers the softly draped gowns which show Italian and Grecian influence.

The Viscountess Charles Benoist-D'Azy, the former Catherine Dews, is American-born. She makes her home in Paris and is always outfitted by Jean Patou as is Princess Charles Murat, the daughter of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, who was born Margaret Rutherford. Both are considered leaders of fashion and society in the French capital.

The Honorable Mrs. Richard Norton, who makes her home in London, spends much of her time in Paris. She is tall, slender and has dark hair and eyes. Her color preferences are autumn shades and she wears rich, heavy fabrics of a solid color brightened by lighter accessories. Dark and slender Senora Martinez Hoz comes from the Argentine to Paris to buy her clothes. Outfitted by Molyneux, she was named eleventh in the list of the world's best dressed women.

ATLANTA COMPANY TO ADVERTISE FLA.

Eastman-Scott Awarded Contract for Expenditure of $100,000.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 9.—The Eastman-Scott Advertising Company, of Jacksonville and Atlanta, in association with McCann-Erickson, Inc., today was awarded contract for expenditure of $100,000 to advertise Florida.

Announcement of the award was made by the All-Florida advertising committee which considered bids submitted by various advertising agencies.

Eastman-Scott has been identified with advertising in the south for many years while McCann-Erickson is well known in the national advertising field.

Ralph Nicholson, general manager of the Tampa Times and chairman of the planning committee, said the selection of the two agencies in association was made on a strictly business basis as it was believed a good job would be done.

The general committee again went on record approving that all money spent for Florida advertising should be in recognized national mediums, outside the state. The backbone of the campaign will be newspaper advertising, with some funds to be expended for magazine and radio. The plan is for two-thirds of the money to go for summer and winter tourists and one-third for industrial and agricultural promotion.

The fund is to be spent within the next 12 months and is to be raised by county contributions and donations from other sources.

Another meeting has been called for Tampa next Sunday to agree on plans for the program.

CLOUDY SKIES LIKELY TO BRING RAINS TODAY

Cloudy skies and warmer temperatures, with a threat of rain throughout the afternoon, was the prediction for Atlanta today from George W. Mindling, chief of the Weather Bureau.

Yesterday, the mercury touched 63 during the afternoon, the cool weather coming in on breezes from the east, but today, according to Mindling, the mercury will hover between 54 and 74 degrees.

The rain threat for Sunday is expected to be general throughout the central and northern portion of the state.

PICKETING LIMITED FOR WHARF STRIKERS

200 Workers, Officials Are Jailed; New Orleans Has Record Tonnage for Month.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Picketing by members of the International Longshoremen's Association was limited here today by the police in the gulf ports strike and boycott after a night of wholesale arrests of pickets and I. L. A. officers.

Around 200 negroes and white men were arrested, taken to police precinct stations in patrol wagons, booked on loitering charges and then released in recorders' courts.

In the meantime shipping at New Orleans went ahead at a high pace and shipping was continuing at the other gulf ports stretching from Pensacola, Fla., to Corpus Christi, Texas.

State officials announced the largest tonnage figure for October at New Orleans of any month within the past four years, while I. L. A. officials declared "the steamship association knows that it is licked."

Talmadge and Prominent Citizens Will Greet Admiral Byrd Tonight

Governor Talmadge and a group of prominent citizens are expected to meet Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd tonight when the noted polar explorer arrives in Atlanta.

Besides the Governor and prominent citizens, officers and members of the Business and Professional Women's Club of Atlanta, under whose auspices Admiral Byrd will lecture tomorrow afternoon and night at the Fox theater, will greet the distinguished officer.

Admiral Byrd is due to arrive here at the Union station at about 9 o'clock.

The reception committee includes Preston S. Arkwright, Jesse Draper, Wiley L. Moore, Major General George Van Horn Moseley, Roy Ulrich, Clark Howell Jr., Herbert Porter, J. R. Gray Jr., J. K. Ottley, Russell R. Whitman, Frank Neely, Ryburn G. Clay, Alva G. Maxwell, Colonel F. J. Paxon, T. K. Glenn, H. Lane Young, George Googe, A. Steve Nance, Al Belle Isle, Colonel J. C. Woodward, Harrison Jones, Cator Woolford, Erle Cocke, and Drs. M. L. Brittain, Robert McDuffie, Eagle Scout, member of Troop 21, will act as Admiral Byrd's aide on the stage at the matinee performance. John Hill, assistant scoutmaster of Troop 50, will act in this capacity at the evening performance.

Georgia Tech, Emory University and Oglethorpe University will usher at both performances. Byron Hilley will act as head usher during the 3 o'clock lecture, and Dick Brumby will have charge of the ushers at the 8:30 o'clock lecture.

Mayor Key will introduce Admiral Byrd at the night lecture, and Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta schools, will introduce him at the children's matinee at 3 o'clock.

"For many years my curiosity had been attracted by that strange bulge of white unexplored space jutting into the Pacific ocean in the Pacific quadrant between the 170th and 120 meridians, west," wrote Byrd in a report of his recent explorations.

"Somewhere behind it lay the most extensive stretch of undiscovered coastline on the face of the earth.

"Since the time of Cook, innumerable explorers had tried in vain to make a break through, only to find the way barred, as he had, by mountains of ice and a pack of impenetrable thickness.

"After leaving New Zealand, instead of laying a course direct for Little America I resolved to try to cut away some of this unknown."

One of the greatest achievements of the recent Byrd expedition is that by means of ship and airplane flights, he has mapped 450,000 square miles of hitherto undiscovered territory.

DEATH OF SAILOR MAY BRING ABOUT NIPPON INVASION

following Japanese assumption of complete police control of the former capital.

On Thursday, the Japanese army began extensive maneuvers in North China with Doihara in close attendance. At that time, Chinese officials expressed the belief that the maneuvers might be preliminary to a general tightening of Japan's grip on all north China.

The immediate cause for the move, they believed, would be Tokyo's irritation at the action of China in following British advice in adopting a managed currency and nationalizing silver and rejecting Japan's demand for vigorous action to disband anti-Japanese organizations. Japan's anger at being disregarded in the currency and silver moves was confirmed today from Tokyo by foreign and war office statements.

All the Japanese troops of the Tientsin and Peiping garrisons took part in the war games which began Thursday and are continuing along the Peiping-Tientsin railway and in the area between Tientsin and Shanhaikwan—gateway from Manchukuo into northern China.

Halt Communism Spread.

Japan also has charged that she is intervening in China to stop the spread of communism. On Wednesday, the Japanese secret service announced it had learned Chinese cummunists were planning outbreaks. Chinese again gave vent to their fears that activities of the "reds" might be used as an excuse for the imposition of complete Japanese domination over north China.

Tension has been acute since anti-tax uprisings of Chinese peasants late last month and the arrival of Doihara, who is credited with planning the moves of the Japanese army which resulted in separation of the Manchurian provinces from China and creation of Manchukuo. Doihara is known as the ablest political and diplomatic agent of the Kwantung army—the Japanese army in China and Manchukuo.

A further indication that the Japanese grip was tightening was seen in the announcement that the Japanese had settled their differences with British property owners in Tangku, the outer port of Tientsin where the Pei river flows into the sea, and were negotiating to purchase the British-owned lands.

Japanese on Thursday insisted the maneuvers were routine and part of general fall maneuvers of the army. Grand maneuvers now are on the island of Kyushu, Japan, with Emperor Hirohito in attendance. Chinese believed the fact that the emperor was with military leaders who favor a strong policy toward China added to danger of a Japanese military coup in north China.

Lieutenant General Youshiyuki Kawashima, Japanese war minister, last Wednesday denounced China's new monetary reform program as insincere and intimated the Japanese army was ready to act alone if necessary to suppress communism and force Chinese acceptance of Japan's demand for thoroughgoing Sino-Japanese co-operation.

WOMAN FOILS HOLDUP; ALLEGED THUG NAMED

A negro was arrested on suspicion last night when a woman identified him as the armed man who attempted to hold her up in Capitol avenue near Crumley street, S. E.

Mrs. R. P. Hodgson, 562 Capitol avenue, told Detectives S. W. Roper and H. L. Sexton that she was standing on the pavement near her home when a negro, armed with a pistol, demanded her purse.

Mrs. Hodgson pushed him away from her. The negro then fled.

After the attempted holdup, Mrs. Hodgson went with the detectives in a police car, and, at a corner of Woodward and Fraser streets, pointed to one of several negroes standing on the corner.

Detectives arrested John Henry Kelly, 52, living in Rawson street, southeast.

Cardenas Has Lost New Chances For Peace in Mexico, Cleric States

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Archbishop Leopoldo Ruiz y Flores, exiled apostolic delegate to Mexico, said today "President Cardenas has lost a new chance for restoring peace in Mexico."

In a prepared statement upon the government's recent refusal to grant the Catholic church its plea for restoration of the right to hold property and impart religious education in schools, the archbishop said:

"I read in the papers this morning the extracts of the answer given in the name of the President Cardenas by the Secretary of the Interior Senor Barba Gonzalez, replying to the recent appeal presented by the Mexican Catholic bishops and backed by thousands of Catholic laymen.

"I think that President Cardenas has lost a new chance for restoring peace in Mexico, while the church has proved once more her goodwill. History will judge.

Fears Losing Control.

"This petition made the best impression everywhere, except among the revolutionary party which, like all dictators, fears to lose the control of Mexico by granting a little freedom.

"It would be useless to discuss this answer in which they pile the vulgar commonplaces of the inquisition, wealth of the church, politics and great treason of the clergy and so on. I think these were repeated more for foreign consumption than for the sake of truth and justice. Mexican revolution cannot mention inquisition, wealth, intervention, bigotry without betraying itself.

"It is funny that they charge now the clergy with looking for foreign intervention, when the only desire of Mexican Catholics is to end with all foreign intervention by which the revolution has triumphed and is going on. . . .

Atheistic Republic.

"One hundred years were not enough for making out of Mexico a nation without God, according to the French liberalism. After another 100 years Mexico will not be an atheistic republic. . . .

"We are glad to hear this confession of Senor Barba Gonzalez: 'Complete religious freedom which the Catholics pointed out was allowed in some countries was impossible in Mexico.' Which in other terms means: There is not tyranny like that of Mexico."

Federal Funds Released To Aid Elementary Education in State

Dr. R. R. Paty, WPA emergency educational director for Georgia, yesterday announced the release of $29,640 of federal funds to carry on the state elementary educational program in 53 counties.

The approval of the project, he said, is expected to bring about the transfer of approximately 1,000 teachers from FERA to the works program.

He said the purpose of the program is to teach elementary subjects to illiterates and near-illiterates and to give them certain vocational training.

"There were more than 95,000 persons enrolled last year in Georgia under the FERA educational program, and more than 20,000 adults were taught to read and write," Dr. Paty said.

Counties in which the program is to operate, and amounts allotted to each, are as follows:

Grady,

BOTH CAMPS INACTIVE ON WPA STRIKE FRONT

Miss Shepperson Out of City. Contractors' Secretary Attacks WPA.

Inactivity in both camps yesterday brought Tuesday's threatened strike of WPA workers in Fulton and DeKalb counties a day nearer with no announced moves for a peaceful solution of the dispute.

Miss Gay B. Shepperson, WPA administrator for Georgia, was out of the city yesterday, her office reporting that she was surveying WPA projects in the state.

Rumors also placed her in Washington seeking official guidance in the possible solution of her difficulties and more rumors were that a WPA official from Washington was in Atlanta discussing the labor dispute with Miss Shepperson.

WPA offices in Atlanta further reported that Miss Shepperson still has received no official notification of the impending strike either from Washington or from local labor leaders.

Discussing Miss Shepperson's stand of official ignorance about the strike vote taken in Atlanta last Tuesday night, A. Steve Nance, president of the Georgia Federation of Labor, said yesterday:

"Can't Understand Attitude."

"We discussed our wage difficulties with Miss Shepperson for several weeks. She was told, time after time, that if she would not compromise with us that we would go to Washington. We were forced to take this step and I can't undertsand this attitude of hers now. She seems to be the only person in Atlanta who does not know there will be a strike Tuesday. Maybe, it will be called to her attention then."

The organization meeting of WPA white collar workers, which was called for Monday night, has been postponed until Tuesday night, it was announced yesterday. Leaders of the movement were emphatic in announcing that the meeting will be for organization purposes and that no strike vote will be permitted at the meeting.

Hugh W. Roberts, executive secretary of the Georgia branch, Associated General Contractors of America, yesterday announced that he has written the following letter to Harry Hopkins, WPA administrator, in Washington:

WPA Attacked.

"As you are aware, WPA workers in Atlanta, having been abetted by organized labor representatives, have threatened to strike, unless WPA acceded to their monetary demands, beginning next Tuesday.

"Of course you know that WPA has to considerable extent pre-empted the present and future market for the legitimate contractor. For that reason the construction industry in this state is opposed to WPA. Inasmuch as labor, the element opposed to WPA, the vote for its obliteration would be unanimous.

"Let us suggest that WPA complete the projects on which it is now engaged and undertake no additional projects. Judging from press reports, WPA is all in a twitter for fear least certain jobs be left to private enterprise or absorbed by PWA. In view of the antagonistic attitude of labor, there is certainly no reason why WPA should further occupy and tend to pre-empt the field ordinarily reserved for private industry."

YOUTH IS HELD IN DEATH PROBE

Police Check Activities of Atlantan at Time of Cole's Murder.

Detectives last night were checking on the activities of J. B. Bullington, 19, of a Windsor street address, at the time of the fatal wounding of Claude E. Cole, sales manager of the Highland Bakery. Cole was shot early Friday morning in the bedroom of his home at 428 Copenhill avenue, when he attempted to grapple with a masked burglar.

Bullington is being held on a blanket charge of suspicion. He was arrested early yesterday morning after Mrs. Cole had informed Chief of Police J. T. Dailey, of DeKalb county, that a photograph of Bullington resembled the killer. She said, Dailey informed Atlanta officers, that she would not make a positive identification of Bullington until she saw him, and asked that the attempt at identification be delayed until after the services for her husband.

Bullington, held incommunicado at police headquarters, refused yesterday to make a statement to detectives, they said. He was said by officers to be in a "highly nervous condition."

NAVY FIGHTS DAVIS AS U. S. ARMS ENVOY

LONDON, Nov. 9.—(UP)—United States navy men of considerable influence are attempting to prevent the appointment of Norman Davis as chief of the United States naval delegation to the London five-power conference set for December 4, according to information reaching British quarters today.

They seek instead the designation of Admiral William Standley, whom they regard as a "safe and sane big navy protagonist," it was reported.

It was believed that these efforts to have the United States delegation headed by an admiral instead of a professional diplomat have received, perhaps unconscious but nevertheless important, encouragement indirectly by Japan's action.

At previous conferences, such as last year's United States-Great Britain-Japan naval parley, the Japanese missions were led by diplomats. The delegation to the December parley, however, will be headed by Admiral Negano.

AUTO KILLS DRIVER OF LAST HORSE, BUGGY

SOMERSET, Pa., Nov. 9.—(AP)—The only person in Somerset retaining a horse and buggy was killed tonight by an automobile that crashed into his conveyance as it dog-trotted homeward-bound on the city's outskirts. The horse was unhurt.

Wilson H. Trent, the victim, was 67. He retired from business many years ago, but told neighbors he more than made expenses by raising dogs and singing.

Mischa Levitzki Listed With Kolar On WGST Radio Program Today

Eddie Cantor, "Penthouse Party," "National Amateur Night," Phil Baker Are Among Listings.

Fine music, drama and comedy comprise the well-balanced combination to be found in the programs of the Columbia Broadcasting System and WGST today.

Mischa Levitzki, the eminent pianist, will play works by Schumann, Mendelssohn and Liszt as guest soloist with the Ford Symphony orchestra directed by Victor Kolar. The Philharmonic-Symphony Society of New York, in its afternoon concert, will present a Stravinsky suite as a highlight.

The hilarity will be furnished by Phil Baker and his endless stooges on a mythical visit to Texas and by Eddie Cantor in his typical wide-eyed way.

Additional features include Freddie Rich's "Penthouse Serenade;" National Amateur Night with Ray Perkins naming the winner of the announcers' auditions.

Mischa Levitzki.

Mischa Levitzki, well-known Russo-American pianist, will be guest artist with the Ford Symphony orchestra and chorus, under the direction of Victor Kolar, tonight from 8 to 9 o'clock over WGST.

America's right to claim Levitzki as a native artist is clear cut, in spite of the fact that he was born in Krementchug, Southern Russia. At the time of his birth, both his parents were naturalized American citizens, who were merely on a visit to their native Russia. Their visit however, proved to be an extended one, for the first eight years of Levitzki's life were spent in territory which, at that time, was under the rule of the czar, but which has since become a part of Poland. He early showed evidence of musical talent, and as a mere lad was accepted as a student by the great Michailowski in Warsaw.

When his parents returned to the United States, young Levitzki entered the Institute of Musical Arts, where he was a personal student of Leopold Stokowski. To complete his education, he returned to Europe, to study under Dohnanyi in Berlin. He made his debut in Berlin with such success that from the first he was lauded by critics.

Levitski has played with most of the leading symphony orchestras of this country and Europe and his concert and radio engagements have taken him to every part of the United States. He was presented as guest soloist of the Ford Sunday Evening hour last spring, and his re-engagement for an appearance this season was the result.

The complete program follows:

Gounod: Soldier's Chorus from "Faust"—orchestra and chorus.

Grainger: "Colonial Song"—orchestra.

Muskowski: "Malaguena"—orchestra.

Mendelssohn: "Overture to "Ruy Blas"—orchestra.

Grieg: "The Last Spring"—orchestra.

Liszt: "Hungarian Rhapsody No. 6—Levitzki.

DeKoven: "The Recessional"—orchestra and chorus.

New York Philharmonic.

Igor Stravinsky's Suite for small orchestra from his one-act ballet, "Pulcinella," will be a highlight of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony orchestra's broadcast directed by Otto Klemperer over WGST tonight from 2 to 4 o'clock.

The composer himself last conducted the work with the Philharmonic in January, 1925. "Pulcinella," a "ballet with song," was composed in 1920 and first performed in May of that year at the Paris opera by the Russian Ballet with Karsavina and Massine. Stravinsky afterwards arranged a concert suite from the ballet music. In this form the Suite for Small Orchestra is presented without programmatic indications and is to be heard in concert form simply as abstract music.

For his opening selection Klemperer will conduct Weber's Overture to "Euryanthe," followed by Sibelius' tone poem, "The Swan of Tuonela." The second half of the program will be devoted to the majestic Brahms First Symphony in C minor. During the intermission Lawrence Gilman, noted critic, will discuss the music informally.

Eddie Cantor.

Georgie Stoll's recent guest appearances on the Eddie Cantor program, broadcast over WGST at 7 o'clock, have proved so popular with listeners that the well-known California maestro has been engaged as Cantor's permanent music conductor.

Stoll is a New Yorker by birth but his fame as a conductor and composer was won in Hollywood. For several years he was musical conductor of Sid Grauman's Chinese theater in the film capital and composed the scores of some of the most outstanding screenplays produced, including "Hell's Angels" and "Trader Horn." On several occasions he has been guest conductor of the Los Angeles Philharmonic concerts in the Hollywood Bowl.

In addition to his many radio activities, Stoll provided Bing Crosby's orchestral accompaniment in all of the star's pictures.

"Penthouse Party."

Colonel Lemuel Q. Stoopnagle and Budd, two of radio's most zany funnymen, will be guests of Freddie Rich, on his lively "Penthouse Party" program over WGST tonight at 9:30 o'clock. The irrepressible pair will have some notable matters to consider in connection with their latest gadgets, gimcracks and gewgaws.

Also featured in the "party" will be Benay Venuta, singing star of the musical comedy, "Anything Goes;" the Blue Flames, feminine trio of rhythm singers, and Jack Zayde, virtuoso violinist.

Miss Venuta will sing two torch songs, including "Moanin' Low" and the swinging "Topic of the Tropics." The Blue Flames will sing special arrangements of "Spirit Fire" and "Love Me or Leave Me" and Zayde will play a special violin solo.

Rich will lead his orchestra in novel versions of "Why Should I?" from the Cole Porter musical comedy, "Jubilee;" "Isn't This a Lovely Day?" the Irving Berlin hit; "I've Got a Feelin' You're Foolin'" and "Soft Lights and Sweet Music."

Phil Baker.

Speeding across the deep southland on their imaginary tour of the United States, Phil Baker, the "Great American Tourist," his carload of stooges, Hal Kemp's orchestra and the "Seven G's" will broadcast "San Antonio Night" over WGST tonight at 6:30 o'clock. There are rumors that Baker's accordion will be in demand for some Texas melodies and there will be several music tributes to the Lone Star State. The ubiquitous Bottle has already applied for membership in the famous Texas Rangers for himself and Baker, but Stooges 1, 3 and 4—no less than Beetle, Mrs. Sarah Heartburn (Agnes Moorehead) and Little Angelface (Emily Vaas) — have prepared some caustic interruptions to the soaring ambitions of Baker and Bottle as they invade the great southwest.

MISCHA LEVITZKI.

"National Amateur Night."

Ray Perkins' quest for amateur announcing talent will end with the weekly National Amateur Night broadcast over WGST tonight at 5 o'clock. On that date the winner of the contest, chosen by program listener votes, will be announced and given a permanent announcing job on the weekly broadcast. The program also will bring before the microphone another array of amateur talent selected from all parts of the country. As usual Arnold Johnson will direct the orchestral specialties and highlights.

Sisters of the Skillet."

Ed East and Ralph Dumke, chanting "When Better Household Hints Are Hinted We Will Hint 'Em," will open another of their hilarious "Sisters of the Skillet" programs over WGST this afternoon at 12:45 o'clock. In addition to their amusing solutions of domestic difficulties, the boys will offer an original song and an unfinished limerick.

MAN CLAIMS ROBBERS TOOK HIM TO MACON

A 24-year-old Atlanta man last night reported to detectives he had been forced into an automobile by two men, robbed, driven around all night and then finally put out of the machine at Macon.

The episode was reported to police by Raymond Grunnells, 1125 Matthews street, S. W.

Grunnells told detectives he was standing on a corner of Queen street near Gordon, S. W., Friday night when one of two men in a parked car approached him.

Grunnells claimed he was forced into the car. Ten dollars and 50 cents in cash and his wrist watch were taken, he said. He returned home on a bus, he said.

FLORIDA COURT RULES SLOT MACHINES LEGAL

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Nov. 9.—(UP)—The supreme court today issued a peremptory writ of mandamus instructing State Comptroller J. M. Lee to issue slot machine licenses to J. B. Patterson.

The order, it was indicated, opened the way for licensing of slot machines, as provided in the last legislature's act, despite legal battles against the law.

Lee, confronted with a Dade county circuit court order enjoining him against issuance of licenses and with a supreme court order to issue licenses to Patterson or explain why not, petitioned the court to end the dispute.

The court has held the slot machine law constitutional.

HOLC Bonds Worth $900 Found in Garbage Can

P. A. Clarke, of 92 Fairlie street, is an observing man. Yesterday he saw some engraved paper sticking out of a garbage can on Fairlie street. He examined the paper and discovered it to be HOLC bonds worth $900.

Clarke took them home with him to a safer depository and then called police. Unless the owner is found Clarke's keen eye will be worth $900 to him.

"His Misleading Lady"

Clark Gable and Lillian Emerson, above, will appear in a Lux Radio theater production of "His Misleading Lady" over WGST tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. Gable, who has just returned to the United States from a South American vacation, will be supported by Miss Emerson, popular Broadway leading lady. "His Misleading Lady" will mark Gable's first appearance in a full-length radio drama.

NAZIS REBURY HEROES OF BEER HALL PUTSCH

Under Showmanship of Goebbels, Nation Honors Historic Dead.

MUNICH, Germany, Nov. 9.—(AP) The birth pains of the nazi regime which rules Germany's 60,000,000 people, were deified here today in one of those stage-managed pageants of which Minister of Propaganda and Public Enlightenment Joseph Paul Goebbels is such a past master.

The occasion was the twelfth anniversary of the now-historic beer hall putsch by means of which a former lance corporal in the Austrian army, a jobless house painter at the time and now worshipful master of Germany, first sought futilely to establish national socialism as the nation religion of Germany and the nazi party as the state.

It was twelve years ago today that Adolf Hitler leaped upon a table in the municipal beer garden of Munich, fired a shot into the ceiling to rivet the attention of the drinkers at the surrounding tables, and grandiloquently proclaimed the third reich, the nazi realm which is a fact today.

Today Hitler and his chieftains indulged in a "heil!" for the success of their struggle for power.

Astutely, they sought to pin no medals upon themselves. The heroes of the day were the 16 nazis who were shot down for trying to overthrow their country's government 16 years ago.

Amidst imposing pagentry, the remains of those 16 "comrades" were borne to their final resting place in a newly built "temple of honor."

The cortege was led by Julius Steicher, arch anti-Semite of the nazi regime, wearing a simple brown uniform of the troops with whose help Hitler rode to power and the insignia of the "blood order" awarded only to those who participatted in the putsch of November 9, 1923.

Behind Streicher floated the "blood flag" borne 12 years ago by one of the dead men.

And after the flag filed the men who hold power in the nazi government of today. At the Koenigsplatz they halted in front of the "Temple of Honor," while a 16-gun salute was fired.

Later, the coffins of the 16 "martyrs" were transferred to a monument which will hereafter be known as "The Eternal Sentinel."

COURT BARS UNION OF GIRL, 14, MAN 66

Father of 11 Hopeful, But Youth Simply Wants To Quit Jail.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 9.—(UP)—Court action today prevented the marriage of a 14-year-old schoolgirl and a 66-year-old farmer, father of 11 children.

Circuit Judge R. J. Wheeler denied a petition of Q. C. Brown, the girl's father, to have her released from the state training school for girls, where she was sent last August.

Attorney Luther Patrick, representing the bride-to-be, indignantly charged the juvenile court action was "highhanded" and that she had been committed to the institution "simply because the court considered her too young to marry."

S. H. Otwell, the prospective bridegroom, was disappointed. "It was too bad," he said. "I promised Clennis I would marry her and I am ready to do it at the first possible moment. Some of my children want me to marry her and some don't."

Clennis was indifferent. "Well, I'd like to get out of that place and go home," she said.

Georgia Baptist Convention Meets At Tabernacle Church on Tuesday

Officials of State Body To Hear of Advances in All Departments.

The 114th annual session of the Georgia Baptist convention will convene in Atlanta at 8:30 Tuesday in the Tabernacle Baptist church. Messengers and visitors from the various churches and associations throughout the state will be in attendance and it is expected that the enrollment will be approximately 1,000.

The convention's executive committee will hold its pre-convention session tomorrow night with Dr. J. C. Wilkinson, of Athens, president of the executive committee, presiding. The executive committee will review the annual report which is to be made to the convention the following day.

The convention's opening devotional will be led by the Rev. Lewis H. Wright, pastor of Tattnall Square Baptist church, Macon, and the music throughout the entire meeting will be led by W. Plunkett Martin, music director of the First Baptist church of LaGrange.

The convention is scheduled to run for two days and the report which will be presented by the committees on order of business provides a full schedule for the entire period. The convention will hear reports on all phases of its missionary, benevolent and educational work and will adopt a budget for the ensuing year

Wilkinson to Preach.

Dr. J. C. Wilkinson, pastor of the First Baptist church, Athens, is scheduled to preach the convention sermon. The sermon will come on the morning of the opening day of the convention following the enrollment and organization which includes the election of a president and four vice presidents, a recording secretary and a treasurer. The report of the executive committee will be presented on the afternoon of the first day by Dr. James W. Merritt, executive secretary-treasurer of the committee.

A feature of the first day's session will be an address in the afternoon by Dr. John R. Sampey, president of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary and president of the Southern Baptist convention. Other distinguished guest speakers will include Dr. Charles E. Maddry, secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, Richmond, Va.; Dr. J. B. Lawrence, secretary of the Home Mission Board, Atlanta; Dr. T. J. Watts, secretary of the Relief and Annuity Board, Dallas, Texas, and Dr. John L. Hill, book editor of the Sunday School Board of the Southern Baptist convention, Nashville, Tenn.

The work of state missions will be reviewed by the convention Tuesday night, at which time Dr. T. W. Tippett, secretary of the Sunday school department; Mr. Edwin S. Preston, secretary of the Baptist Training Union department; Rev. D. B. Nicholson, secretary of the student department; Miss Erva Blackstock, manager of the Baptist Book Store, and

DR. J. B. LAWRENCE.

Miss Mary Christian, secretary of the Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of Georgia, will appear before the convention. The period devoted to the discussion of state missions will be under the direction of Secretary James W. Merritt. The report on this phase of the work will be presented by the Rev. H. C. Whitener, Buford, Ga.

Gilbert to Lead Discussions.

Dr. O. P. Gilbert, editor and manager of the Christian Index, will be in charge of the period which will be devoted to the discussion of the Index, which is the official organ of the convention. The reports for the Georgia Baptist hospital, W. D. Barker, superintendent, and the Georgia Baptist Orphans' home, W. P. Anderson, general manager, will be presented on Wednesday morning, after which the convention will visit the home at Hapeville to be the guests of the orphanage at a barbecue dinner. The afternoon session of the convention will be held in the Hapeville Baptist church. All other sessions, including the closing session Wednesday night, will be held in the official meeting place, the Tabernacle Baptist church, of which Dr. W. H. Knight is pastor.

Other reports to be presented to the convention will include the Baptist Hundred Thousand Club, the holding commission, convention treasurer, home missions, foreign missions, state promotion committee, education, brotherhood and layman's work, social service commission, nominations, and time, place and preacher.

This will mark the seventh time the convention has met in Atlanta during its 114 years of existence. The date of the first meeting in Atlanta was in 1853 and the last one was in 1931. Dr. T. F. Callaway, the present president, has held office one year. There is a constitutional provision which limits the tenure of office of any one president to not more than three years. This constitutional provision did not always prevail because the convention has had only 12 presidents during the period of its existence. For 25 years this office was held by the late Dr. Patrick H. Mell and for 17 years by his son, Dr. John D. Mell, of Athens. Dr. P. H. Mell also held the office of recording secretary for a period of 10 years.

The first president of the convention and one of the prime movers in its organization in 1822, was Jesse Mercer, who held the office of president for 19 years. Ex-Governor W. J. Northern was convention president for 14 years. Dr. B. D. Ragsdale, the veteran secretary of the convention, has held office for 40 years. Dr. Ragsdale is also the convention's historian and has this year published the second volume of the History of Georgia Baptists. Other volumes are in process of preparation. Other officers of the convention are: Four vice presidenets, the Rev. J. Fred Eden, James; Dr. W. A. Hogan, Lincolnton; Dr. Arthur Jackson, Savannah; Dr. W. Raleigh White, Albany, and the treasurer, the Rev. Spencer B. King, Blakely.

The Georgia Baptist convention was organized at Powelton, Ga., and has grown from small membership to the present membership, which includes 2,408 churches with a combined membership of 457,941. The first Baptist church organized in Georgia was Kiokee in Columbia county and it was constituted in 1771. This church is still active and maintains regular service. The first pastor and founder of the church was the Rev. Daniel Marshall. The convention was first known as the General Baptist Association of the State of Georgia. The name was changed to the Baptist Convention of the State of Georgia in the year 1827 and in the year 1830 the convention was granted a charter by the state legislature under name of the executive committee of the Baptist Convention of the State of Georgia.

Reports Indicate Gain.

The reports which will be presented to the convention this year indicate substantial gain in the financial support which has been accorded the convention's missionary, benevolent and educational causes during the year. The reports will reveal total gifts during the first 10 months of 1935 of $272,066.20, which is a gain of $24,124.33 over the corresponding period of last year. The convention's educational institutions, Mercer University, Macon, Dr. Spright Dowell, president; Bessie Tift College, Forsyth, Dr. Aquila Chamlee, president; Shorter College, Rome, Dr. Paul Cousins, president; Norman Junior College, Norman Park, Paul Carroll, president; Brewton-Parker College, Mount Vernon, A. M. Gates, president, will likewise report substantial advances in enrollment and in other ways. The reports will further reveal an unusually successful year in all phases of missionary endeavor which are fostered by the denomination.

The Tabernacle Baptist church has made thorough prepartion for the entertainment of the convention visitors. The Atlanta Baptist Ministers' Conference has appointed committees to aid in caring for the convention. Dr. W. H. Major is president of the Atlanta Baptist Ministers' Association and the Rev. E. E. Steele has been named as chairman of the committee on entertainment.

There are a number of auxiliary meetings planned during the convention period, among which are the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary alumni banquet, a luncheon meeting of the Baptist Hundred Thousand Club chairmen from the various associations in the state, and a luncheon meeting of the messeners from the Flint River Association, of which Griffin is a part.

Wiley L. Moore, of Atlanta, is scheduled to speak to the convention concerning the Georgia Baptist Hospital fund, of which he is chairman.

Judge John B. Guerry, of Montezuma, will present the report on brotherhood and layman's work to the convention.

To Erect Home.

MONTEZUMA, Ga., Nov. 9.—Dr. C. P. Savage, well-known local physician, has purchased from R. L. Clements an attractive residential lot on South Dooly street and will begin at an early date the erection of a handsome home on the site.

5 P.M. is a test of how you FEEL

"How do I feel.... Rotten! why do you ask?"

"Because, you are not yourself!"

It is, oh, so hard to get thru the day when you don't feel well. Joe Hamilton is not troubled with any serious organic complaint... as yet ...just a recognizable case of plain run-down condition...probably due to overwork, worry, loss of sleep or a lagging appetite.

Joe Hamilton feels "rotten" today because his red-blood-cells are low in number and strength—his body is run-down...his brain dull. All because he lacks vigorous red-blood-cells to carry the oxygen he breathes to the tissues to make use of food factors for the production of energy...tissue repair...body tone...muscular and mental freshness.

S.S.S. Tonic has won popular approval as a remedy for this condition. Its long years of use is your guarantee of satisfaction. Medical Science has proven its effectiveness over and over again. It starts the gastric juices in the stomach and provides, too, the minerals the body requires in rebuilding those red cells.

Begin taking S.S.S. Tonic now and, unless your case is exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food ...sound sleep...and renewed strength. You owe it to yourself and friends to feel better and look better.

Two sizes are on sale at all drug stores. The big 20-ounce bottle is sufficient for a two-weeks treatment, and represents a saving in the purchase price. To make sure you benefit from this suggestion, see that you get the genuine S.S.S. in the red cellophane package.

You are invited to listen in every Friday night to the S.S.S. Music Box Hour—over Mutual Broadcasting Network (WLW—WOR—WGN—CKLW)—Good old-fashioned music. 50 artists. 9:30 p.m., E.S.T.

S.S.S. TONIC Makes you feel like yourself again

SCHOOL CONVENTION TO DISCUSS FINANCES

Georgia Superintendents To Open Annual Meeting Here on Nov. 22.

The effect on public schools of ratification of the proposed constitutional amendment limiting property to 15 mills is the primary subject for discussion when Georgia superintendents meet in annual convention here November 22-23.

The amendment will be submitted to the vote of the people in next November's election.

The association of superintendents, of which F. F. Rowe, of LaGrange schools, is president, will hold its sessions at the Henry Grady hotel.

Superintendent W. J. Andrews, of Toccoa, vice president and chairman of the program committee, has announced the general convention topic will be "Financial Problems Facing the Schools of Georgia."

School officials say that under the limitation plan, five mills would go to school support. Estimating the taxable value of property in Georgia at a billion dollars, the officials say this would give schools $5,000,000 a year. They point out that income to schools of Georgia in 1934 from all real estate taxes was $12,784,323.

Among those on the program to discuss the tax question are: Tate Wright, Athens, secretary of the County Commissioners' Association of Georgia; Dr. Malcolm Bryan, of the University of Georgia; and Superintendent B. M. Grier, of Athens schools.

Dr. S. V. Sanford, chancellor of the University System of Georgia and president of the Georgia Education Association, is to speak the first day.

Other speakers include Miss Gay B. Shepperson, Georgia WPA director; Congressman Braswell Deen, of Alma; Superintendent Mark Smith, Thomaston; Dr. M. D. Collins, state school superintendent, and Dr. Doak Campbell, of the George Peabody College for Teachers.

Entertainment includes attendance at the Georgia Tech-Florida football game as guests of Dr. M. L. Brittain, Tech president.

EMORY TO HONOR PARENTS FRIDAY

Special Program Arranged for Visiting Parents of All Students.

Extending invitations to the parents of all students, the Emory University Y. M. C. A. will hold its annual Parent's Day on the campus next Friday. Registration will be held Friday morning in the lobby of the Library.

A banquet in the university auditorium, "The Goose Hangs High," fall production of the Emory Players, a Faculty-Parent reception and a football game between two student teams will provide the highlights of the day for the visiting fathers and mothers.

The visitors will have an opportunity to attend the weekly chapel service Friday morning and go with their sons to their various classes during the day.

Students and their parents will be admitted without charge to the play Friday night. The production will be well adapted to the occasion, as the plot deals with the problem of students and their relation to their parents.

The Faculty-Parents reception will be held in the Nurses' Home under the direction of the Emory Woman's club and will afford an opportunity for contacts between parents and the faculty.

SCHOOL FUND HIKE NOTED BY COLLINS

State Appropriation This Year Best in History, Superintendent Declares.

Dr. M. D. Collins, state school superintendent, said yesterday "the tendency now seems to be in the direction of providing adequate revenue for the maintenance of the Georgia public school system."

He was addressing the Fifth District High School Association meeting at Emory University.

While school responsibility has increased and revenue has decreased by exactly the same percentage in the past ten years, Dr. Collins said, figures were cited to show that "during 1935 Georgia schools have received more revenue from the state than heretofore."

He said rural children must have better opportunities and teachers must be paid regularly and in proportion to their training, experience and ability.

It is true, he said, that schools do not get their pro rata share of state funds in full. But, he added, "other agencies of the state experience a similar reduction in revenue."

Dr. Collins said he believed that a tax revision committee of representatives from the congressional districts, as recommended by Dr. S. V. Sanford, chancellor of the University System of Georgia, "will be able to make a significant contribution to the cause of education."

When the lid is raised, the red lens in the tail light, of course, is tilted upward, but a secondary red lens, placed in the bottom of the light, immediately comes into play as the angle of the light is changed, and shows a warning signal that is visible for several hundred feet. The new 1936 Hudson and Terraplane cars are on display here in the showrooms of the J. W. Goldsmith, Inc., distributor, 58 North avenue, N. E.

Talmadge Suggests Three Debates In Answering Olson's Challenge

But at St. Paul, Governor Olson, informed of Governor Talmadge's acceptance, suggested a series of three debates on constitutional questions, and said he preferred a single meeting, in New York city.

"I deem it inadvisable to have the debate in Georgia," Olson said, "because I would be obliged to comment on the denial of the constitutional right of free speech in Georgia and I might find myself on the chain gang of Angelo Herndon."

Herndon was convicted in Georgia of disseminating communistic literature, the Minnesota governor explained.

Governor Olson was quoted in press dispatches several days ago as willing to uphold his general challenge against the Georgia executive.

Olson's challenge called for "any prominent lawyer" to argue negatively the question, "Resolved, that throughout American history the only danger to our constitution came from and still comes from the judicial branch of the government, which has constantly usurped its authority."

The challenge was referred to the Governor by the Fulton County Bar Association. Talmadge wrote Olson that they might meet first in Macon, then in any city in Minnesota, and finally in New York, Chicago or Philadelphia.

"If these places are not acceptable to you," Talmadge wrote, "please suggest other places."

Dates for the debates were not mentioned.

Modernization Work Completed At Washington Street Market

Transformation of the Washington Street market from a motley, insanitary and disease-breeding group of unsightly wooden sheds into a modernly equipped iron and concrete improvement was virtually complete yesterday.

Less than three months after an outbreak of typhus fever, spread by rats, the market now presents a pleasing sight and is inviting to the trading public.

J. F. Jones and J. W. Kirk, operators, and S. D. Mullinax, market master, in conference yesterday, asserted business is the best it has been since the market was established several years ago and attributed the growth, from an extremely modest beginning, to location and to recent improvements.

About $20,000 has been expended in tearing up wooden floors, old wooden fronts and wooden sheds and substituting sheet iron and concrete.

The place can be washed out easily. Breeding places for rats and other rodents have been eliminated. A systematic campaign has been waged relentlessly against the rats, responsible for the typhus, and they are now extinct. The grounds also have been improved. Produce is better cared for, and the general atmosphere has been improved greatly.

Mullinax, who for five years was secretary of the Atlanta Retail Food Dealers' Association and who also served as secretary of the Georgia Retail Food Dealers' Association, is in complete charge of the marketing facilities. He has been a resident of Atlanta for 25 years, and is well known to the retail food dealers of Atlanta and the state.

"We propose to furnish the highest grade of fruits and produce obtainable and at the most reasonable price consistent with the class of products we handle," he said. "Our commodities will be protected against all kinds of weather. They will be fresh. We will co-operate with city weights and measures inspectors to see that Atlantans get full weight and full measure in their purchases."

EXHIBITORS PLANNING BIGGER FLOWER SHOW

Popularity of the Southeastern Flower Show, which ended at the auditorium at midnight, prompted exhibitors at a meeting yesterday afternoon to vote unanimously not only to present a more elaborae show next year, but to make the exposition an annual event of outstanding importance.

It was voted to incorporate as Southeastern Flower Show, Inc., and invite participation by florists and nurserymen of other southeastern states, staging every year "a flower show on a parity with those of New York, Chicago and Cleveland."

Twenty florists and nurserymen joined forces to stage this year's show.

Basing their estimates on the attendance on the show just ended they predicted that future shows will draw literally thousands of visitors to Atlanta, with resultant benefit to business generally.

GOVERNOR TO PRESENT JOHNSON TO AUDIENCE

General To Speak at Wesley Memorial Auditorium Next Tuesday Night.

Governor Talmadge, leading southern foe of the New Deal, will introduce General Hugh S. Johnson at the general's lecture Tuesday night in the Wesley Memorial church, it was announced yesterday.

General Johnson, former NRA administrator and recently works relief director for the city of New York, has been a New Deal "in and outer." He recently resigned the New York city post.

The Governor will sit on the platform with the general and, following the former administrator's address, will take part in the open forum in which General Johnson will participate.

The general's lecture, which is under the auspices of the Alkahest Celebrity Bureau, will begin at 8:30 o'clock.

Of all dramatic incidents in the colorful public life of General Johnson none have been more interesting than his press conferences when the general would submit himself as a target for questions from any number of the star correspondents and was ever willing to take on all comers. Atlantans will thus have an opportunity to see re-enacted such a proceeding in connection with his lecture here.

Doubtless there will be many in the audience who will have queries to propound. For example, they may want to know more of the Scheeter decision or to have General Johnson's interpretation of interstate commerce or the Wagner labor bill, or what is meant by the expression, "take the profit out of war." Certainly many will want to have his ideas on sound money and a number of questions concerning the New Deal with which the general does not agree.

The Kiwanis Jug Quartet and hillbilly band has been engaged to prelude the general's lecture with some of their tuneful music which will add more color to an already colorful event.

Tickets will be on sale throughout Monday and Tuesday at Davison-Paxon's and Rich's department stores and at the door of Wesley auditorium Tuesday evening just before the lecture at popular prices, all seats being reserved.

HEART DISEASE CAUSE OF NEWSMAN'S DEATH

Jack Patterson, prominent Georgia journalist, died of organic heart disease, it was reported yesterday by Coroner Paul Donehoo, following an inquest into the sudden death of the writer Friday night at an Atlanta hotel.

Patterson arrived at the hotel late in the afternoon and suffered the attack later in the night.

At the time of his death, Patterson was associated with the Griffin Daily News. He was 55 and had been active in Georgia journalism for many years. He edited a weekly paper at Covington for several years and later was associated with the Atlanta Journal.

Although he took a deep interest in politics, he had never held any political office. Te body was taken to Sunnyside, Ga., for funeral services, which will be held at 10:30 o'clock this morning at the Shiloh Methodist church, near Sunnyside. The Revs. C. B. Daniel and J. N. Gardener will officiate. Burial will be in the Wimbish cemetery.

LATEST HERNDON PLEA TO BE HEARD TUESDAY

Angelo Herndon, convicted negro communist, will attack the constitutionality of Georgia's insurrection law Tuesday in Fulton superior court.

He and his lawyers have filed a writ of habeas corpus which is scheduled for hearing at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon before Judge Hugh M. Dorsey.

Herndon was sentenced to 18 to 20 years on conviction of attempting to incite a riot and the United States supreme court recently upheld the lower courts.

Attorneys for the negro will contend the law under which he was convicted is unconstitutional and that it has never been tested since it was passed by a Georgia legislature in 1872. Meanwhile, Herndon is being held in Fulton tower.

Linder Seeks Young Men To Enter Produce Field

Commissioner of Agriculture Tom Linder said yesterday he needs some young men with "a little capital and a little sense" to go into business in the state's farmers' wholesale market.

"If a fellow's got a limited capital and a limited education but don't mind working hard and spending nothing," said the commissioner, "he can go down there and make a real business for himself. In 15 years he can sit back and take it easy if he wants to."

He says inexperience in produce marketing wouldn't make much difference.

"If a man's got just a little sense and is willing to buckle down and work he can learn a lot," Linder said. "Why I read law 12 weeks and passed the bar examination."

County road crews are at work on the market—which Linder expects to be the first of a series of state-supervised produce outlets. He said he hopes it will be ready to open in a month.

SAFETY OF NEW DODGE CONFIRMED BY TEST

Famous Belgian Roll Reveals Car To Be Practically 100% Safe.

"Torture platform." "punishment pit," "the rack"—are some of the names which visitors to the Dodge testing laboratory bestow on the contrivance after watching its operation.

The company's engineers, some of them no doubt harboring memories of European roads over which they careened during the World War, call it the "Belgian Roll."

The Belgian roll is an instrument of fiendish mechanical cruelty, so premeditated that many an onlooker wonders whether human compassion for all things might not have reached the heights of a "society for the prevention of cruelty to automobiles."

The truth is, however, that the Belgian roll serves a distinctly humanitarian function. The first and final purpose of the machine is to further the cause of motoring safety and dependability by subjecting Dodge cars to machine-made wear and tear of such fearful concentration that a single day's Belgian roll treatment is the equivalent of several years of the most strenuous actual service that could be imagined.

Every strain and jolt which a car could possibly be made to suffer, every jar, every twist which might, conceivably be inflicted on an automobile mechanism in hundreds of thousands of miles of travel of unheard-of severity, is visited, with infinite multiplication, on Dodge cars, so as to afford designers, engineers, metallurgists and manufacturing experts opportunities to verify earlier calculations and specifications long before the production of a new model series is undertaken.

Fortunately for the interests of safety, the work of the Belgian roll is ruthless and thorough, missing no flaw, no weakness such as in service might remain hidden for years, perhaps even permanently.

The testing machine itself has been designed with evident circumspection so that it inflicts not a more or less regularly recurring set of impacts, twists and wrenchings, but a carefully determined variety of destructive forces, many of them meeting one another so as to induce the most telling effects on the chassis, body, springs, wheels and other parts of the car.

Though the test car is quite evidently anchored to the Belgian roll, few visitors venture very close to it, speculation as to what might happen—"if"—being their natural reaction.

ALL-WAVE AERIAL HELPS RECEPTION

Better Foreign Selection Achieved by Latest Philco Development.

The latest important step forward toward perfect foreign and short-wave radio reception is the new Philco all-wave areial, according to J. C. Brown, president of Brown Distributing Company, Philco distributors in this section.

The new all-wave aerial was developed after long research and experiment in the Philco engineering department and laboratories to provide a single aerial that would get maximum power on each of the five principal short-wave broadcast bands, Mr. Brown explained. Previously, perfect reception required an aerial of a different length for each of the five bands.

The new aerial brings in extremely faint signals with a minimum of atmospheric or man-made static and local electrical interference.

"Even with the most powerful set in the world, full benefit of world broadcasting cannot be enjoyed unless an aerial system is employed that is specially designed to bring in faint signals clearly," Mr. Brown explained.

"To have a powerful set without a highly sensitive aerial is like running a fine car on low-standard gasoline. In neither case can you realize full power. So that owners of Philco radios might get everything these sets are capable of giving, Philco designed this new all-wave areial. A new Philco installed with a new Philco all-wave aerial is, I believe, the greatest distance-getting combination in the world," Mr. Brown asserted.

PLAYERS TO GIVE COLLEGE COMEDY

Emory Group Presents "The Goose Hangs High" Next Friday.

The Emory University Players will present as their fall production Lewis Beach's comedy of college life, "The Goose Hangs High," Friday, 8:30 p. m., in Glenn Memorial church.

Popular with both professional and amateur groups, the play ran for a year in New York, several months in Boston, and has been played by stock companies throughout the United States. Considered by critics to be the best of its type produced during the past 20 years, it has been chosen to close the annual Parents' Day program, since it deals with the ideals and thoughts of the modern college student.

"We are unusually fortunate this year," said Dr. Garland G. Smith, director of the players, "in having a veteran cast for the play and are expecting to put on one of the most finished productions given at Emory."

Heading the cast is Sam Shiver, star of last year's hit, Channing Pollock's "The Fool." Juvenile parts will be played by George Downing, Helen Aikin Smart, Ed Pendleton and Josephine Calhoun. Polly Vaughn, Agnes Scott, will have the character role of the grandmother, and Eloise Hopkins will portray the self-sacrificing mother. Others in the cast are Joe Crawley, Charles Cowart, Fred Wilson and Christy Harp.

Ford Makes Millionth V-8 in Ten Months

Late last year Henry Ford electrified the industrial and financial world by announcing that, in 1935, he would build 1,000,000 Ford cars. His statement was accepted throughout the world as sound assurance that American industry was at last pulling out of the depression. On October 31, this year, the 1,000,000th car built since January 1 came down the assembly line at the great River Rouge plant of the Ford Motor Company at Dearborn, Mich. Photo above shows Edsel B. Ford, president of the company, driving the 1,000,000th car off the line, accompanied by his father.

1936 Studebakers Are Built To General Public's Specifications

The Studebakers of 1936, now appearing in public for the first time, may truthfully be said to approximate the ideal American automobile. They were literally built to "specifications" furnished by the motorists themselves.

Many months ago the men who make up the management of the new Studebaker Corporation, all of them Studebaker veterans, decided that the Studebakers of 1936 must meet public demand as closely as was humanly possible. Consequently, a prolonged and extensive survey of drivers' desires and dictates was made. Thousands of drivers, young and old, men and women, were questioned. Their answers were carefully recorded.

Do you prefer hydraulic brakes? How fast do you want to drive? Do you like the extreme tear-drop design? What price is best suited to your purse and your preference? These and scores of other questions were asked. The questioning went on all spring and summer and up to less than two months ago. No section of the country, nor type of motorists was neglected.

Finally, with the study completed and the answer to the question, "what does the driver want?" in hand, Studebaker produced its new models for 1936. The first few hours of the automobile show indicate that these new cars will be unusually popular.

The Studebakers of 1936 appear in two groups. The Dictator and the President. The President is a de luxe automobile, designed, styled and trimmed by Miss Helen Dryden, famous New York artist and decorator, and is by far the most beautiful and luxurious automobile ever produced by Studebaker.

Each of the two groups of Studebakers will have the following body models: Three-passenger coupes, five-passenger coupe, St. Regis custom two-door sedan, St. Regis cruising two-door sedan, custom four-door sedan, cruising four-door sedan and convertible roadster. "Custom" sedans have a large baggage space in the rear. $n "Cruising" sedans this space is still larger. The models mentioned are five-wheel cars with the extra wheel carried inside a baggage compartment. Six-wheel "side-mount" models are available. Five-wheel "side-mount" models are available on the Dictator with extra wheel carried.

The Dictator is powered with a new six-cylinder engine. The President has an eight-cylinder engine. Both have greater acceleration, higher top speeds and more economy than their predecessors.

Body designers who have studied the Studebakers of 1936 have pronounced them the "cleanest" of modern streamline designs; yet the cars do not possess the radical contours of the unpopular "tear-drop" models. They are ultra-modern in every respect, yet will not offend those who prefer to have their automobiles "look like automobiles."

The glistening chromium-plated radiators are narrow, slim and gracefully curved. They sweep outward and down into one-piece, fenders of deep and efficient air-foil designs. Hoods are high and narrow and flow swiftly to the body proper, merging with delightful simplicity into divided windshield and panels of the one-piece, steel-reinforced-by-steel bodies. Body roofs are solid steel and of one piece. Rear contours swing down to the wide chromium bumpers with the symmetry of modern streamlining. There is genuine beauty in these rear contours and all models have generous baggage space with spare wheels carried inside or in fender wells. When spare wheels are mounted in fender wells baggage space is increased accordingly. Windows are broad and blend into the swift-running body lines.

Studebaker engineers state that the solid steel roof panels of the 1936 models require the largest single steel stamping ever produced for an automobile. This steel panel extends from the rear of the hood to the top of the trunk and rear end compartment and is fused to side panels with electric arc, producing a single sphere of steel, reinforced by many steel box sections giving the entire body great strength. Except for the floor of the front compartment there is no wood used in the Studebaker bodies. It is believed that this type of engineering has produced the safest bodies in motordom.

A new type of insulation has been adopted by Studebaker. It is made of laminated, asphalt treated, "deadening" fabric compressed to 3-4 of an inch in thickness, and produces an unusual effect of solidity. Rapping Studebaker roofs with one's knuckles reminds one of rapping on an office safe. In addition, the insulation offers protection against heat and cold. Floor boards and cowl panels between driving compartments and engine compartments are also efficiently insulated. No competitive automobiles have been insulated as thoroughly as the 1936 Studebakers.

Those who study both body and chassis details of the 1936 Studebakers will find many heretofore unmentioned features that are new to the public, although old to Studebaker engineers. Also will "yard-stickers" renew acquaintance with many time-tried-and-proved fundamentals of Studebaker building.

Among the new devices that are given to motorists for the first time on the 1936 Studebakers is the automatic "hill-holder," a feature that is adequately described by its name. Automatic "hill-holders" permit drivers, whose cars are stopped on an upgrade, to remove their right foot from the brake pedal without the car backing down hill. Thus, the driver may apply his foot to the accelerator as the clutch is let in. This device seems certain to find many friends, especially among feminine drivers.

Studebaker engineers have devised a new rubber mounting of engines, which cradles them more efficiently and reduces engine vibrations to a minimum. It also eliminates wobble of gear shifts. New stiffness has been added to Dictator frames by the adoption of a "keystone arch" construction at the front. New fuel line location and insulation provides the most complete protection against "vapor lock" ever found on automobiles. Starting efficiency has been increased by a reduction in the gear between the starter and the flywheel. Cooling and muffling efficiency have been increased.

Upon entering President models, the eye is instantly attracted by the severely modern instrument panel Miss Dryden has created. Three bars of chromium extend across the panel horizontally, forming a background for instruments, control knobs and parcel compartment. Instruments, unusually legible because of their simplicity, are grouped at the left of the panel. The speedometer is a large round dial with distinct figures. At its left are the oil pressure gauge and the electric gasoline gauge; at its right are the ammeter and the engin heat indicator. At the right of the panel is the large glove or small-parcel compartment. Light switch, throttle, starting control and illuminated ignition switch are in the center of the panel, where an ash receiver is also found. Windshield crank and mono-control for twin windshield wipers are above the "control" group.

The upholstery coverings of seats, doors, side panels and roofs of Presidents are in two shades of soft tweed cloth chosen and arranged by Miss Dryden following the latest style treatment of living room furniture. The tailoring of this upholstery follows the same severe style of the instrument panel. Metal window trim is of lacquer and slender strips of chromium have been used on the doors to blend with the glistening chromium hardware. Door handles and window raisers are arranged to "point" in the same direction, adding greatly to the beautiful simplicity of the entire design.

Other items of luxury include an electric cigaret lighter in the back and front seat, assist cords, neatly framed rear vision mirror, a Dryden-designed robe rail, ash receivers in rear quarter panels, an 18-inch, three-spoke Phantom steering wheel lacquered to harmonize with garnish mouldings, two windshield cleaners, two swinging type sun visors, arm rests in both front and rear compartments, dome light controlled by pillar switch and automatic electric light in luggage compartment.

All President front seats are easily adjustable, with a "run" of 4 inches. Two conch type of horns are found on these models and two rear traffic signal lights are also included. Bumpers are 4 1-2 inches wide and chromium-plated. Exterior hardware blends beautifully with the entire streamline design of the bodies. Radiator and rear panel medallions designed by Miss Dryden give these cars distinctive identification.

RETAIL TRADE UP

Merchants Expecting Winter Weather Sale Boost.

Retail trade rose slightly in the sale: column while bank clearings and steel production slumped in the sixth federal reserve district this week.

While merchants said they had "nothing to complain about," they still were hoping for winter weather to step buying up to an expected fast pace.

Bank clearings declined from $48,100,000 a week ago to $47,000,000 this week, as recorded by the Federal Reserve Bank here.

Though rail orders in Birmingham totaled 25,000 for the week, steel production dropped 8.7 points to 58 per cent of capacity.

MAYOR KEY PROCLAIMS THIS AS "CHEESE WEEK"

Calling on Atlantans "to do their part toward the growth of dairying in the state of Georgia," Mayor Key yesterday declared this week cheese week in Atlanta.

The date conforms to National Cheese Week, the third annual event of its kind to be observed throughout the country.

The proclamation signed by the mayor points out that few American industries can claim the enviable record set by dairying and cheese-making in the south during the past decade. He asserted it is fitting Atlanta should assume leadership in promotion of National Cheese Week.

BUICK DEALERS REPORT BRISK FALL BUYING

Introduction of New Cars Before Christmas Seen as Boon to Business.

FLINT, Mich., Nov. 9.—What the automobile industry may expect in the way of sales from the introduction of its new models at the coming automobile show, is forecast by Buick retail deliveries, which continued to climb in the second 10 days of October. According to figures just released by W. F. Hufstader, general sales manager, Buick delivered in that period 4,367 cars, topping the first 10 days of the month, and als setting the highest 10-day record in the past four and a half years. This figure is almost three times the deliveries for the same period in 1934, and is the largest second 10 days in October since 1929.

"You cannot get a real picture even from such figures as these," said Mr. Hufstader, "for they are limited by our ability to produce new cars. Orders are considerably ahead of production, and if enough cars could have been built and shipped, these past 10 days would have set an all-time record. The public is certainly in a buying mood, and the impressive fact is that people are not even waiting for the automobile show to make up their minds."

Some safety shoes made for workmen have steel toe caps that will stand 1,250 pounds before deflecting a quarter of an inch.

High Tribute Is Paid Flyer By Local Gulf Manager

High tribute to Major Alford J. Williams, one of America's outstanding airmen, and probably the industry's most dynamic character, is paid by C. E. Shepard, district sales manager of the Gulf Refining Co., which, with Eastern Air Lines and Davison & Paxon, is sponsoring the model plane contest and spectacular air demonstration at Candler field Armistice Day afternoon.

In an interview yesterday afternoon, Mr. Shepard revealed that Major Williams, who is to feature the airport program by a stirring series of aerial maneuvers, bomb dropping and exhibit of two-way ground-to-plane radio communication, has achieved his present high rank in aeronautical annals by a continual application of his many talents to his chosen life's work—aviation.

In reviewing Major Williams' career to date, Mr. Shepard stated: "Al Williams, as he is known from coast to coast, was born in New York city, July 26, 1896. He is a graduate of Fordham University, with an A. B. degree. He pitched for the New York Giants for two years, serving under the famous John J. McGraw. He left the diamond to enlist as a naval aviator for the duration of the World War.

"Major Williams found that he was especially adapted to aerial maneuvers, and was soon specializing in testing planes for the navy, and developing aerial acrobatics for use in air fighting. While serving as a naval aviator, he nevertheless found time and energy to graduate from Georgetown University evening law school, with a degree of bachelor of laws, and is a member of the bar in New York state.

"Incidentally, Major Williams came to Georgia for his bride, the former Florence Hawes Selby, of Bainbridge.

"From 1926 to 1930, when he resigned from the navy, Major Williams specialized in high-speed research. For eight consecutive years he held the American speed record.

"As a permanent testimonial to his invaluable services to his country, he was awarded, in 1929, the distinguished flying cross, a citation prepared on this occasion by the secretary of the navy, reading: 'Lieutenant Williams has many times undergone risk of his life, above and beyond the call of duty, for the benefit of both the personnel and material of the service. Up to 1925 he performed this duty without the aid of a parachute, under conditions where a serious crash was to be expected. He flew in one plane out of control to complete destruction in his determination to elicit information of value to the service on the vital subject of flat spinning of service aircraft. His constant association with test and development work has been occasioned by the desire of the chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics to continue him in a position where the navy could get the most benefit of his experience and ability. The standard combat plane reflects many of the improvements pioneered in racing by Lieutenant Williams.

"'From 1922 on,' continues the citation, 'Lieutenant Williams has played a major part in keeping the navy to the fore in heavier-than-air development, both nationally and internationally. In his articles written for the public he has shown himself to be a scholar as well as a master pilot, and the beneficial effect on the public mind of his example, his clear exposition and his loyalty to the service has been great, and it has reflected untold credit to the service. In considering the awards of the flying cross which have been made, and in considering the purpose of the award, few cases appear, in my opinion, to have been any more deserving than the flying record of Lieutenant A. J. Williams'."

Mr. Shepard further pointed out that Major Williams has been awarded a trophy by the American Society of Mechanical Engineers "in recognition of services rendered to aeronautics."

Aside from his executive work as manager of aviation sales for the Gulf Refining Co., Major Williams contributes to national weekly and aviation trade magazines; writes a daily newspaper column for junior air enthusiasts, broadcasts a weekly talk on aviation, and is a member of the faculty school of the University of Pittsburgh, lecturing on aeronautical engineering.

Major Williams, who has the only privately owned Curtiss Hawk in this country, was promoted to his present rank in the United States marine corps reserve on April 24, 1935.

"Always to be found in the front ranks of aeronautical pioneering, Major Williams is now devoting intensive study to the development of radio communication in flying," concluded Mr. Shepard. "His demonstration here next Monday will include a vivid example of just how radio is bringing about a great forward step in aerial transportation."

NEWS of STAGE and SCREEN

'Mutiny on the Bounty' at Grand Is Lavish, Thrilling Presentment

"Mutiny on the Bounty" recreates today an historic event of 150 years ago. The film, now at Loew's Grand theater, presents Charles Laughton, Clarke Gable and Franchot Tone in principal parts, with such distinguished players as Henry Mundin, Dudley Digges, Donald Crisp, Henry Stephenson and Francis Lister in smaller parts. It is a compelling, atmospheric drama of life asea, reflecting to the age when man revolted against remorseless tyranny and declared himself for the principals of justice and equality and fraternity.

The era that saw the American and the French revolutions, and the establishment of new governments in many parts of the world, was the time when the crew aboard H. M. S. Bounty mutinied against the cruelty of their captain, creating a national crisis which brought about a reform in conditions aboard ships the world over, and established a new day in maritime life.

The film opens with the sailing of the ship Bounty from London. It is bound for Tahiti, on a scientific expedition. Captain Bligh (Charles Laughton) is an efficient captain, but he is a tyrant whose inhuman treatment of his crew becomes immediately apparent. Fletcher Christian (Clarke Gable), first mate of the Bounty, is hard put to quiet the men, incited by Bligh's mistreatment. Aboard ship is young Roger Byam (Franchot Tone), son of a long line of distinguished seamen. This is his first sea voyage, and Bligh soon disillusions him about the life at sea.

By the time the Bounty touches the island of Tahiti, the men are in open rebellion. Their reception ashore, where the girls greet them amorously, makes the return voyage seem even more intolerable. The crew, witnessing the death of two of their number, at Bligh's hands, mutiny, put the captain and his followers into an open boat and sail the Bounty to Pitcairn's islands, where they establish a new life. Their descendants live there today.

Lavishly produced, "Mutiny on the Bounty" catches all the drama, all the color, and all the romance of this actual event, reviving it with a freshness and reality no other medium has at its command. Brilliantly directed and acted, this drama will rank with the very finest and most authentic films of the year, and it will provide an evening of intense entertainment for every spectator.

Rialto Has 'A Feather in Her Hat' Remarkably Human Production

Columbia Pictures Corporation has achieved a remarkable piece of human interest in its production of "A Feather in Her Hat," the current feature at the Rialto theater.

Taking an excellent story by an excellent novelist, I. A. R. Wylie, and placing it in the competent hands of one of Hollywood's really good directors, Alfred Santell, they have given us a picture that is of that hauntingly appealing character it will remain in memory long after other, and perhaps more flamboyant, films have been forgotten.

One of the most perfectly selected casts in months is headed by Pauline Lord and includes also Basil Rathbone, Louis Hayward, Billie Burke, Wendy Barrie, Victor Marconi, Thurston Hall, J. M. Kerrigan and other completely competent portrayers of true-to-life roles.

The story is that of a mother, an impotent sort of a nobody who runs a book store in the shabby East End of London. Her one ambition in life is that her child, a boy, shall become "a gentleman." To this end she puts up with a worthless and drunken ex-army officer as a roomer in her home, believing he will be a good influence on the boy.

Then, when the son is 21, she tells him she is not his real mother, that he is truly the son of a famous actress. The boy has ambitions to become a playwright and the bookstore keeper, through unhesitating sacrifice, helps him to achieve his ambition.

The climax is utterly moving in dramatic intensity. The boy's play is successfully produced with the woman he has been told is his mother in the leading role. And the little bookstore keeper watches his success from the front row of the theater gallery.

When triumph is assured, when the boy and the girl he loves are in each other's arms, the woman in the gallery is stricken. The boy comes to her side and, finding that he knows she lied about his parentage, that he knows she is really his mother, she dies utterly happy in his success and his love.

Manager Murray has an excellent group of short subjects to supplement the feature and the program, which will remain through Thursday, is completely satisfying throughout.

Life Story of 'Diamond Jim' Brady Current Screen Feature at the Fox

"Diamond Jim," the colorful screen biography of James Buchanan Brady, the man who made the gay nineties gay, is more than pleasing the large audiences at the Fox theater. There will be a complete show today and Tuesday with a matinee Thursday. The city has reserved the theater for tomorrow and Wednesday and there will be no performances on those days. However, the theater will continue its regular schedule Thursday.

"Diamond Jim," from the standpoint of story, entertainment value, public interest and cast, is one of the greatest pictures ever made. Adapted by Preston Sturges, Parker Morell, its author, Harry Clark and Doris Malloy, it has every advantage in transportation from a best-selling novel to a screen play. In Edward Sutherland it has a talented, successful and sympathetic director, its cast having been carried out with the utmost care and precaution.

Edward Arnold, who portrays Diamond Jim, the man who wore two million dollars' worth of diamonds, who spent $100,000 on one party, who was the confidant of Lillian Russell and the Dolly Sisters, of statesmen and bank presidents, actually resembles the super-salesman.

Binnie Barnes, who is Lillian Russell, achieved international fame two years ago for her work in "Henry the Eighth," with Charles Laughton. The supporting cast includes Jean Arthur, Cesar Romero, Hugh O'Connell, Eric Blore and other well-known players.

On Thursday at 8:30 o'clock the Fox will hold a spectacular world premiere of Ctark Young's novel, "So Red the Rose." Atlanta Better Film Committee are the sponsors for this premiere. The theater will be completely transformed to the ante-bellum days, with attractive sub-debs in crinoline from Washington Seminary acting as ushers, and the G. M. A. band in colorful costumes playing southern airs.

One of the most attractive features of this entertainment will be prolog to the picture with Atlanta artists staging the opening scene.

This Is Exceptional Week Among Atlanta Screen Fans

'Hop-a-Long Cassidy' at Capitol; 'Manhattan Revue' on the Stage

Another big novelty program, both on the stage and screen, is in store for Capitol theater patrons, starting today. On the screen the management has booked the famous Clarence E. Mulford western story, "Hop-a-Long Cassidy" with William Boyd, Paula Stone and Jimmy Ellison. It is the plan of the producers to make a series of these pictures, based on the writings of Mulford and "Hop-a-Long Cassidy' is the first.

On the stage for the week, the Capitol will offer "Manhattan Revue," featuring a cast of 20 stage and radio stars, offering eight acts of vaudeville, including music, song and dance.

The increased orchestra, which was placed into the Capitol last week, has met with the hearty approval of the patrons, and again this week, Enrico Leide, musical director, will conduct the 15-piece stage band in a special overture, featuring music by Victor Herbert.

Outstanding performers with the stage unit, "Manhattan Revue," include Robert De Mont Trio, comedy acrobats; A Thousands Pounds of Harmony, famous quartet; Jerry and Joyce in some interesting dance steps; Ardis Joy, roping in rhythm; The Donnell Sisters, in novelty surprises; Ford Jarrell, the boy with a new twist; Sandy Morrison, comedy de luxe and The Six American Dancers.

This new stage show comes to the Capitol highly recommended and it is felt by the management that patrons will be well pleased with this new offering.

"Hop-a-Long Cassidy," the Capitol's screen feature, deals with the exciting adventures of the courageous "Hop-a-Long" and his two range-riding pals, in the days of the old lawless west when cattle barons and cattle rustlers fought for supremacy with a quick draw on a six gun. How "Hop-a-Long" and his buddies rounded up a desperado, ruthless gang of rustlers and avenge their crimes against honest ranch owners makes for heart-stirring drama and full-blooded action.

Drama of Long Ago at Paramount In Film, 'The Farmer Takes a Wife'

It is with another time, another era, that the film writers dealt when they wrote the script for Fox film's "The Farmer Takes a Wife," which is now at the Paramount theater. A period when a gangling America was growing up into an empire of steam and steel, when the narrow artery of the Erie canal bore the golden wealth of the west to the seaports of the east, when 20-mile-an-hour steam trains had just entered into a duel with the death with four-mile-an-hour canal barges.

Against this vital, pulsing background of a nation growing into its maturity, the picture tells the story of two lovers, Janet Gaynor and Henry Fonda, whose lives and fates were bound with the momentous happenings in the world about them.

Walter D. Edmonds first unearthed the chaotic, turbulent and glamorous period in his excellent novel, "Rome Haul," Elser and Connelly dramatized it in their hit stage production and now the camera gives it more scope, more of eloquence and the beauty of the natural scene in the Fox film production of "The Farmer Takes a Wife."

The 1850's are the period of the picture and Henry Fonda, a boy of the soil who yearns to own a farm of his own, had come to the canals seeking work. He is amazed at its life, its turbulence, its brawling, drinking men, and its lovely women, especially one Janet Gaynor.

He secures work as a boat driver and professes interest in Janet Gaynor, but Charles Bickford is anxious to do him battle for Miss Gaynor's affections and Fonda demurs.

Exciting times follow. Passage up the canal to Buffalo. Humorous escapades, fights, lovely landscapes. Soon Fonda owns half-interest in the boat, given him by his profligate captain who has just won a lottery prize, and Janet Gaynor is doing his cooking. The only rift in their romance is their diversion in allegiance; he loves the soil, she is a child of the waterways.

Then the inevitable occurs. Fonda and Bickford meet in battle and Fonda, to everyone's surprise, administers a sound thrashing to his enemy. And so the picture proceeds to its logical climax as the farmer takes his wife from the turbulent life of the canals to the poetic life of the soil.

COMMITTEE TO DECIDE ON SITES FOR MARKERS

Miss Ruth Blair, chairman of the Committee on Ancient Landmarks appointed last year by Governor Talmadge, yesterday called a meeting of the committee for 10 o'clock on the morning of November 20 at the Rhodes Memorial hall.

The committee will consider locations and wordings for 100 markers cast in bronze at Georgia Tech. The cost of transporting the markers to their locations must be borne by the communities receiving them.

Members of Miss Blair's committee are Mayor Thomas R. Gamble, of Savannah; Mrs. Joseph Lamar, of Macon; Mrs. Julian McCurry, of Athens, and Miss May Cabiness, of Forsyth.

HAWKINS' COLLEGIANS FOR SUNSET CASINO

Erskine Hawkins and his 'Bama State Collegians will make their first appearance in this city in two years, Tuesday night, November 19, at Sunset Casino. This orchestra is known throughout the country as the "hottest" in America.

For the past year they have been the featured attraction at the swank Ubangi Club in New York city.

Among the featured performers will be Erskine Hawkins, world's hottest trumpeteer; Jimmy Mitchell, Billy Daniels, crooner de luxe, and Avery Parrish.

A test made in one Illinois town showed that the dangerous carbon monoxide gas was present in 60 per cent of automobiles.

Communism on Football Gridiron Is Theme of Picture at Georgia

Communistic radicals on the football field. This is the disturbing situation which is brought to light in "Fighting Youth," the gridiron drama which starts at the Georgia theater tomorrow, starring Charles Farrell and with June Martel and Andy Devine in featured roles.

In the story the campus of State College is the scene of seething radical activities which finally find an outlet in the attempted disruption of the football team, on the theory that the game itself is Big Business, with the players simply pawns in the hands of those who are exploiting them for their own gain. Farrell, All-American star of the squad, is induced to attend a meeting of the Students' League of Freedom, and to express his sympathy with its but dimly-understood aims.

On the following Saturday the "glue-fingered" Farrell, who has not dropped a ball in three years, makes two costly fumbles which cause the loss of a traditional game, and the rumor spreads that he has deliberately "thrown" the contest. Subsequent events make of this thrilling picture an iluminating commentary on present-day conditions, in a screen-play filled with exciting events and intensely dramatic situations.

"Fighting Youth" was directed by Hamilton MacFadden, and the cast appearing with Farrell, Miss Martel and Devine includes J. Farrell MacDonald, Ann Sheridan, Eddie Nugent, Phyllis Fraser aind Murray Kinnell, as well as many such outstanding football stars as Jim Thorpe, Jim Purvis, Moon Mullins, Howard "Red" Christie and Dale Van Sickle. The story is based on an original idea by Stan Meyer.

When the gray squirrel population becomes too dense in a region to suit the squirrels, there is a huge migration with much excitement.

Earl Carroll's latest offering on tour, the newest edition of his famous Vanities, will be at the Erlanger theater Friday and Saturday, November 22 and 23.

The scenic production, in 45 scenes, is lavish and complete, as is always necessary for any edition of Vanities. The costuming is elaborate and the performance moves rapidly through the many scenes and displays various novel electrical effects.

The music is by Charles Gaskill and the dialogue by Eugene Conrad. The dances are staged by "Boots" McKenna and the entire production is under the personal direction of Earl Carroll.

BUCKHEAD OFFERS 5 GOOD FEATURES

Stage Show Added Attraction for Today and Monday Audiences.

Five good pictures will be shown at the Buckhead theater this week. Warner Brothers' sensational musical comedy, "Broadway Gondolier," with Dick Powell and Joan Blondell, is the picture for today and Monday. The story deals with the romance of a New York taxicab driver, who aspires to be a singer, and the secretary of a big broadcasting concern. In addition to the picture, Willie Kalimo and his Royal Hawaiians will appear on the stage three times daily.

Tom Brown and Anita Louise play the leading roles in "Bachelor of Arts," to be shown Tuesday. The cast includes Arlene Judge, Mae Marsh, Henry B. Walthall and Stepin Fetchit.

Wednesday offers "Black Sheep," a thrill-packed, fun-capped adventure mystery that dispenses laughs and suspense in equal measure. Edmund Lowe portrays a professional ship gambler. Claire Trevor, Adrienne Ames, Tom Brown and Eugene Pallette have important parts.

Richard Dix comes to the screen Thursday and Friday in a thrilling western, "The Arizonian."

The attraction for Saturday is "Hard Rock Harrigan," featuring George O'Brien at his best. A Charley Chaplin comedy and another chapter of "The Roaring West" with Buck Jones complete the bill.

Fox Offers Elaborate Program For Premiere of 'So Red the Rose'

The first real Hollywood premiere Atlantans have had the opportunity of witnessing will be staged at the Fox theater Thursday night at 8:30 o'clock when "So Red the Rose" starts its world premiere showing.

The theater will be transformed into the atmosphere of the romantic antebellum days as so vividly described in the Stark Young novel, while many premiere surprises have been planned by the management.

The Atlanta Better Films Committee, Mrs. Alva Maxwell, president, are sponsors of this premiere with Mrs. Alonzo Richardson as chairman of the committee in charge. Numbered among the honor guests for the evening are Governor and Mrs. Talmadge, Mayor Key, General Nash and the Confederate veterans, Mrs. Laurence Stallings, mother of Laurence Stallings, who adapted the book for the screen; Mrs. McD. Wilson, Mrs. Forrest Kibler and other U. D. C. presidents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Paine, the debutantes and their escorts, the officers of the Better Films Committee and many other leading Atlantans. The subdebs from Washington Seminary in erinoline costumes of the period will act as ushers.

One of the most attractive features of the evening's entertainment will be a beautiful atmospheric prologue to the picture staged by leading Atlantans. This prologue will be a replica of the opening scene of the attraction and is said to be so real in appearance that one can get a whiff of the famous mint julep which is served! The Confederate veterans will be there, the G. M. A. band, known throughout Georgia for its colorful music, will play famous southern airs of long ago, while a noted quartet adds atmosphere to the opening scene.

THREE FUN STARS IN FILM AT EMPIRE

Blondell, Farrell and Herbert Seen in "We're in the Money" Two Days.

Joan Blondell, Glenda Farrell and Hugh Herbert have been the source of riotous laughter in a number of pictures. Now they come back to an Atlanta screen in their latest talkie, "We're in the Money," today and Monday at the Empire theater, corner of Georgia avenue and Crew street. "March of Time" will be an added feature and this is the only community theater in Atlanta showing this interesting newsreel.

A love table started in America and ended in the South Sea Islands is billed for Tuesday with the showing of "Pursued," with Rosemary Ames, while Wednesday's feature will be that blood-curdling talkie, "The Back Room," starring Karloff. Here's the tale of a devil with a private graveyard. Tom Mix, plus Tony Jr., comes to the Empire in his first serial, "The Miracle Rider," and Chapter I shows that Tom can still put over some superb horsemanship.

Friday's offering will be "Front Page Woman," with Bette Davis, George Brent and Roscoe Karns. An added feature will be a "beauty contest" on the stage at 8 o'clock in the evening. A rip-snorting western talkie is billed for Saturday with the showing of "Straight From the Heart."

This is the first production by the new little theater group which already includes in its membership many of the better known and more experienced little theater players of Atlanta.

Gene Bergmann has been engaged to direct all productions for the club, which assures polished performances and a degree of work that will make it well worth while for all lovers of the spoken stage to make every effort to attend the productions.

Mr. Bergmann was a member of the Fulenwilder All-Star Players one of the most successful stock companies that ever played at the old Atlanta theater, when that house was the home of the legitimate in this city. He has had 21 years professional experience and now has two companies playing on tour at the leading colleges and universities of America, recognized as the leading dramatic organizations in this field.

Ruth Draper, head of the dramatic department of Washington Seminary has been elected president of the new Players Club and among the charter members who assisted in its organization are Mary Elizabeth Pinkston, Elizabeth L'Engle, Edna Rufty, Sterling Lanier, Jr., Leonard Coker, Jimmy Dougherty, Rowland Murray, Jr., Jack Pickard, Alice Armstrong, Hugo Stevens, Bill Rosamond, Byrd Strickland, Bett Morrill, Mrs. Morrill, Arnold Smith, Janet Richards and Verdery Boyd.

While all offerings by the club will be open to the public, depending entirely upon box office support for its maintenance, active participation in the productions is limited to members. There will be no sustaining memberships or sponsors to the club.

Membership is open to any resident of Atlanta or student in local colleges interested in the drama. Rehearsals are held on Thursday and Friday evenings and Sunday afternoons and all interested people are invited to attend these rehearsals.

The initial production of the clever Johnson comedy next Tuesday night is sponsored by the senior and junior classes at Washington Seminary, who have charge of the ticket sales. Tickets may be secured from any member of these classes or by telephoning Miss Draper or the seminary.

Great Ant Cities Deadly Menace To Farming Sections of Brazil

Georgian Visiting Latin America Finds Great Colonies of Huge Termites That Cover Thousands of Square Miles of Land.

This is the 40th in a series of articles on South American travel by the Rev. Henry Edward Russell, of McDonough, Ga.—Editor's Note.

LAVRAS, MINAS, Brazil, Oct. 2.—"Consider the ant." This is the injunction of the wisest of all men. In this land the ant must be considered for other reasons than those intended by Solomon. Literally, thousands of acres and even thousands of square miles are dotted with the hills erected by white ants or termites. These ant homes reach to a height of eight or ten feet in some instances and are almost as hard as concrete. In order to study the structure and occupants of one of these hills, considerable labor was necessary with a heavy ax before an opening could be made. The structure that appears solid from the outside is honey-combed with sleekly lined passages through which the white insects move. Farmers avoid them in the cultivation of their fields as though they were huge stumps.

REV. RUSSELL.

"If we do not finish the sauva, the sauva will finish Brazil." This statement is current throughout this section of the nation. The sauva is the most dreaded of the ant family to this people. A hill of the sauva ants will not rise above the ground more than two or three feet, but it will cover from 50 to 75 feet across the top. Organized activity is characteristic of each of these ant habitations. Lines of these ants were found bringing leaves to store in the underground insect city in order that they will mold and form a type of fungus that serves as the food of the ants.

Soldier ants move in and out among the laborers to secure their labor and safety. The soldier ant is about a half-inch long. The laborer is slightly smaller. The largest of the tribe is the female, or queen ant. This creature is fully an inch long and is possessed with a set of long shapely wings. It is spring down here and the ants are mating and moving to new localities, where they will establish other hills that will grow to full size unless they are destroyed.

In order to exterminate one hill of these ants it is necessary to have a regular blacksmith crank bellows and a sizeable load of poison—arsenic. A full day of pumping this poison into one city is necessary to be rid of the pests. The minister of agriculture has called upon the people to organize, as the ants have organized, in order to destroy these destroyers.

On the trip into the country where we saw these ants we had the good fortune to have the company of Dr. J. H. Wheelock, the president of the Lavras Agricultural College, one of the leading agricultural institutions in this country. Dr. Wheelock came to this country from far-away Iowa, married the daughter of one of the southern families that came here after '65 and has made this his home since.

While we were near the entrance of the subterranean ant metropolis watching the line of leaf-laden laborers carry their spoil below, where it was to be stored for future use, Dr. Wheelock uttered a shriek that any Apache on the warpath would be proud to claim as his own. Simultaneous with the yell he jumped into the air and tried to remain there. When he was back on the ground it was his task to remove one of the soldier ants from his leg. This vicious creature had cut a hole in his sock the size of a dime and had left a badly bleeding wound on the man's ankle. He had recently admonished us that these ants would eat your socks off if you were not careful. Some of these ants are said to prove fatal to man or beast that gets in their path. After seeing the blood that was brought by one bite from only one of these creatures, it is easy to accept this statement.

It is our good fortune to enjoy the hospitality of the home of Dr. and Mrs. Frank F. Baker during our stay here. Dr. Baker is the president of Gammon Institute, one of the foremost educational institutions of Brazil. Mrs. Baker was born in Commerce, Ga. She added that it was known as Harmony Grove then. Dr. and Mrs. Baker made their home in Hapeville for several years.

Thursday and Friday W. C. Fields will be seen on "The Man on the Flying Trapeze," with Mary Brian and Kathleen Howard. It is a laugh-filled comedy.

Warner Oland will be on the program for Saturday only as the world's greatest detective. The picture is "Charlie Chan in Egypt" and Oland is assisted by "Pat" Patterson and Stepin Fetchit.

POWELL, BLONDELL STARS AT DEKALB

"Broadway Gondolier" Offered Monday, Tuesday by Decatur House.

"Broadway Gondolier" is the feature picture of the DeKalb theater Monday and Tuesday, starring Dick Powell and Joan Blondell. The story is of a poor New York taxidriver, played by Dick Powell, who has a good voice and tries to get on the radio.

Wednesday brings "A Dog of Flanders," starring that famous child star Frankie Thomas with O. P. Heggie, Helen Parrish and "Lightning," the famous dog actor. The drama, pathos, childhood romance, comedy and appeal in this picture form an interesting vehicle.

Richard Dix is featured Thursday and Friday in "The Arizonian," with Margot Grahame, Preston Foster and Louis Calhern. "The Arizonian" centers around the dramatic theme of the frontier marshal and his fight for law and order.

Guy Kibbee and Zazu Pitts are two of Hollywood's best comedians, and when they combine their talents in the picture "Going Highbrow" at the DeKalb Saturday, they make a team unbeatable for laughs.

MUSICAL PICTURE OPENS HILAN WEEK

A fast moving story of excitement and danger, "Front Page Woman," featuring Bette Davis and George Brent will be on the screen at the Hilan Wednesday only.

Thursday and Friday Richard Arlen, Virginia Bruce, Bruce Cabot and Alice Brady will be seen in "Let 'em Have it" an amazing story of the truth about the "silent war" going on in America.

ABERCROMBIE LAUDS COUNTY 'HEALTH WEEK'

State Health Director Urges All Groups and Individuals To Aid Work.

Commendation of the program outlined for "Health Week" for Fulton county, the week of November 10-16, was expressed Saturday by Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, director of the State Department of Public Health, who declared "Health Week may be regarded as a milestone in the history of public health for the county."

"I heartily commend this program and appeal to all Fulton county citizens to unite their efforts to make the week a sincere and powerful endeavor to promote health, and urge the co-operation of every adult and child in making the week highly successful in its purpose," Dr. Abercrombie stated.

The program is being sponsored by county school and health authorities, Parent-Teacher associations, and the Fulton County Medical and Dental Societies, for the purpose of giving authoritative information as to the principles which govern good health and the factors which lead to its loss.

At the request of Superintendent Jere Wells, physicians and dentists will go from the medical and dental associations to speak at every school and parent-teacher association in the county during Health Week.

"It is paramount that each citizen should recognize the basic health problems and needs of Fulton county. It is essential that schools, homes and communities combine their efforts since all health progress must be made on a co-operative basis," the health director pointed out, adding further that "through the spirit of co-operative planning and working of schools, parents, health agencies, education and public health in Fulton county should raise the standard living for its youth and citizens."

THIS IS DIVORCE WEEK FOR SUPERIOR COURT

Difficulties of domestic life, known in legal terms as "cruel treatment," will be paraded in Fulton superior court this week as Judge Virlyn B. Moore hears the undefended divorce calendar for the November-December term.

Approximately 400 marriage vows of undying love will be severed as husbands and wives "tell it to the judge."

As is usual, habitual drunkenness is a principal cause of complaint, Old John Barleycorn is usually the third corner of the well known friangle and he is just as likely to be named as co-respondent by the husband as by the wife.

Nonsupport, cruel and inhuman treatment and desertion are other causes enumerated by the divorce seekers. Judge Moore will hear about 70 cases a day through the week.

CONSTRUCTION FIRM SUED BY ROAD BODY

The State Highway Board entered suit yesterday in Fulton superior court to recover $4,040 from the Cornell, Young Construction Company, of Macon.

The suit sets out that the highway board paid Mrs. H. M. Sweat, wife of a highway engineer, $4,040 after Sweat died of injuries he received while working on a project in June, 1934. The highway board contends that the Cornell, Young Construction Company contracted to insure workers and that the company should refund the money the state board paid to the widow.

The CONSTITUTION'S STAMP CORNER

By Albert C. Leitch

An Atlanta collector is the owner of the Ethiopian air mail cover shown here. With less than 5 per cent of the population able to sign their names, it may be realized that air mail in Ethiopia is extremely little. To add to the interest of this cover, the owner says, according to R. T. Freeman, of the Arcade Stamp Company, that it was flown by the Harlem negro, Herbert Julian, self-styled the "Black Eagle of Ethiopia." The "Eagle's" wings were shorn recently by the emperor.

The annual postage stamp exhibition in Atlanta will be held April 17 and 18, with the Stamp Collectors' Club of Atlanta and the Atlanta Stamp Society co-operating, it was announced last week.

The expenses of the exhibition will be undertaken by members of the clubs and more than 75 per cent of the required funds has already been pledged. Indications are that the coming exhibit will be one of the best ever seen here.

Requests have been made for all members of both clubs to pledge the exhibit of as many interesting frames as possible and the co-operation of non-affiliated collectors also is sought. Philatelists who desire to exhibit are requested to get in touch with W. A. Lyle, president of the Collectors' Club, at 28 Fulton street, S. W., or by phone, MAin 7060.

There is no better means of interesting prospective collectors than through stamp exhibits and all active philatelists in the city should co-operate to the utmost in this event.

ARMISTICE DAY PROGRAM FOR COLLECTORS' CLUB

Miss Elsie Hansen was named as attendance and membership chairman for November by the Collectors' Club at the last meeting. An Armistice Day program and open night will be the rule for the meeting tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in Room 227 of the Peachtree Arcade. All collectors are invited to attend.

The club's November program should be interesting with Major Charles T. Senay and Kenneth G. Bentz in charge. The major will officiate at the meeting November 18 and Mr. Bentz on November 25. Both of these members have provided attractive programs in the past.

ATLANTA STAMP SOCIETY WILL MEET IN ARCADE

The Atlanta Stamp Society will hold future meetings in the office of Karl Pathe, club secretary, Room 208, Peachtree Arcade, it was voted at the meeting last Thursday night.

The session was featured by an attractive circuit of stamps of British North America and the exhibition of Major Charles T. Senay's splendid collection of the stamps of the United States. An added attraction was the display of the three-volume collection of France and French colonies as shown by J. H. Jones Jr.

Major Senay has been appointed chairman of the program committee, it was announced, and some especially attractive programs are expected. Additional stamp circuits are looked forward to at the next meeting. All philatelists are invited.

ROOSEVELT SPOTS ERROR ON NEW CLIPPER STAMPS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Because of President Roosevelt's intimate knowledge of ships, the figure of an old Yankee clipper on a forthcoming issue of trans-Pacific air service stamps will have three masts instead of two.

The Bureau of Engraving recently did a rush job in preparing the plate for the stamp. After working all night, the engravers submitted their work to the President for approval. He spotted, in one corner, the Yankee clipper with only two masts. He suggested it should have three, and the plate was changed hastily.

The 25-cent stamp, which depicts the progress of trans-Pacific travel, will be run off in time for the inaugural flight, now set for November 22.

From the Washington Post the following stamp notes are reprinted:

Mexico has issued three new stamps called "insurance stamps." Yet it has not been announced just what sort of postage use the stamps will be put to, whether first-class mail, registered mail or parcel post or all three classes. There are three values and designs as follows: 10c vermilion showing a sealed package; 50c dark blue illustrating a mail bag, and 1p emerald green showing a safe. Each of the stamps are inscribed: "Correos Mexico" and "Segura Postal."

Mozambique has issued a new air mail series of 10 values, each stamp triangular in shape and of the same design, showing a monoplane over Beira. The values and colors: 5c blue and black, 10c red orange and black, 15c red and black, 20c green and black, 30c dark green and black, 40 green and black, 45c blue and black, 50c purple and black, 60c red and brown and 80 red and black.

Union of South Africa has issued a new value for its current series 1-2p green and black, with "Suid-Afrika" inscribed.

Tonga will soon issue another duty stamp of 1 1-2d in black and gray with a portrait of the queen.

GEORGIA WORKER WINS AWARD FOR WEAVING

Work of Miss Christine Wardlow, of Austell, on Exhibit at Newark.

Under the auspices of the Girls' Athletic Association of the Clark's O. N. T. Thread Mill, Ogden street, Newark, N. J. a Needlework Contest was held last week, open to employees and their families, of the two Clark Mills in Newark and Austell, Georgia, and the allied J. & P. Coats Mill in Pawtucket, Rhode Island. The winning articles, including thirty objects which got honorable mention, are on exhibit at the Y. W. C. A. on Washington Street, Newark, from November 6 to November 13.

There were 201 entries, comprising all types of needlework, including sewing, tatting, knitting, crocheting, quilting and embroidery. The exhibit ran from small doilies and baby's bootees, to dresses, suits and bedspreads. There was a series of prizes for each class, and a general prize for the best article in the exhibit regardless of class.

One of the outstanding entries was a piece of embroidery. The subject was a French cathedral, and the embrodiery was done in imitation of a fine etching. The work was done with a single strand of six-strand embroidery floss, and the threads are woven in the manner of the fine strokes of an etcher. At a distance of two feet the effect is exactly that of an etching. This picture was the work of Miss Christine Wardlow, of Austell, Ga., and won first prize in the weaving group. There were several other examples of painting pictures with a needle, the first time that such articles have been submitted in the contest.

Mrs. Tipping, of the Pawtucket Mill, won the special all-round prize, as well as first prize in the bedspread group for her lovely crocheted spread. Mrs. Ray Hovell of Bloomfield, won first prize in the knitting group of her two-piece sports dress, and second prize went to Mary Mickle, of Arlington, also for a two-piece dress. First prize in crocheting went to Miss Pauline Szadiewicz, of Harrison, for a crocheted dress, and second prize went to a linen dinner cloth with crocheted inserts, made by Mrs. E. Brooke of Pawtucket.

First prize in the tatting group went to Miss Alice Mellor of Kearny, N. J., for a luncheon set, and second prize to Mrs. Van Dorn of Newark for a tatted doily.

First prize in embroidery went to Mrs. Anthony Janiec, of Pawtucket for a blouse, and second prize to Miss Mary Buchman, of Newark, for a chair set done in cut work.

EMPLOYER COERSION IS CHARGED BY FARLEY

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 9.—(AP) A charge by Postmaster General Farley that "an organized attempt" was under way "to coerce the working people" was coupled tonight with a defense of the administration put before Connecticut democrats by himself and Attorney-General Cummings.

Both of the cabinet officers praised the work of President Roosevelt and hit at critics of heavy administration spending. The postmaster-general's charges, however, attracted more than a little attention.

"Yours is a great industrial state," Farley said. "It also happens to be a state in which reside a large number of people of great wealth who either dominate or are associated with important financial establishments which for one reason or another have declared their hostility to President Roosevelt and their opposition to his policies.

"There has come to my attention a number of letters addressed to their employes by the heads of certain enterprises that are obviously intended to influence the votes of these employes. To put it bluntly, there is an organized attempt to coerce the working people."

WILL ROGERS DRIVE OPENS IN MARIETTA

Russell Grove Is Named Local Chairman by Candler, State Campaign Head.

Russell Grove has been appointed local chairman of the Will Rogers Memorial Commission for Marietta, Colonel John H. Candler, of Atlanta, state chairman of the commission, announced yesterday.

Mr. Grove is now forming a local executive committee to conduct the campaign in Marietta and vicinity. Members of this committee will preside over subcommittees in charge of various aspects of the drive.

Jesse Draper, chairman of Atlanta's committee, announced chairmen of his committees yesterday and stated that he was "delighted with the success of the drive thus far."

"It is remarkable how the fund is increasing," he said. "People are going out of their way to make their contributions. Some seem to think that contributions should be $5 or something like that, but we want to work along the 'widow's mite' basis. No sum is too small."

Committee chairmen for Atlanta are Oscar Strauss, Jr. and Baxter Maddox, for large firms and corporations; Mrs. Max Land, women's committee; William K. Jenkins, theaters, and Joe Laube, publicity. Mr. Draper said a chairman for a school committee would be appointed shortly.

The object of the campaign, which will end Thanksgiving Eve, is to obtain the largest possible number of gifts from the millions who admired the cowboy-humorist. Contributions may be made to any bank in the country. With the fund the commission will erect some living memorial to the memory of Rogers.

Joe Bob Mitchell On 10-Yard Dash

Ace Tiger Runner Gains 113 Yards

Joe Box Mitchell, a fast-stepping junior from Alexander City, Ala., is shown above on a wide sweep after cutting off his left tackle early in the game against Tech yesterday at Grant field, Mitchell, who gained 113 yards, made 10 yards on this play. The picture gives a clear idea of what kind of blocking the Auburn runners were gettting. There are two players ahead of Mitchell and there is trouble ahead for Dutch Konemann (27), who has his hands out in an effort to ward off the blockers. It was a spectacular ball game with Auburn turning on the power in the last half to win the most decisive game in the series since 1913. The score that year was Auburn 27, Tech 0. Auburn won yesterday, 33 to 7. More than 14,000 spectators, Tech's largest home crowd of the year, was present to see Coach Meagher's powerful Plainsmen come into their own. They stand today as one of tthe south's most able teams. Staff photo by George Cornett.

Powerful Auburn Overwhelms Tech

Mitchell Is Leading Ground-Gainer; Kilgore Scores Twice; Gilbert, Gantt, Paterson Star.

By Jack Troy.

The extravaganza that was the 39th game of tre Auburn-Tech series yesterday afternoon at Grant field resulted in the most decisive victory in modern years for the invading Tigers of the Plains, winners over the Jackets, 33 to 7, before a crowd of more than 14,000.

It has been 23 years since an Auburn Poly team has been able to so thoroughly subdue an eleven representing the Tech School of Engineering. The Tigers of 1913 defeated the Jacket eleven of that year, 27 to 0.

There were two reasons for such a decisive score. The first was the Auburn team, just now reaching its peak of performance. The other was the condition of the Tech team, playing as many as eight sophomores in the lineup at one time. The Rambling Wreck came up with a flat, so to speak, after expending the top in energy and endeavor against Vandy the week before.

This would have meant little to the Jackets had there been reserves available to rest the weary regulars. But there are few reserves at the Flats this year and the boys who have been carrying the burden deserve great credit. The human frame can stand only so much. Tech missed Charley Preston's defensive strength back of the line.

NOT AN ALIBI.

This is not to be construed as in the nature of an alibi for Tech. Auburn today has one of the best teams in the south. And the Auburn team of yesterday deserved to win by the score it did.

Coach Jack Meagher has done a

L. S. U. Defeats Maroons, 28-13; Maintain Lead

BATON ROUGE, La., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Mixing a powerful running attack with passes, Louisiana State University today ran up four touchdowns in the first half to Beat Mississippi State, the conquerors of Army, 28 to 13. About 25,000 persons saw the game.

Louisiana State started the game with a driving bang, uncorking the running power that supporters had complained was missing in earlier season clashes and in eight plays rushed the ball from their 35-yard line over the goal. Reed, stocky back, scored on a 19-yard right end dash.

Early in the second period, Crass, subbing for Mickal, sliced 7 yards off tackle to the Mississippi State's 23 and from there Fatheree started a left end sweep and without changing pace passed to Barrett on the goal line for the second L. S. U. touchdown.

Both points being kicked after the markers placed the score at 14 to 0.

Soon afterward Armstrong of State, shot one from the 25-yard line to Walters, who stepped over the goal. Armstrong kicked the point.

THIRD SCORE.

Louisiana came back quickly with line-cracking plays, and Crass broke through a tackle hole for 47 yards and a touchdown and kicked the point.

Maroon line plays were stopped cold and gaps opened in their forward wall, and they were powerless to check Rohm, (sub for Fatherree) on a 20-yard touchdown skirt around left end. Mickal converted. Armstrong's brilliant passing kept the Louisianans partly in check and defensive work by him, Hardison, Steadman and others prevented any more tallies, while the Maroons hung up a second touchdown when Armstrong passed 40 yards to Ward, who stepped two more over the line.

The victory was the kind that Louisiana State supporters have been yelling for since the Purple Tigers trounced Texas two touchdowns in the second game of the season.

COHESION PRESENT.

Coach Bernie Moore seemed to have at last gotten the cohesion between forwards and backs. And the blocking he has been trying to develop, and his men turned in charging and speed that the Mississippians couldn't stop until near the end of the game, and it did then only by desperate tightening when the Louisianans neared the goal.

Armstrong won the plaudits of Louisiana backers as a passer on a par with their Abe Mickal, and the Maroon receivers, Walters, end, and Ward, back, both reserves, were always in position. Only desperate Louisiana air defense kept the Mississippians from scoring more than two TULANE STADIUM, NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 9.—I found several managers of hotels, all friends of mine, in a state bordering on happy collapse this morning.

The Colgate football game here last week drew a large crowd. They were followed by the American Dental Society in convention. Last night the Texas Christian University team was in town with a lot of Texas people. Today the dentists check out and the American Bankers' Association is convening on the town along with the Georgia-Tulane game.

Try and get a room! The managers are a bit exhausted, and near collapse. But happy. It seems it is a custom here for the managers to stage little parties for their convention guests. And the managers are worn to a frazzle.

But this really is the story of a small-town banker who arrived today from near Des Moines, Iowa. It is the story of the man from Iowa. He had lunch at the table in front of me at Galatoire's. His host was a New Orleans banker.

"I am going to introduce you to some real food," said the New Orleans banker. "And we are going to start it with a New Orleans cocktail, a sazerac."

"All right," said the man from Iowa, "but we have some pretty good food in Des Moines. The pot roast at the Elite Lunch—"

The man from New Orleans shuddered and raised his hand.

"Don't mention pot roast in here," he said, "they would not like it."

"Well, I don't care," said the man from near Des Moines. "The breaded pork chops at the City Cafe are very good."

The New Orleans man shuddered again, and at that very moment the waiter arrived with the sazerac cocktails.

"They taste like licorice," said the man from Iowa.

"Bring two more," said the New Orleans banker.

"I am going to order you," said the New Orleans banker, "a cap of crawfish gumbo. And then come a half dozen oysters Rockefeller. And then some trout margery."

"The fried red snapper at the Bon Ton Beanery is swell," said the man from Iowa.

"Drink this," said the man from New Orleans, as the second round of sazerac cocktails arrived. He gulped his.

"Did you say the Bon Ton Beanery?" he asked.

Irish Title Hopes Ruined, Wildcats Score Upset, 14-7

By Paul Mickelson.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 9.—(AP) Notre Dame's new wonder team of football, perched on the highest peak since the days of its immortal Knute Rockne, fell into the ruins of an almost unbelievable 14-to-7 defeat today.

Northwestern, a team that hasn't been able to win more than one Big Ten game this season and a university that hasn't boasted of a triumph over the fighting Irish in 34 long years, accomplished the stunning upset amidst a setting of rain and twilight before 35,000 spectators who hardly realized it was true.

WILDCATS RALLY.

Trailing by 7 points the Wildcats rushed back to tie the score in the second period, added another touchdown in the third, and then stood like a Gibraltar as the fighting Irish fought back with the same full fury that brought them from nowhere to victory over Ohio State a week ago.

The defeat, scored by Northwestern's "iron man" backfield, Wally Cruice, Steve Toth, Hugh Duvall, and Slippery Don Heap, turned the happiest Notre Dame football dream in five years into a nightmare. All hopes of a national championship to match the last Rockne model of 1930 and a place in the Rose Bowl went tumbling.

Paul Tangora, a senior guard from Washington, D. C., was the hero of heroes in the Wildcat camp. As the fighting Irish played the center of the line, Paul was sent in to stop them and he did it.

Then in the final period, he pounced on Wally Fromhart's fumble to set in motion the winning drive from the enemy's 30-yard stripe. Tangora also recovered another fumble on the Notre Dame 33 to give his mates a chance, but they couldn't cash.

Furman Remains Unbeaten in S. C.

GREENVILLE, S. C., Nov. 9.—(UP)—Scoring in all periods but the fourth, Furman crushed Wofford, 29 to 0, today to remain undefeated in South Carolina.

Playing in chill, damp weather before 3,000 spectators, Furman jumped into a lead by a safety in the first few minutes and never was threatened. The Furman safety came when King tackled Anderson, of Wofford, behind the goal line as he tried a punt.

Tulane Subdued By Georgia Rally

Last-Quarter Attack Nets Bulldogs Two Touchdowns; Alf Anderson Big Hero.

By Ralph McGill.

TULANE STADIUM, NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 9.—Striking with courage as red as the jerseys they wore, Georgia's football legions here this afternoon scored 13 points in the final quarter to beat a gallant Tulane eleven, 26 to 13.

It was a wild and reckless game in which the boys tossed caution to the four winds and gambled all they had with every play they knew.

It was a game which produced five minutes of the most spectacular football ever played in the south as the Tulane eleven scored two touchdowns and kicked one point after touchdown in the final five miutes of the third quarter to tie the score at 13 and 13.

It looked then as if they might have turned the wild tide of victory definitely their way, but the Bulldogs from Georgia came back with a furious and determined attack which earned two touchdowns and a point for them to make the margin of victory a convincing one.

GEORGIA ALERT.

This was an alert Georgia team. It hawked the ball all the way and it was this hawking of the ball which led to the first two touchdowns.

This also was an alert Tulane team and it capitalized on the two breaks to score its two third-quarter touchdowns.

It was the nimble and alert Alf Anderson who intercepted a pass in the fourth quarter to lead to one Georgia touchdown and it was a

OLE MISS LOSES TO VOLS, 14 TO 13

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 9.—(AP)—With the bullet passes of a slender substitute halfback, Tennessee's Volunteers stormed up the victory trail today with a Garrison finish that left a crowd of 12,000 breathless and shattered the hopes of Mississippi for a Southeastern conference championship, 14 to 13.

In two swift thrusts, both engineered by Woodrow Derryberry, understudy for Tennessee's great Phil Dickens, the Vols blasted their way for touchdowns and converted the precious extra points that kept intact their unbroken string of victories over Ole Miss teams.

After wilting under the crushing thrusts of a 232-pound fullback, Clarence Hapes, the Vols launched an attack as they saw an early 7-point lead fade.

ROGERS SCORES.

The man-mountain, unaided, took the ball on Tennessee's 28-yard line in the third quarter and, methodically, literally heaved the Tennessee line back. Then Rab Rogers, chunky halfback, in the opening minute of the fourth quarter, went through right tackle standing up from the 1-yard line for a touchdown.

A substitute end, Red Maxwell, crashed through to block the attempted kick and Tennessee led, 7 to 6.

Tennessee had scored early in the first quarter. Taking the ball on their own 20-yard line, the Vols marched to the Ole Miss 5. There, Derryberry faded for a pass, pivoted and slashed through left tackle for the touchdown. J. Craig's placement was good. After Ole Miss' first scare the Mississippians rushed the ball to the Vols' 25. Then Roy Hapes, on a reverse, tore through right tackle for a touchdown. This time Richard-

Eddie Moore Signed To Manage Champion Crackers Again in 1936

CRACKER PILOT DID GREAT JOB LAST CAMPAIGN

Earl Mann Off For League Meet

Earl Mann, president of the Atlanta Baseball Corporation, leaves today for the Southern league meeting at Memphis.

Mann will oppose retention of the Shaughnessy system and will seek a raise in the player limit to 17, with 12 A men. The Atlanta club is understocked with B men at the present time and, should the present player limit be retained, trades would be necessary to get rid of some A players.

By Jack Troy.

Eddie Moore, one of the most versatile playing managers in baseball, yesterday was signed by the Atlanta Baseball Corporation to manage the Crackers again in 1936.

The fiery little Kentuckian, who gave first indication of his managerial ability when he was named skipper of the club following the death of Uncle Wilbert Robinson late in the 1934 season, and went on to win 10 out of the last 11 games, was very properly rewarded for the great work he did in bringing the Atlanta club through the regular Southern league season, winning that pennant—Atlanta's first since 1925—and then winning the two play-offs of the idiotic Shaughnessy system.

Moore impressed the fans in that 1934 season. They saw him take a club that had been getting nowhere, whip it into a winner overnight. The Crackers won nine straight and 10 out of the last 11 games of the season.

So efficiently had Moore done his work as temporary manager that the Atlanta Baseball Corporation saw fit to engage him as manager in 1935. He immediately was recognized as a ball player's playing manager.

It is unnecessary to review the 1935 season. Moore's accomplishments with last year's club are a matter of public record.

VERSATILE PLAYER.

In resigning Eddie as manager, the Atlanta Baseball Corporation, headed by canny Earl Mann as president, took cognizance of Moore's versatility as a player.

And, in looking back over the past season, this is something of a story in itself. Where, for instance, would you find a fellow like Eddie Moore would could put himself in most any position on the field and keep the club going along at a winning clip?

There were times, as some know, when Moore played that he really shouldn't have been in there. At one stage of the season he was playing with water on the knee.

Moore had little spring training. He was too busy organizing the club. And yet he went into the lineup whenever he was needed and at whatever position, outside of pitcher and catcher, that demanded bolstering, and always produced.

So Eddie Moore's versatility, in addition to his very capable managing, had much to do with the 1935 team's success.

NO NEW ROLE.

It was, of course, no new role for Eddie Moore. When he played for the New Orleans Pelicans in 1933 he virtually hit and fielded the club into the Southern league championship. And his versatility was a big factor. He played third, short or second that season. He was the pride and joy, so to speak, of Manager Larry Gilbert.

He went up with Cleveland in 1934 and played almost half the season. Uncle Wilbert Robinson and Spencer Abbott bought Eddie from Clepeland at the half-way mark in the Southern league race.

Eddie played well under Abbott until the death of Uncle Wilbert, which boosted Abbott into the vice presidency of the Atlanta club. Moore took over the club with 15 games to go, won 10 out of 11. Rain ruined the rest.

There is little the Cracker skipper can say regarding his 1936 team until after the Southern league meeting at Memphis Monday.

PLAYER INCREASE.

President Earl Mann will seek increase of the A limit from 10 to 12, decreasing the B player limit from six to five.

As matters now stand Atlanta is overstocked with A men and understocked with B men. Bobby Durham and Bill Schmidt graduate into the A class in the spring.

And so, with only three B players—Johnny Hill, Gerald Lipscomb and Lefty Williams—Eddie Moore is in something of a fix.

The club likely will need Moore's versatility. And the Cracker pilot is all for playing next season. But he will be able to tell nothing definitely until after the Southern league meeting on Monday.

Eddie Moore Signs New Contract---Giving Keystone Pair Advice---Greeting Mann at Spring Camp

Eddie Moore, the fiery little Kentuckian, yesterday signed a contract to manage the Crackers again in 1936. Moore took over the club late in the 1934 season after the death of Uncle Wilbert Robinson and won 10 out of the last 11 games. This past year, of course, he piloted the Crackers to the Southern league championship, winning both in the regular season and in the two play-offs called for by the idiotic Shaughnessy system. In the picture at left above Moore is shown signing his contract, with H. McCord Shaver, concessions manager, looking on. The center picture was snapped at the Cracker training camp at Daytona Beach last spring. Moore, extreme right, is giving Gerald (Nig) Lipscomb, rookie second baseman, left, and Captain Buster Chatham, shortstop, center, pointers on keystone play. The picture at right, also snapped at the training camp, shows Moore greeting President Earl Mann. (He was vice president then.) Mann and Moore have proved a great working team. GOLDEN BEARS BEAT HUSKIES ON COAST, 14-0

California's Mighty Eleven Moves Step Closer to Perfect Season.

BERKELEY, Cal., Nov. 9.—(AP)—California's dreams of a great football empire—an undefeated season and the bid to represent the west in the Rose Bowl—came a step closer to reality today. The mightiest Golden Bear eleven in years smashed out a 14-to-0 victory over University of Washington's Huskies before 60,000 fans.

The Bears rammed the Washington defense to score touchdowns in the second and third periods, then staved off a spectacular closing threat.

Three times Floyd Blower, California's sub left half, smashed into the Husky line for a total of 15 yards.

On the 10-yard marker, Blower whipped a pass to Quarterback John Meek, who made the catch over the goal line. Henry Sparks, sub left end, converted the point after touchdown.

Early in the third period California banged over the second touchdown. It followed a 40-yard advance, with Bower throwing a 29-yard pass to Sparks for the score. Again Sparks place-kicked the extra point.

Baby Jackets To Play Auburn Frosh Monday

Tech Freshman Invade Plains for Armistice Day Battle, Their First of the Season.

Monday, November 11, is officially designated as Armistice Day. The day when America pauses to celebrate the ending of the World War. But it will be no day of rest for the Georgia Tech and Auburn freshmen football players.

For the Baby Jackets open their two-game Southeastern conference schedule against the Tiger frosh at 2 o'clock. And it will be the last game of the year for the Auburn Cubs, they having already played and defeated the Birmingham-Southern frosh, 21-0. Under Southeastern conference rules, freshmen teams are allowed only two games per year.

The Baby Jackets this year, under the guidance of Roy McArthur, possess one of the best first-year teams ever to play at the Flats. On the squad are seven all-state high school players and other youngsters who gave outstanding performances during their high school careers.

Billy Given, Mt. Hope (Virginia), at center. In the backfield will be Earl Wheby, Greenbrier Military Academy, Virginia, quarterback; Junior Anderson, Mt. Hope, Va., and Gliedman, New Orleans, halfbacks, and Bruce Reed, Clearwater, Fla., fullback.

Many Atlantans are expected to journey to the Loveliest Village for the freshmen battle Monday, which will be the Auburn Frosh's last and the Baby Jackets' first.

The Little Jackets meet the Georgia freshmen in Atlanta in the annual Thanksgiving Day charity game at Grant field.

Petrels Will Play Auburn Saturday.

Coach John Patrick's Oglethorpe Petrels next Saturday meet the Auburn Tigers in Auburn for the first and last home game for the Tigers this year.

The Tigers have played in foreign fields seven times already during the season and in Saturday's skirmish five seniors will say adieu to Drake field. Those playing their last game on home soil for the Tigers will be Alternate Captain Haygood Patterson, Fred Black, Collins Fenton, Harry Whitten and Captain Millard Morris.

The Petrels have shown a great improvement from their early season lethargy and will be expected to give the Plainsmen a good scrap.

Southern Directors Will Meet Monday.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 9.—(AP)—A proposal to raise the status of Southern association baseball clubs to Class AA will be tossed into the laps of the league directors for a decision at their annual meeting Monday.

While Joe Engel, president of the Chattanooga club, and sponsor of the plan, expressed optimism over its chances of adoption, it is known that the suggestion will meet with vigorous opposition from Thomas R. Watkins, president of the Memphis club.

Watkins expressed belief today that there is little possibility that Engel can enlist five other directors in support of the proposal.

The vote of two-thirds, or six, of the directors is necessary to amend the league's constitution. Should these six be assembled, however, opponents might raise the question of whether any club with a franchise in a Class A league could be forced to continue its operation as a Class AA club at a greater expense than called for in the original contract.

Should such a question be raised, Judge John D. Martin, the association's president, would be required to rule on it as the final authority.

Engel, however, apparently is confident that his plan will meet with approval.

"From what I learn," he said, "the Class AA proposal will carry and I am confident it will receive a two-thirds favorable vote."

The present player-salary limit of the league is $4,250. Each club last year was allowed 16 players—10 Class A and six Class B— with additional men at the start and end of the season. A boost in the league's classification would raise the player limit to at least 20 and involve additional expense to each club that would be not less than $1,200 monthly, according to Watkins.

The higher status also might mean higher salaries generally and added expenditures greater than those the club owners now are required to pay. While the league enjoyed a tremendous increase in receipts and fan interest the past season, the major portion of the gains were recorded at the Atlanta park.

NAVY TROUNCES QUAKERS, 13 TO 0

By Jack Cuddy.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 9.—(UP) Navy's blue-jerseyed sailors, smarting from three straight defeats, scored their first major victory of 1935 today, beating Pennsylvania's "mystery team," 13-0, before more than 75,000 fans at Franklin field. This was the largest crowd of the eastern football season.

Navy's victory, registered by virtue of two "breaks," was particularly disheartening for Harvey Harman's Pennsylvanians, who had earned a reputation as "in-and-outers" because of defeats by Princeton, Yale and Michigan. The Quakers had hoped to prove themselves as good as they were touted early in the season.

The teams were so evenly matched that neither tallied in the first or last periods, but the "breaks" gave the Middies touchdowns in the second and third sessions.

In the second quarter a clipping penalty after a Navy punt gave the Middies the ball on Pennsylvania's nine-yard stripe. Then, on the first play John Sneedy Schmidt, of St. Joseph, Mo., the Sailors' 175-pound sub right half, took the ball on a reverse and sprinted around his own right end for the touchdown. The kick was blocked.

This clipping penalty came as a severe setback to the red jerseyed Quakers. After an exchange of punts, Schmidt was booting the ball back into Pennsylvania territory, when the penalty occurred. He sent the ball spiralling down close to the Quakers' goal stripe. On landing, it bounced peculiarly and was rolling back up the field.

The second Navy touchdown came in the third session on an intercepted pass and a 66-yard downfield sprint by Captain L. B. Robertshaw, of Haverford, Pa., regular center.

In the closing session, Pennsylvania marched 56 yards to the Sailors' two-yard stripe, where they were stopped.

YALE CONQUERS BROWN BY 20-0

YALE BOWL, NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 9.—(UP)—Threatened only once, in the opening quarter, Yale conquered Brown easily today, 20 to 0, before 12,000—the poorest attendance in several years.

Yale opened up in the third and Ewart tossed a short pass to Rankin for the first touchdown. A triple pass, Ewart to Miles to Curtin, from near midfield was good for a second score 10 minutes later and the final touchdown was taken over by Ewart in the last period after Morse stumbled in a clear field on Brown's 13.

Yale threw passes at random, completing 17 out of 41, while Brown tried 10 and picked up only 4 yards on the only one they completed.

CLARK DEFEATS CAROLINA STATE

A safety in the third quarter when a Clark University forward broke through to block Sol Johnson's punt behind the State goal line gave the Panthers a 2-0 victory over a strong South Carolina team from Orangeburg, S. C., here Saturday afternoon in one of the hardest fought battles of the current season.

Sol Johnson was unquestionably the outstanding athlete on the field yesterday afternoon. His field generalship was uncanny. At times, it looked like a certain Carolina score, but a great Clark defense would tighten in the pinch to hold a determined machine that was favored to win.

It was a great victory for the Clark team, one that marked them as having one of the greatest defenses in the south among colored schools. Wellmaker, its outstanding fullback, was held for tahe first time this year, although he made several gains out of scoring territory, but when in position to score was chained behind his line of scrimmage.

The South Carolina defense was the feature of the game. For fully two quarters or better, they held an enraged Panther within the shadows of their goal.

Oregon U. Defeats Oregon State, 13-0

EUGENE, Ore., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Taking quick advantage of the breaks, the University of Oregon Webfoots defeated the Oregon State College Beavers, 13 to 0, in their Pacific coast conference football game here today.

Iowa Governor Holds His 'Goat,' But Loses Pig in Football Bet

IOWA CITY, Iowa, Nov. 9.—(AP)—The governor of Iowa is going to deliver personally the pig he lost to the governor of Minnesota on the Iowa-Minnesota football game today.

He said he's going to drive a truck bearing the pig to St. Paul and herd the pig "right into Governor Floyd B. Olson's statehouse office."

"That's what I'm going to do," Governor Clyde L. Herring declared tonight, after he lost his best with Governor Olson because Minnesota's football team defeated Iowa, 13 to 6.

"Floyd," explained Governor Herring, "said he'd bet me a prize Minnesota pig against a prize Iowa pig. But he's used to those scrawny pigs they have in Minnesota and I'm going to find a razorback for him so it won't hurt his digestion.

"FLOYDINA."

"I'm going to take the pig to St. Paul in a truck and personally herd it into Olson's office. I hope his carpet wears well. The pig will be named either "Floyd" of "Floydina," depending on the sex."

Curtis M. Dall, former husband of President Roosevelt's daughter, Anna, and a member of the Governor's homecoming party, suggested the pig be named "New Deal," but Herring vetoed the suggestion.

Herring accepted the bet after Olson wired a challenge in which he said: "Minnesota folks are excited over your statement about the Iowa crowd lynching the Minnesota football team. I have assured them you are a law-abiding gentleman and are only trying to get our goat."

HOLDS HIS GOAT.

"Yes, sir," said Herring, "instead of getting their goat, I lost a pig," explaining again his comment that "if the officials stood for the rough tactics Minnesota used last year, the crowd wouldn't" was misconstrued by Coach Bernie Bierman and Minnesota partisans.

Bierman, who took offense at the Iowa Governor's comment, attributed one rumble of booing from the stands today to a "bunch of soreheads."

The boos followed a 15-yard penalty against Minnesota for roughing Ose Simmons, star Iowa negro back, early in the first quarter.

Very friendly were the statements of athletic officials of both schools after the game.

Generals Demolish Virginia Team, 20-0

LEXINGTON, Va., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Washington and Lee flashed back into the form that won Virginia and Southern conference titles for them last year and smashed Virginia, 20 to 0, in a home-coming day classic here today.

Only in the first minutes of the opening quarter did the Cavaliers show any real form, with the Generals having the advantage the rest of the way.

A crowd of approximately 4,500 witnessed the game which was in many respects one of the strangest affairs ever seen on Wilson field. The Cavaliers, outplayed and outsmarted, found their lateral attack smothered on almost every attempt and once in the fourth period Martin, with his back to the goal line, passed backward and three Washington and Lee players fell on the ball with no one there to stop them. The ball was on the goal line but the officials called it back. The claims to the strange assortment of plays and incidents came just before the game ended when Jimmy Watts, Washington and Lee substitute quarterback, kicked a placement and the ball was lost in the crowd behind the goal posts. A new ball had to be thrown in.

Yates Honor Guest At A. C. Gathering

Charlie Yates, western amateur golf champion, will be a guest of honor Thursday night at the annual fall "sports party" at the Atlanta Athletic Club.

A buffet supper at 7 o'clock will open the program. A Grantland Rice sports review and moving pictures of various football games recently will follow the supper.

Yates will give an original exhibition of driving golf balls at toy balloons floating in space.

A surprise will close the program and will not be announced before it is presented.

Fordham Ties Gaels, 7 to 7, In Upset

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—(UP)—The Galloping Gaels of St. Mary's were slowed down to a mere walk today by a light, fast and gritty Fordham eleven. The final score was 7-7, but if it had not been for a costly error by Captain Joe Maniaci, towering Fordham halfback, it might have been 7-0 and the Gaels would have trekked back to San Francisco plastered with their first defeat by the men from the Bronx since 1932.

A capacity crowd of 50,000 jammed the Polo Grounds expecting to see the westerners smother a team which they outweighed 10 pounds to the man. But when dusk was settling over Coogan's Bluff, they were watching the California giants fighting desperately to ward off defeat.

Fordham outplayed the red-and-blue clad invaders in practically every department of play. The Ram forward wall which held the vaunted Pittsburgh Panthers to a scoreless tie last week, yielded only 54 yards and one first down.

As a result, the Gaels were forced to the air but the overhead attack was nullified by failure to produce a scoring punch. Four times the Moragans, stopped at the line, made futile tries at field goals.

The game was loaded with breaks—scoring opportunities which failed to materialize.

Near the end of the game, St. Mary's opened up with a withering passing attack which carried them to the Fordham 1-yard line and first down. Mal Fieze, Gael quarterback, called for the famed St. Mary's touchdown fumble, but instead of the fumble being recovered over the line by a man on his side, half the Fordham team fell on it and the scoring thrust was over.

PETRELS LICKED BY EMORY-HENRY

BIG STONE GAP, Va., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Emory and Henry's Wasps, gathering power as the game progressed, overwhelmed Oglethorpe University here this afternoon, 28 to 0. The Wasps, after a scoreless first period, shot across a touchdown in the second quarter and three in the final with Pete Cather, 135-pound back, turning in a brilliant running exhibition.

McCullough, Oglethorpe center, was seriously hurt late in the fourth quarter. The full extent of his injuries were not immediately ascertained.

The Waspe threatened twice in the opening period, losing the ball on the Petrels' 19 on downs while the second advance was halted when Oglethorpe intercepted a pass. Oglethorpe took advantage of the first break of the game by recovering a Wasp fumble on Emory's 40 but were unable to gain.

WASP DRIVE.

Gaining on an exchange of punts the Wasps launched a drive in the second quarter from their own 40 but were halted on the 30.

The first score came suddenly midway in the second period when Dyer intercepted an Oglethorpe pass on the Petrels' 15. Keys made a first down in three tries and raced around end for a touchdown.

A fumble by Puryear, Oglethorpe quarterback, on his own 21, with Wright recovering, led to the Wasps' first score in the final quarter. Keys and Dyer plunged through the line for a first down and Faulk scored on a triple reverse.

Oglethorpe took the next kickoff back to their 30 but Keys intercepted a Petrel heave on the 44 and little Pete Cather went into action, dodging through the Oglethorpe line and sweeping around the ends to place the ball on the one-foot line where Keys carried it across.

PETRELS PENALIZED.

Taking a high kickoff on his own goal line, Puryear was downed on his 16. Oglethorpe was then penalized 15 to the 1-yard line and Borman attempted to punt but the kick was blocked by Wright and recovered by Fulk for a touchdown.

Propps, accurate-toed Emory end, kicked all four points after touchdown from placement.

Clayburne turned in some nice running for the Petrels in the second quarter but the hard-fighting Georgians were unable to maintain a sustained march and failed to stage a serious scoring threat at any time during the contest.

Big Six Title Won By Nebraska Eleven

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Nebraska won the Big Six conference football championship this afternoon by edging out Kansas, 19 to 13, before 29,000 fans.

VANDY WALLOPS POOR SEWANEE

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 9.—(AP) Vanderbilt University registered its third Southeastern conference victory of the season today, defeating a courageous little band of Sewanee Tigers, 46 to 0, before 4,000 spectators.

Greatly outweighed and outnumbered in reserves, the Tigers never threatened, the entire battle taking place in their territory. It was the 44th meeting of the two teams since 1892.

Commodore reserves started the game and within five minutes had punched across the first touchdown. Quarterback Huggins, after making a 36-yard dash around right end, took a lateral from Watson and went across the double stripes standing up.

Later in the period, another lateral behind the line, Lacy to Carson, sub for Huggins, produced another tally from the 3-yard line.

The Tigers put up a magnificent defensive stand in the second period, holding the Commodores scoreless although Vandy twice advanced within the 10-yard line.

The Vandy regulars entered the game in the third period and contributed two touchdowns and then retired for the day, saving their energies for the annual classic with Tennessee next week.

A fagged out but still fighting Sewanee team was unable to offer much resistance in the last period, the winners piling up three more touchdowns on passes and ground plays.

Blair, center, and Ruch, fullback, played brilliantly for the hapless Tigers, both contributing fine defensive work against the Commodores.

INDIANA TAKES MARYLAND, 13-6

BALTIMORE STADIUM, BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 9.—(UP)—A 53-yard forward pass during the last few minutes of play gave University of Indiana a 13-to-7 victory in an intersectional game with Maryland University today. Ten thousand saw the game.

The fluke pass, thrown by Huffman, Indiana back, bounded out of the hands of a Maryland player into the waiting arms of Schaefer, substitute Hoosier end.

Guckeyson, brilliant Maryland back, passed to Willis, 39 yards, early in the second period to put the ball on Indiana's 1-foot line, where it was rushed over. The place-kick was good.

Alabama Crushes Clemson, 33-0; North Carolina Routs V. M. I., 56-0

CRIMSON TIDE EXHIBITS POWER IN HOME-COMING

Galaxy of Stars Falls on Tigers in Deceptive Attack.

By T. M. Davenport.

DENNY STADIUM, UNIVERSITY, Ala., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Alabama's Crimson Tide turned on the power today for a home-coming day crowd of 8,000 to crush Clemson under a score of 33 to 0.

The victory was the first for the Crimsons in their home field this year, but they left no doubt in the minds of the "old grads" who cheered lustily that the power of former years had returned to Alabama.

Clemson was powerless before the power drives once they began, with Joe Kilgrow, a sophomore; Clarence Rhordanz, senior, and Angelich alternating in smashing tackles, ripping over guards, and occasionally shooting a pass to give variety.

The Tigers from the Palmetto State came from a bad hole in the first minutes of the game to battle the Crimsons on even terms until toward the close of the quarter, when the heat was turned on.

RILEY SMITH.

Alabama ended the period on Clemson's 6, and after the second quarter opened, Riley Smith, Crimson quarterback, in three successive quarterback sneaks, went over, and then converted from placement.

The second Crimson touchdown followed a sustained drive from Alabama's 29-yard line, with Rhordanz doing most of the ground gaining in smashes off tackle from 5 to 20 yards, Joe Riley helping with short gains through the line and at end. Captain Jimmy Walker, end, carried the ball over on an end around from the 8-yard line. Smith, who had converted from placement on the first touchdown, failed on his second try.

The Crimsons tucked the game away in the third period with two power drives, the first a 55-yard drive with Joe Kilgrow slashing off tackle and flipping two passes to Jimmy Walker, with Walker finally scoring on an end around. Smith again converted from placement. From the 50-yard line, Alabama again drove to a touchdown, with Angelich, playing his last year, scoring from the 10-yard line in three smashes at the left side of the line.

THIRD-STRINGERS.

The last Crimson's score came late in the final period, when all the starting team had been pulled out and third-string men were at home positions. Charlie Stapp set the stage for the touchdown with a 31-yard return of a punt, and then flipped a pass to "Red" Keller, who scored standing up. Big Biff Lyon converted from placement.

J. N. Berry, quarterback, was the Tigers' biggest threat, but his long passes were broken up, and the Crimson blockers broke his interference when he tried to skirt ends. Not once did the South Carolinans penetrate deep enough into Alabama territory to offer a serious threat.

TIGER ATTACK IS TOO STRONG

brilliant job of coaching at the Plains. And it is high time Auburn alumni had something to shout about.

The secret of this Auburn team is traceable, as Coach Meagher said earlier in the season, to a thorough knowledge of the fundamentals. That's true. No ball carriers are getting better blocking in the south than the boys who lug the mail for the Plains express.

Georgia boys have made their mark with the club, two of them from Atlanta. Sid Scarborough and Joel Eaves were standouts. Frank Gantt, Lavonia, and Ralph Sivell, Chipley, guards, were very, very good.

STAR IN TURN.

It seems that Auburn backs take turns in starring. And that is as it should be. The favored sons yesterday were Joe Bob Mitchell, who gained 113 yards, and scored a touchdown on a long run. Wilton Kilgore, reserve fullback, who scored twice, Kilgore gained 65 yards.

Mitchell's kicking was great. He got off a quick kick of 65 yards once and not at any time during the afternoon did he get off a bad one. Mitchell and Bill Hitchcock together booted the ball for an average of 44 yards.

Especial mention should be given John McKinley, Tech reserve back. His total gains for the time he played was 63 yards. He was, with Dutch Konemann, one of Tech's most effective gaining backs. Konemann gained 57 yards.

Taking advantage of a Tech fumble before the game had fairly got under way, Auburn took the ball at the Tech 21-yard line. Sid Scarbrough, Auburn quarterback, recovered Hays' fumble after O'Rourke had rattled him with a smashing tackle.

TECH COMES BACK.

Tech came back after this, held Auburn and in the second period evened the score when Sims passed 23 yards to Bill Jordan, Tech's rangy sophomore, who made a great catch over the goal line, and Sims place-kicked the extra point.

Dutch Konemann's interception of a pass and return of 20 yards, followed by Edwards' pass to Konemann for a gain of 20 yards, set Tech up in scoring position.

Auburn came right back in the same period, however, and Kilgore scored on a 14-yard sweep which followed a march of 44 yards. Paterson place-kicked the extra point to give Auburn a lead of 14 to 7 as the half ended.

Tech made a great goal line stand in the third quarter. Three times Auburn running players were stopped on the 1-foot line. And then Joe Bob Mitchell, Auburn's hard-running, true-passing halfback, shot an aerial to Fenton, substitute for Tipper, and Fenton caught the ball over the goal line. Paterson missed his first extra point. But Auburn had a safe lead of 20 to 7.

The next touchdown was a spectacular off-tackle run by Mitchell, who broke into the clear on the Tech 41 and raced grandly through a broken field right on to the goal line.

The firing wasn't over. The Tigers of the Plains were eager. They were poised for the kill. Gilbert, Gantt and Paterson were so many octopuses in the line. Their tentacles reached everywhere.

SPECTACULAR GAME.

On the final touchdown, Joe Stewart intercepted Scrappy Edwards' pass and ran 30 yards to the Tech 10. And on the next play, Stewart, playing the role of viper, passed 10 yards to Kilgore over the goal line.

It was a great Auburn team that roamed the wide expanse of Grant field yesterday.

It was an intensely interesting game to watch, despite the wide difference in the score. There were many pass interceptions, spectacular runs, triple laterals by Tech which sometimes ended in fumbles.

Coach Jack Meagher has brought his ball club along in brilliant fashion. There were times when it seemed that Auburn had a very poor offense. And then, suddenly, there would be a big hole in the Tech line and an Auburn back would race through for a long gain.

The game ran the gamut of the spectacular. The early break that gave Auburn the first touchdown did not defeat Tech. Because Tech came surging back to even the score.

What beat Tech was wild passing, inability to hold the ball and, what is more important, the steel that was embodied in a great Auburn line which seemed like a coiled spring suddenly unleashed. And it was this way all afternoon.

Auburn has one of the hardest charging lines in the south today.

J. Gilbert, Paterson and Gantt are the three leaders. The first two look like real All-American material. For never, since the days of Peter Pund, has a center played so magnificently on Grant Field.

GILBERT GREAT.

When Tech would kick, Gilbert would drop back to block. When Tech would pass, Gilbert had an uncanny knack of being in the right place most of the time either to intercept or bat down the efforts.

The statistics show that Auburn made 15 first downs to Tech's 8. Three were unearned by the Tigers. Auburn gained a total of 268 yards from formations to Tech's 220. This included 136 yards gained by Tech on passes and 45 yards gained by Auburn through the air.

There were heroes on the Tech side all right. Scrappy Edwards was a fiery little thunderbolt to the end. He gained through the Auburn line. When a 155-pounder can gain through such a line as that he has done a great piece of work.

Lawrence Hays acquitted himself creditably, along with Dutch Konemann. Fletcher Sims was good.

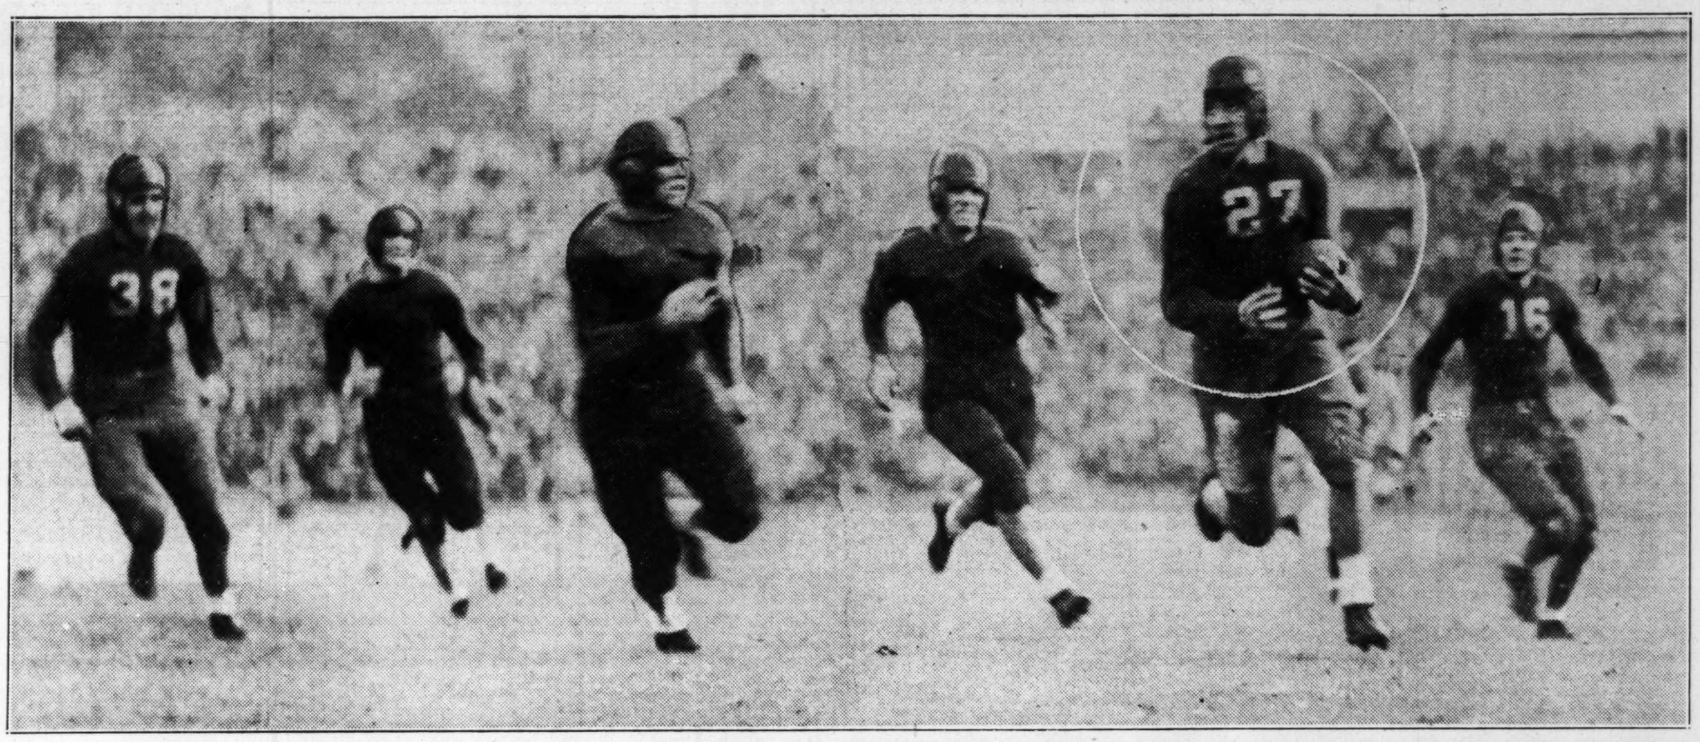

And in the line, Mit Fitzsimons, playing despite an injury, gave a real account of himself. He is one of the south's best guards. Bud Lindsay played splendidly at tackle and Red Collins, playing in place of Charley Preston, injured Tech center, was courageous and aggressive. The two sophomore ends, Jim Morgan and Bill Jordan, were on a par with the Auburn ends. And this takes into account the fact that Joel Eaves, the Atlanta boy, and Captain Mutt Morris played outstandingly.

"The Auburn team is just now reaching its peak," said Coach Alexander, "and I think it is one of the best teams in either conference. I am sure the Auburn line ranks with that of North Carolina. Gilbert is an unusually fine center and Paterson is an outstanding tackle.

"Coach Meagher deserves much credit for his fine handling of the material he has."

Just Before Georgia Tech Scored - - - Flying Dutchman Catches Pass and Runs 20 Yards

Dutch Konemann, the Flying Dutchman, had a big hand in the scoring of Tech's first and only touchdown against Auburn yesterday. After Frank Gantt, the Lavonia, Ga., boy, had intercepted Sims' pass at the Tech 26 and two line plays had bored to the 24, Joe Bob Mitchell threw a long pass and Konemann intercepted it on the run. He raced to the 44 before Sid Scarborough, Auburn quarterback, and an Atlanta boy, ran him out of bounds. Konemann's great work, sweeping away the second Auburn break of the game, was only starting. Edwards flung a spot pass to Konemann and the Flying Dutchman flew from the 44 to the Auburn 24. This constituted a gain of 40 yards on two efforts by Konemann. The play on which Konemann took the pass from Edwards is shown above. On the play following, Sims slammed a 24-yard pass to Bill Jordan, sophomore Tech end, who made a brilliant catch over the goal line. Then Sims kicked the extra point and Tech's scoring was completed for the day. Staff photo by George Cornett.

BADGERS UPSET PURDUE, 8 TO 0

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Wisconsin's victory-starved Badgers shook off the memory of five straight defeats to hammer out an 8-to-0 decision over Purdue here today in one of the major upsets of the Western conference football season.

A slim home-coming crowd of 17,000 saw Wisconsin play a brilliant defensive game to check in its first win of the campaign.

Jack Troy's Running Story of Tech-Auburn Game

Football weather, with a bit of tang in the air, greeted the squads of Auburn and Georgia Tech as they came out for warmups preliminary to the 39th game.

Haygood Paterson Sr., who has been coming to Atlanta with Auburn teams for 40 years, was seated with Mrs. Paterson directly in front of the press box.

Mr. Paterson's son, Haygood Jr., is an outstanding southern tackle on the Auburn team. Paterson had a spare pipe with him. He bit one pipe squarely in two when Auburn met Kentucky in Montgomery. And last year at Tulane he chewed one up to the hilt.

The Patersons have a great tradition at Auburn. They are an integral part of the famous spirit that characterizes the institution.

As the teams came out for the kick-off Mit Fitzsimons was at right guard for Tech. Charley Preston was not in the opening lineup, however.

Captain Mutt Morris, of Auburn, and Captain Lefty Eubanks, of Tech, went out to the center of the field for the toss. Auburn won the toss and decided to receive, defending the south goal.

FIRST QUARTER.

Fitsimons kicked for Tech. He kicked to Tipper on Auburn's 10 and Tipper came bounding back to the 37. Eubanks and Gibson crashed through and tossed Tipper for a 5-yard loss.

Hitchcock tried the right side of the line and Appleby stopped him. Both teams were offside on that play.

Hitchcock then kicked from the 37 to Hays, who called for a fair catch on his own 25. Hays made 2 yards at the line, with Paterson bringing him down.

O'Rourke tackled Hays fiercely as he tried the left side and Hays fumbled at his 21. Sid Scarborough recovered for Auburn. It seemed a tragic break.

Hitchcock tried a pass after O'Rourke had gained 5 yards into the line. Tipper bucked and it was a first down on Tech's 11-yard line. O'Rourke plunged 3 yards through the line.

O'Rourke then swept wide to the left, cut back and gained 5 yards to the 2-yard line before Hays nailed him. Hitchcock was hurt on the play and Joe Bob Mitchell replaced him at left halfback.

O'Rourke then plunged into the center for the necessary 2 yards and the first touchdown. Paterson kicked the extra point from placement. Auburn led Tech 7 to 0.

Fitzsimons kicked off to Mitchell on his 7. Mitchell ran back to the 33, fumbled and O'Rourke recovered for Auburn.

Mitchell broke off left tackle and ran to the Tech 48. It was a spectacular 10-yard broken field sprint.

After Tipper had tried the line with no success, Mitchell came storming into the line and was tackled hard by Appleby. Mitchell fumbled and Joines recovered at Tech's 49.

Sims dropped back and passed incomplete to Jones, who made a great leaping attempt to catch the ball in the midst of Auburn defenders. Tech called time out.

Sims punted beautifully out of bounds on the Auburn 8-yard line. Tipper faked a reverse and spun into the line for a yard.

Mitchell kicked out to Hays on Tech's 41. Hays signaled for a fair catch, fumbled and fell on the ball. Hays got 1 yard at the line. Hays forwarded to Gibson, who started the triple lateral. It went on from Gibson to Collins and then to Konemann, who ran on to the Auburn 23.

Hays passed forward to Gibson, who lateraled to Collins and then Collins tossed it to Appleby, who fumbled and Gilbert recovered for Auburn at the 21.

Edwards replaced Hays and Lindsey replaced Chance in the Tech lineup. Jordan and Jones replaced the ends, Jones and Gibson.

Mitchell then rammed off left tackle and ran 17 yards to his own 42. And again Mitchell rammed through a hole off right guard and added 12 more yards. The ball was on the Tech 46.

HOLD THAT TIGER.

Mitchell then tried to sweep right end, but Appleby ran him clear across the field and out of bounds for a 2-yard loss. Auburn called time out.

Tipper hit a stone wall at the center of the line. Mit Fitzsimmons hurled him back for a 2-yard loss. Mitchell's pass was batted down. Mitchell then kicked well over the goal line. Tech took the ball at its own 20.

Appleby drove at the left side of the Auburn line for a yard. Edwards started off to the right but Gilbert was in there to drop him for a loss of a yard.

Sims went back as if to punt but ran and gained only a yard as Gilbert tackled him. Sims punted to Mitchell on the Auburn 44 and Mitchell was run out on Tech's 48.

Auburn drew a 5-yard penalty for off-side. And thus the first quarter ended with Auburn leading Tech 7 to 0. There were eight sophomores in the Tech lineup, with Nixon in as guard.

SECOND QUARTER.

Eubanks returned to the lineup for Tech and Hitchcock went back in for Auburn, replacing Mitchell. Fenton replaced Tipper. Hitchcock twice tried the line but lost ground each time.

Hitchcock kicked to the Tech 22, where the ball was downed. Auburn was penalized 15 yards for interfering with a fair catch. The ball was on the Tech 37.

On a lateral pass, Appleby to Konemann, the big Dutchman lost 6 yards. Then Sims tried a pass and Frank Gantt, the Lavonia, Ga., boy, intercepted the pass at the Jackets' own 26.

Nixon nailed Hitchcock for a loss of 1 yard as the speedy Auburn sophomore tried to sweep right end. Fenton took the ball and got 3 yards at the center of the line.

Mitchell then tried a long pass and Konemann intercepted it on the run. The Flying Dutchman then sped on to the Auburn 44, where Scarborough ran him out of bounds.

The 14,000 fans, constituting Tech's largest home crowd of the season, were seeing plenty of spectacular football. The idea seemed to be "you intercept my pass, and I'll intercept yours."

"FLYING DUTCHMAN."

Konemann's great work swept away that second Auburn break. Edwards then slammed a spot pass to Konemann, who raced from the 44 to the 24.

Auburn was caught napping as Sims passed beautifully to Jordan over the goal line for Tech's first touchdown. Jordan made a great catch. Sims then kicked the extra point to tie the game at seven all. And the crowd went wild.

Tech was back in the ball game as Fitzsimons kicked off to Fenton. The scrappy Auburn sophomore took the ball on the goal line and ran back 63 yards on a magnificent dash to the Tech 37. Edwards caught Fenton from behind. Auburn blocked beautifully on Fenton's long return of the kick-off.

Hays replaced Edwards in the Tech backfield. Stewart and Kilgore entered the Auburn backfield, replacing Scarborough and O'Rourke.

Hitchcock faded back on the Tech 35 and passed incomplete. It was fourth down and 8 to go. Hitchcock kicked over the goal line.

So Tech had the ball again at its own 20. Konemann lost 4 yards as Stewart broke through and tackled him. Hays got the 4 yards back on an off-tackle slant. Sims punted out to Hitchcock, who called for a fair catch on the Auburn 44.

Kilgore smacked through a big hole between center and guard for 16 yards. Hays tackled him. Fenton tried the center but Collins smacked him down after a gain of 1 yard.

TIGERS ON MARCH.

Hitchcock tried to run off right tackle, but he ran into his own interference and was held for no gain. Hitchcock's pass to Eaves was incomplete but Tech drew a 5-yard penalty for offsides.

Kilgore then plunged 10 yards for a first down at the Tech 25. Hitchcock gained 2 yards at the right side. And Fenton faked a reverse and got only 1 yard at the right side. Hitchcock passed to Eaves and the gain was 9 yards and a first down at the Tech 14-yard line.

Fenton took the ball from center, handed it to Kilgore and the reserve fullback shot off tackle, swept wide to the right and scored the second Auburn touchdown. Tipper and Sivell blocked magnificently on the 14-yard run. Fenton also helped with the blocking on the play.

Paterson kicked the extra point from placement and Auburn again led Tech, this time 14 to 7.

Mitchell re-entered the game for Hitchcock and Morris replaced Eaves at end. Appleby took the kickoff on his 10 and returned to the Tech 32.

There was a reverse lateral, Hays to Konemann to Hays, and there was a resultant loss of 10 yards.

Sims kicked to Mitchell on the Auburn 30. Mitchell returned 18 yards to the 48. Mitchell took the ball and raced 6 yards off right tackle. Time was almost out in the first half. Fenton started and stopped as the Tech line rose up to meet him.

Big Jordan put a necktie tackle on Fenton, who failed to gain. Sims took Mitchell's kick, broke through two tacklers, ran 15 yards and lateraled to Konemann. It was a low toss and Konemann recovered at the 20-yard line. Sims' long pass was incomplete.

Again Sims passed long, but it was incomplete to Jordan, and the half ended at this point.

Auburn led Tech, 14 to 7.

THIRD QUARTER.

Konemann took Paterson's kick-off, let it escape him, recovered and ran to the Tech 13. Konnemann made 3 yards into the line. Edwards gained 2 yards before Gilbert stopped him.

Sims punted to the Auburn 40, where Mitchell had difficulty handling the ball but finally fell on it. Morgan crashed in from end and threw Mitchell for a 7-yard loss. Lindsay was hurt, but he continued. He had a cut over an eye.

Mitchell quick-kicked. It was a bold stroke but the ball wobbled over the goal line. And Tech got it at the 20. It was a 65-yard boot.

Edwards ran off tackle for 12 yards, bu the play was called back and Tech was penalized 5 yards for backfield in motion.

Sims went back as if to kick, ran to his left and passed over Konemann's head. Sims kicked out to his 43-yard line, where the ball was downed. Auburn gained more than 20 yards on the exchange.

Kilgore plunged over his right tackle for 4 yards. Fenton, who had been trying the line with little success, again plunged and got but 2 yards. Mitchell rammed the Tech wall for 2 more yards. It was fourth down and 2 to go.

Auburn did not kick, but gave Mitchell the ball and Mitchell made it a first down on the Tech 28. Kilgore went weaving off left tackle for 3 yards.

TIGERS ON RAMPAGE.

Mitchell passed to Williams for a gain of 13 yards. Mitchell again passed to Williams. It gained 5 yards. On the end around, Fenton handed the ball to Captain Mutt Morris who was tackled a foot short of the Tech goal.

Stewart failed at the line.

Mitchell plunged, and he too, was stopped. There was still that one foot to go on third down.

Mitchell tried the right side of the line and he was repulsed. It was a magnificent stand, with Auburn having one more chance.

Line plays failing, Auburn tried the air. Mitchell faded back and passed to Fenton across the goal line for the touchdown. Paterson kicked his third straight extra point of the day and Auburn increased its lead to 21 to 7.

Sims took Auburn's kick-off and ran back to the 36. Edwards tried a pass to Morgan. The ball was batted around between Mitchell and Fenton and finally Morgan caught the ball at the Tech 48. It was a 12-yard gain.

Edwards' pass intended for McKinley, who replaced Konemann, was batted down. Edwards shot off right tackle, slipped and was like a base runner going into third when he was finally stopped after a 6-yard gain.

Sims sneaked through the line 3 more yards. Sims tried a long pass on fourth down and Gilbert leaped high into the air to bat it down.

Auburn took the ball on its own 42. Kilgore banged into the line, fumbled and Sims recovered for Tech at the Auburn 45. And Edwards passed to McKinley, who leaped for the ball and caught it for a gain of 24 yards on the Auburn 21.

Edwards lateraled to McKinley, but it was a bad pass and Edwards recovered it for a 12-yard loss. Sims was back to pass when Gantt and Sivell raced through and threw him for a huge loss, putting the ball back on the Auburn 45.

Edwards passed and Gilbert, who was playing like an All-American, intercepted the ball and ran it to the Tech 45. Tech went backwards 34 yards on the series of plays.

Hays replaced Sims in the Tech backfield. Kilgore gained 4 yards at the line as the third quarter ended.

Auburn led Tech, 21 to 7.

FOURTH QUARTER.

Mitchell took the ball on his own 41 and then really went to town on an offtackle burst that carried him wide off right end on a 41yard run that ended over the Tech goal line.

Joel Eaves blocked like a million on the spectacular touchdown run. Paterson's attempted placement was wide. The score was Auburn 27, Tech 7.

Hays ran the kick-off back 25 yards. Edwards ran 6 yards off tackle and then passed 13 yards to Jordan, who lateraled to McKinley, who ran on to the Auburn 43. Auburn was baffled by this play. Edwards plunged 5 more yards into the line. They know now why they call him Scrappy.

Rex McKissick replaced Captain Mutt Morris, who had played a great game at end. Morris seemed in a daze. He apparently had suffered an injury of some sort.

On the end around, Hays handed the ball to Morgan, and they called for a measure. It just failed to make a first down. Edwards was tackled fiercely by Eaves and again they called for a measure. And again it was just short of the first down. It was fourth down and inches to go for a first down.

Hays plunged the line but failed to make the first down and the ball went over to Auburn on its 33. Kilgore lost a yard as Morgan stopped him.

Fenton fumbled and Lindsay recovered for Tech at the Auburn 30-yard line. The snap from center was bad. Edwards fumbled and Lindsay again recovered. Hood was in at center for the Jackets. Edwards' pass was incomplete.

And Edwards' pass intended for McKinley was batted down.

An Auburn player had juggled the ball and almost intercepted it. Tech drew 5 yards for offsides.

ANOTHER SCORE.

Edwards' pass intended for McKinley was intercepted by Joe Stewart, who ran 30 yards to the Tech 10. And then Stewart passed to Kilgore for the touchdown. And again Paterson failed to kick the extra point as Auburn led Tech, 33 to 7.

Gibson entered the game for Tech, took Paterson's short kickoff and returned to the Tech 37. Thompson took the end around and gained 15 yards, putting the ball in midfield.

Hays tried two passes but both were broken up. Hays kicked to the Auburn 10, where the ball was downed by Jordan.

Auburn substitutes warmed up on the sidelines as Joe Bob Mitchell raced 6 yards off left tackle. Haygood Paterson, a great tackler, was replaced by Coleman.

Mitchell kicked to the Tech 35, where Hays signaled for a fair catch. It was a 50-yard kick but was called back because Auburn was offside.

Mitchell kicked again. Hays called for a fair catch on his 45. Robby Blake replaced Mitchell in the Auburn lineup. Hamm replaced Eaves. Ellis, in for Fenton, broke up Hays' pass.

Antley had replaced Gilbert at center. Beard passed to McKinley and the gain was 12 yards and a first down on the Auburn 40. Hays made 4 yards on a wide end run.

Hays' pass intended for Thompson was almost intercepted by an Auburn man. Both had their hands on it and finally dropped the ball.

Hays kicked out of bounds on the Auburn 26.

Heath, substitute Auburn fullback, ran 15 yards to the Auburn 43 on a sudden burst off left tackle. The Auburn reserves were penalized 15 yards for roughness. This followed a 5-yard penalty for offside.

Bobby Blake punted to Hays, who dropped the ball at the Tech 37. Beard recovered for Tech. Hays passed and Blake intercepted the ball, running back to Tech's 40 as the game ended.

Auburn had won the most decisive victory in the series with Tech in modern years. The final score was Auburn 33; Tech 7.

Centenary Defeats Golden Hurricane

SHREVEPORT, La., Nov. 9.—(AP) Flashing the most destructive offense a Centenary team has unleashed against a major foe in years—one that brought into play practically every type of attack, and a defense that kept the enemy well beyond their 30-yard line until late in the fourth quarter, the Gentlemen completely overwhelmed Tulsa's Golden Hurricanes in an intersectional clash here today, 22 to 0.

The Shreveporters rode to victory on the feet of a pair of sophomores, Langford Huddleston and D. D. "Grandma" Stone, whose line plunges and end sweeps gained a total of 156 yards, almost 100 more than that made by the whole Tulsa team.

HOWELL BEATEN.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 9.—(UP)—Louisiana College handed Dixie Howell's University of Mexico eleven a 27-to-7 defeat here today.

CADETS OFFER NO OPPOSITION TO TARHEELS

Snavely's Team Still Unbeaten; Jackson Stars in 'Big Push.'

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Nov. 9.—(AP)—North Carolina's mighty juggernaut steamrollered the hapless Cadets of Virginia Military Institute, 56 to 0, today and continued its bid for national recognition—undefeated and untied.

Don Jackson, triple threat artist of Carl Snaveley's high scoring machine, touched off the fireworks when the game was about a minute old by snagging a Cadet punt and racing it back 55 yards for a touchdown.

From then on the Tarheel firmament glittered with stars as Snavely sent in substitute and substitute to complete the destruction.

The V. M. I. attack, muffled from the opening whistle, never carried the Cadets closer to the Tarheel goal than their own 37-yard line, just before the half, and netted them just one first down.

The first of Jackson's two great first-period runs came on the third play of the game. He gathered in a punt on his 45 and was away like a rocket, side-stepping tacklers, to score standing up.

Fourteen plays later, the little back swung wide around right end, and swept 34 yards to score. Six plays later he shot a bullet-like pass to Buck, who fell on the V. M. I. 13-yard line after a 12-yard run. Hutchins then cracked right tackle for the touchdown.

Thereafter, except in the third period when they made only six points, it was just a parade for the Tarheels. The second period netted them three touchdowns and in the final quarter they added a brace more.

MICHIGAN STATE UPSET, 13 TO 7

MACKLIN FIELD, EAST LANSING, Mich., Nov. 9.—(UP)—A Marquette University football team, determined to keep its undefeated record clean, outplayed Michigan State's Spartans, 13 to 7, today before a home-coming crowd of 20,000.

Coach Frank Murray's team scored in the first and third quarters and held a late Spartan scoring spurt to a single touchdown in the final period.

State could not cope with the hard running of Art and Al Guepe and Ray Buivid. Poor judgment robbed the Spartans of a chance to win late in the game.

Marquette scored late in the opening quarter with a 48-yard offensive. Buivid and Art Guepe carried the ball to the State 24 on five line plays. Then Art Guepe took a pass from Buivid on the goal line and stepped over for a touchdown. Howard Zindel blocked Leonard Mierzwa's try for the point.

Richmond Beaten By Benedictine, 6-0

SAVANNAH, Ga., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Richmond Academy's hopes of a G. I. A. A. championship faded tonight when an underdog Benedictine team dealt out an unexpected 6-0 defeat with a thrilling four-period touchdown.

The teams battled on even terms with the breaks about even for three periods but Benedictine grabbed a scoring chance with open arms in the final quarter. Jim Rossiter, Savannah fullback, flung a 14-yard pass to Billy Brazille, who was downed in his tracks on Richmond's 7, where Downing and Rossiter plugged away for short gains that carried them to the 1-yard line. From that point, Rossiter charged over the line for a touchdown. Rossiter's attempted place kick for the extra point was blocked by Davis.

Barry, of Celtics, Retires From Game

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 9. (AP)—Pete Barry, member of the famous New York Celtics professional basketball team for the past 19 years, has laid away his cage uniform.

markers through their continual bombing.

The fact that the Mississippians had practically nothing to offer except a passing game made their touchdowns remarkable.

Louisiana State made 19 first downs to 11 for the Maroons.

Louisiana started cracking the Mississippi line wide open for the backs to charge through from the very first play, and although Major Sasse's men braced somewhat in the last half, the safe victory margin had been achieved.

MAROONS FIGHT.

Louisiana State University tried few passes compared with their usual practice of filling the air with them, apparently content to stick to running plays which clicked.

The Mississippians fought up to the last whistle, and Armstrong's arm was a menace till the end of play.

In the fourth quarter, when Hardison seemed to make a mistake of judgment in signalling for a fair catch on his 5-yard line, Armstrong dropped back behind his goal, and unexpectedly and in violation of one of the oldest supposed rules of football, passed to Ward on the 20, and the latter ran 10 more to the 30.

Armstrong's next pass was intercepted by Stewart, Louisiana center, who returned it five yards.

Law was penalized for holding, but advanced to the Maroon 20. There the visitors were held, and that was as close to the goal as the Bayou Tigers got before the game ended.

brilliant blocking to score the winning touchdown standing up. Duvall kicked his second point after touchdown and the damage was done.

Bill Shakespeare gave the Notre Dame fans their final big thrill. As he raced 4 yards a minute later to Northwestern's 10, but the Wildcats held. The game ended as Don Gever hauled down Shakespeare's long, desperate pass and raced it back 40 yards to Notre Dame's 30.

With a holding penalty, Notre Dame marched 41 yards on 10 plays in the first period to the 1-foot mark, from where Fromhart sneaked over for the score.

Fromhart kicked the extra point.

TIGERS DISPLAY GREAT POWER, USING 3 TEAMS

Princeton Makes Old Rival Sixth Victim of Season.

By Alan Gould.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 9.—(AP) Princeton's football juggernaut, using nearly three complete teams, outclassed Harvard and handed the Crimson an artistic shellacking, 35 to 0, before 45,000 spectators this crisp, balmy afternoon.

The Tigers registered their sixth straight victory of the 1935 campaign without being seriously extended by a plucky Harvard outfit that was no match for the home side in manpower.

The Crimson penetrated Princeton territory only three times and made its deepest advance, to the Tiger 33-yard mark, in the last few moments of the game.

Princeton, held scoreless only in the second period, put over five touchdowns by an assortment of methods. Paul Pauk, who shared the ball-carrying honors with Jack White, plunged across the Crimson goal line twice as the climax of dazzling Tiger marches. Big Fred Ritter, a 60-minute man, who was the standout in Princeton's powerful line, intercepted a pass and ran 57 yards for a touchdown. Gil Lea blocked a Harvard punt and scooped up the ball to tally another. Chick Kaufman plunged for the final touchdown after Charley Toll, sophomore tackle, recovered a fumbled punt near the Harvard goal line.

Ken Sandbach, who did a first-class job directing the Tiger attack, made good all five opportunities to boot placements for the extra point, besides doing most of the Princeton passing and intercepting two of Harvard's aerials. The final score was only a point short of equaling the biggest margin of victory for Princeton in the history of this oft-interrupted rivalry. The Tigers rolled up a 36-0 score in 1925, a year before the last break. Harvard hasn't scored a point against Princeton since winning in 1923.

Bunky O'Rourke Bangs Through Tech Line for Auburn's First Touchdown

Bunky O'Rourke, of Bessemer, Ala., was largely responsible for events leading up to the first Auburn touchdown, which O'Rourke, of course, scored. The way it happened was that O'Rourke, backing up the line, met Lawrence Hays, Tech halfback, with one of those bone-rattling tackles as Hays plunged into the line early in the game. Hays fumbled and Sid Scarborough, the Atlanta boy, recovered. Well, this untimely bit of ill-fortune on Tech's part, what with the game less than two minutes old, gave Auburn the ball at the Jacket 21. O'Rourke picked up five yards and John Paul Tipper made it a first down on the 11. O'Rourke plunged three and then five yards as preliminary attractions to the two-yard plunge he made through the middle for the score. As the picture above shows, the road O'Rourke traveled to glory was beset with obstacles. But he got through somehow. A hard-charging line opened holes and runners also were afforded magnificent blocking. Photo by George Cornett.

ALF ANDERSON BULLDOG HERO

march of 48 yards in which Alf Anderson spun through great, gaping holes in the center of the Tulane line for long gains, that ended with another tally.

It was to a besting day for two Georgia players. Maurice Green and Alf Anderson, out with injuries, had to carry the burden today. And they carried it stalwartly and well.

LINE OUTSTANDING.

It was the Georgia line which had to stand in there and last it out today. Because there were no subs available. And the line stuck it out and outrushed the Tulane forwards most of the afternoon.

Especially did the three center men, the two guards and the center, open up the line for gains on the fake reverse and spin plays which Tulane never seemed to fathom.

It was Georgia's victory, well-earned and well-played. But to Tulane must go the honors for the greatest amount of concentrated football hysteria. When they packed two touchdowns into five minutes of play in that fading third quarter they had the stadium converted into a bowl of madness.

They played the most furious football I have ever seen in that five minutes, charging like madmen, tackling like men possessed of devils.

They flung themselves into the play with utter disregard for personal safety and it was no wonder that for five minutes Georgia was all but helpless before it.

The wonder was that Georgia could meet the charge, see it tie the score, and then come back with hearts stout enough to carry on and the game that was strong and alert enough to score two touchdowns and win.

Georgia came marching back into the conference championship race with this victory. The Bulldogs have lost but to Alabama and today they conquered a team which a week before had won from Colgate.

It was a valuable victory and it was won with smart, alert football which seized on every chance and made it good.

The victory makes next week's game in Athens with L. S. U. the outstanding game of the week. And Georgia should be ready with a great game for old Lou.

JUST A BREEZE.

From there on the second play of the series, Minot handed the ball to Green, who faded back and passed over the line to John Bond. It was easy and quick.

The second quarter was not many minutes old when Georgia, after repulsing a Tulane drive, saw Substitute End Otis Maffett recover a fumble by the brilliant Louis Thames at the Tulane 12.

A pass failed, but the second one, the same play as that scoring the first touchdown, scored from Anderson to Maffett. Green got the point to make it 13.

For the remainder of that quarter Tulane threatened. With the wind to help the kicking, the green-clad team kept threatening all that quarter, but Georgia tossed back two drives at the 15 and ended the half leading 13 to 0.

Ten minutes of that third quarter were gone when Alf Anderson broke through center on a spin and ran 30 yards. He was tackled by Normal Hall and dropped the ball. Still it was deep in Tulane territory at the Tulane 38.

But they passed. And Barney Mintz leaped high to take the ball from the hands of the frantic Glenn Johnson and race the remaining way of the 62 yards to the goal.

The furious Tulane team tossed back three plays after the kick-off and then Jerry Friedericks stormed through and blocked Anderson's kick and recovered it, too, at the Georgia 11.

Mintz got a first down at the 1 on a fourth-down play and Loftin took it over.

Mintz's kick tied it at 13 to 13 as the quarter ended.

Packed into that fast, desperate attack was all the berserk rage of a team which had seen enough breaks go against it and was determined to see no more.

Last year it was Green and Henry Wagnon who worked a pass to give Georgia six points as she lost 7 to 6 to Tulane. And in that game Alf Anderson got going for the first time as a sophomore.

HISTORY REPEATED.

And today it was that same pass combination, Green to Wagnon, which gave Georgia her third touchdown. As it happened there was another coming up, but that third one looked very good.

It came as the final play on a march of 48 yards after a short kick-off by Tulane had put the ball at the Tulane 48.

Bond spun for 13 yards and Maffett took a pass from Bond in that march, to put the ball at the 24. From there it took four plays and the fourth one was the pass of 1934 come back again—Green to Wagnon—for a touchdown. And a badly needed one.

Alf Anderson, a sprite in red and a terror on those spin plays which found a hole waiting every time, intercepted a pass to return it 44 yards to Tulane's 31.

From there they spun Tulane dizzy until Anderson was able to spin through the last 9 yards with but one hand being put on him and that not a deterring one.

Statistics show that Georgia made 13 earned first downs to 10 for Tulane. Georgia made 9 first downs on running plays and 4 on passes.

Georgia gained a net total of 225 yards to 192 for Tulane. Tulane led in passes completed but even so the Georgia air game was more effective, two touchdowns coming from it.

There were no injuries of consequence in the game which was one of few penalties.

The Bulldogs will remain over here for a sightseeing trip on Sunday, arriving home Monday morning. They are at the Bienville hotel.

ILLINOIS BUMPS MICHIGAN, 3 TO 0

MEMORIAM STADIUM, CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Nov. 9.—(UP)—Leo Spurgeon, Illinois sophomore halfback, turned a dreary, rainy homecoming for 25,000 fans into a happy one today with place kick from the 32-yard line which gave the Illinois a 3-to-0 victory over Michigan. The score came late in the second period.

Spurgeon had run one of Cedric Sweet's punts back to Michigan's 33. Arthur Valpey, Wolverine right end, came through to catch Spurgeon on the 45 for a 12-yard loss, but Wilbur Henry passed to Bob Wright and Seven yards were recovered.

Spurgeon passed 13 yards to Henry, who had plunged to a first down on Michigan's 21.

With Henry holding the ball, Spurgeon sent the ball sailing against the wind, to clear the uprights for the winning points.

Ralph McGill's Running Story of Georgia-Tulane Game

TULANE STADIUM, NEW ORLEANS, La., Nov. 9.—A hot sun was shining as the Tulane and Georgia captains came on the field to toss the coin for the start of the game.

FIRST QUARTER.

John Bond won the toss for Georgia and chose the south goal, taking advantage of the wind.

Tulane chose to receive and Frank Johnson kicked off to Life Saver Mintz and he was downed at his own 32.

He was a temporary life saver for Georgia. On the second play Mintz fumbled the pass from center while back in kick formation.

He dived for it and the ball squirted out from under his Green jacket and lay there very yellow in the sun.

Tom Haygood fell on it for Georgia at the Tulane 18-yard line.

It was a beautiful forward pass. Minot handed it to Maurice Green behind the line on a fake reverse and he passed to Bond, who took it with a leap as he stepped over the line.

It was Georgia 6 and Tulane 0.

And it remained there as Bond missed the point.

Georgia was playing hard, smashing football, the sort that is good to see.

Tulane took the kickoff. Two desperate sweeps at the flanks, first left and then right, gained not a yard. Johnson and Shi were going through on the plays. On third down Mintz kicked.

The ball was at the Tulane 29.

Bond got 5 at right tackle. Al Minot got 3 at left end. Maurice Green, the pinch-hitter at fullback, banged through right guard for a first down.

It was at the Tulane 18.

John Bond drove off right tackle for 3. They tried a pass, but Page knocked it down. Tulane rallied, Gould coming through to stop Bond. It was fourth down.

GREEN FUMBLES.

Loftin was stopped in the line and Tulane drew a penalty of 15 for holding. Georgia was offside on Mintz's kick and he got another try. Treadway fair-caught it at his (the Georgia) 36.

They almost had Bond for a loss but he shook them off and got 5 yards at right end. Minot added 3 more and Green banged through for a first down at the Tulane 29.

Dirmann threw Green for a loss of 3 at left end. A bullet pass, Green to Bond, would have been good had not Bond slipped as he turned for the pass. Alf Anderson went in for Bond. Another pass, Anderson to Minot, was wide and the Bulldogs were at fourth down again. Treadway aimed for the coffin corner but missed it and Tulane had the ball at her own 20.

Tulane had been in the hole for most of the first quarter. Mintz almost got them out. He quick-kicked to Charles Treadway, who retrieved it and raced back a full 22 yards to put the pressure right back on Tulane. He had some excellent blocking and he really was stepping on the gas. He has no peer in the south in handling kicks.

The ball was at the Tulane 43.

Minot gave them a bit of artistic running. It was a cut-back for 18 yards and a first down at the Tulane 26.

Anderson got 5 at left tackle and Minot picked up a yard at left. The Green was pretty good in there. They had been repulsing attacks all the game to date. Only the first one had got by them.

Green hit off right tackle for a first down at the Tulane 16.

Green took the ball on a reverse and got 4 yards at left guard as the quarter ended. Georgia 6; Tulane 0.

SECOND QUARTER.

It was second down at the Tulane 11 as the second quarter opened. Glenn Johnson went in for Minot. Johnson lost 4 yards at left end as the furious Tulane line swarmed in.

They swarmed in twice more and took away the ball at their own 14.

And then, on the first play, Louis Thames fumbled and Maffett recovered for Georgia at the Tulane 12.

It was another chance. But one pass was knocked down. And then, on second down, Alf Anderson passed to young Maffett, who caught it and fell across the line for Georgia's second touchdown.

Georgia added the point and it was Georgia 13, and Tulane 0.

Fumbles had led to both Georgia scores but nothing could detract from the furious determination with which Georgia was playing.

Thames took the Georgia kick-off and as if to make up for his fumble, came all the way back to his own 46. He almost was away.

But on the first play Maffett stopped him for a loss of 6 yards. A desperate pass, Odom to Ott, got 12 yards. It was a beauty, Odom leaping high to throw it on a line. Ott got 2 at right end and was hurt, Page replacing him. Page kicked but Georgia was penalized for roughing the kicker and the ball was Tulane's at the Georgia 41 and first down.

Two plays got nowhere and Page kicked out of bounds at the Georgia 6-yard line.

Bond kicked out of there and the ball was deaded at the Georgia 37. The wind was against Georgia in this quarter and it was, after Page's out-of-bounds kick, putting pressure on Georgia.

Tulane had it at the Georgia 37.

FIRST THREAT.

Thames' pass was incomplete by an inch. Louis Thames came right back with a beautiful run, twisting and dodging through the Georgia secondary to get a first down at the Georgia 27.

It was Tulane's first threat.

Georgia stopped one. And then Tulane missed a touchdown. Odom, a southpaw passer, threw one to Memtas, at left end. He was in the clear 6 yards from his goal. The ball hit his arms. He grabbed at it and the ball squirted out to the ground as the crowd groaned. It was a sure score had he held it.

A running play failed and Odom then fooled them again with his left-handed pass but the receiver was a bit short of the ball and Georgia took it on downs.

It was at the Georgia 23.

Bond banged through at left tackle to his 39, a gain of 16 yards.

On the second play Bond fumbled at right end and Hall recovered it at the Tulane 30.

Thames ran 15 yards only to be called back on an off-side penalty.

Thames leaped up and took it. He broke through for 5 more before Georgia pulled him down at the Georgia 15.

MAFFETT AGAIN.

A pass failed. Maffett broke it up. A lateral failed. A left-end run got 5. Odom's desperate try to Schneidau was too far and Georgia had the ball at her own 20, the pass being grounded in the end zone.

Roddenberry went in for Treadway.

Georgia got a 15-yard penalty for holding on the first play. Johnny Jones, just in, was stopped but Georgia got 5 yards as Tulane was offside.

Georgia kicked out of there. Tulane fair-caught the ball at midfield.

On the first play Roddenberry intercepted Odom's pass but Georgia was offside. And then Thames passed to Schneidau, who ran out of bounds at the Georgia 30.

And then Dalovisio dropped a pass at the goal line. Tulane had missed another touchdown.

But they came back and worked one for a first down at the Georgia 15. Schneidau taking it from Odom.

The half ended as a pass failed.

Georgia 13; Tulane 0.

Tulane had fumbled twice and Georgia had taken advantage of each one to score. Tulane had dropped two passes at the goal line and had been turned back at the 23, and twice at the 15.

It was very much of a ball game.

The Tulane team left the field with Dudley Johnson, regular player, who broke a leg last week, being wheeled out with them.

First downs were eight for Georgia and six for Tulane in the first half.

THIRD QUARTER.

Treadway took the opening kick-off of the third quarter at his 18 and brought it back to the 28.

Johnson spun through center for 5 yards. An off-side penalty gave Georgia a first down.

Alf Anderson spun through his left tackle for a first down at the 50. The Bulldogs were going fast and striking hard.

A pass was incomplete. Alf Anderson spun through at left guard for 9 yards. They gave it to Green and he plowed along to a first down at the Tulane 34.

Johnson spun through for 5. The Bulldogs apparently thought they had a weak spot at the center of the Tulane line.

Anderson faded back to pass. The crowd started shouting "Watch it, watch it." Tulane did. The pass was short. Anderson caught the next one but it was out of bounds.

OFFICIALS ASLEEP.

Green kicked. The ball hit Thames and Ashford recovered for Georgia but the officials didn't see it and it was Tulane's ball at her own 15.

Mintz failed to gain and the Bulldogs stopped Thames for no gain. Mintz kicked out of there and they nailed Johnson at his own 49.

Georgia missed a touchdown. Green passed to Candler. He had the ball half caught and he ran desperately trying to draw it in, but the ball kept slipping and finally fell from his hands.

Loftin ran Anderson out of bounds for a 5-yard loss. Green kicked a full 65 yards on the fly over the line. The ball actually traveled about 67 yards on the fly, striking two yards past the goal line. It was a great kick against the wind.

The crowd "oh'd and ah'd" at it.

My, my, those Sophie Newcomb girls are entertaining. They have a yell. At the beginning of it they stand up. The end of the yell is the shouted word "boom," and as they yell that word the girls sit down.

Modern education is a wonderful thing.

GOOD OLE CLEGG.

Georgia tossed them back. Mintz back to kick on fourth down was too badly rushed and ran with the ball, getting 8 yards and a first down.

This seemed to anger the Bulldogs and they forced another kick quickly. Mintz got off a good one and it was deaded at the Georgia 27.

Alf Anderson, on a fake reverse, caught Tulane flatfooted and ran 30 yards. He was in the open when Gould hit him. He dropped the ball and Thames grabbed it up. It was Tulane's ball at the Tulane 38.

On the first play Tulane hit one. Louis Thames passed 10 yards to Life Saver Mintz. He leaped for it with Glenn Johnson and came down with it. He snatched away and was in the clear, with Roddenberry giving vain pursuit. He scored, a 62-yard play for a touchdown. Mintz missed the point. Georgia 13; Tulane 6.

Tulane swarmed down under the kick-off and downed the runner. Three plays, with the Tulane team fighting like real demons, saw three plays lose ground.

Alf Anderson dropped back to punt. Jerry Friedericks swarmed through and blocked the kick and then fell on it to give Tulane the ball at the Georgia 11.

Three plays got 5 yards. On fourth down the whole Tulane team seemed to be in front of Mintz. Georgia battled through the interference and Mintz cut back to be thrown at the 1-yard line.

But it was first down.

FIGHTING DEMONS.

Seldom have I seen such a furious attack as Tulane started after scoring. They were literally fighting like demons according to the popular conception of how demons fight.

It was first down. Noel Loftin went over on the first play.

It was Tulane 12 and Georgia 13. Lifesaver Mintz went back to kick it.

"Keep your head down," yelled some golfer in the crowd.

He did, and the score was tied.

Georgia 13, Tulane 13.

This was a third quarter rally which must take its place as one of the most spectacular in southern football.

The quarter ended as they lined up for the kick-off.

FOURTH QUARTER.

Georgia took the kick-off at her own 39. It was short to Moorehead.

Three furious plays got 8 yards. Bond, who had come in with the last quarter, kicked out of bounds at the Tulane 15, a nice kick.

Tulane kicked it out of there after two plays, Treadway being downed at the Tulane 48.

Fredericks, who had blocked the kick leading to the tying score, was hurt, and came out. He got a deserved cheer. Four subs carried him off. He seemed to be badly hurt.

Georgia had it with 48 yards to go.

Gould knocked down a pass.

And then the fake, with Bond spinning into the center, caught Tulane asleep and Bond went 13 good yards to drive the ball to the Tulane 37.

Bond's pass to Maffett was too far. The next one hit, Bond to Otis Maffett, at the Tulane 24.

From the 24 Georgia tried the spinner at center. The hole was there but the secondary came in fast to keep the gain down to 3 yards with Bond carrying the ball. Green failed at left end. Green's pass to Bond was knocked down by Thames.

It was fourth down.

WAGNON SCORES.

Green ran back and fired one to little Henry Wagnon. He caught it just a step from the back of the end zone and it was a touchdown.

And, with all apologies to the radio announcers, may I say, "And what a touchdown!"

Treadway tried to run for the point but was thrown back.

It was Georgia 19, Tulane 13.

Tulane, with Mintz carrying the kick-off, got it back to the Tulane 39. Mintz got a first down and a pass, Thames to Mintz, got another one at the Georgia 36.

Loftin got 4 yards in the line.

Tulane tried a pass. Alf Anderson grabbed it at his own 20 and ran it back to the Tulane 31.

TOUGH FOOTBALL.

This was tough football on bad hearts and hardened arteries.

Two plays failed and then the old spinner at center saw Anderson take the ball to the Tulane 9-yard line. It was a 22-yard dash.

Green failed to gain, but the old fake reverse, this time at tackle, saw Anderson go over with one one hand touching him.

It was Georgia 25, and Tulane 13.

Green kicked the point to make it: Georgia 26, Tulane 13.

This seemed to make it safe. Harry Mehre sat down after almost four quarters of restless walking up and down in front of his bench.

The time was running out. The crowd began leaving.

A pass failed. Thames was stopped but Georgia drew a penalty for roughing and Tulane had the ball at her own 44.

A pass failed as the whistle blew.

Georgia had won a wild game, won with 13 points in the last quarter after Tulane had tied it at 13 all, in the third. It was Georgia 26 and Tulane 13.

Birmingham Southern Upsets Southwestern

LEGION FIELD, BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Birmingham-Southern's victory-starved Panthers smashed Southwestern College's Dixie conference championship aspirations here today in an amazing upset, 12 to 0.

GOPHERS RALLY TO TAKE TOUGH BIG TEN BATTLE

Home-coming Crowd of 50,000 Sees Bierman Team Win.

IOWA CITY, Iowa, Nov. 9.—(AP) Minnesota's mighty football force, stalled for 30 minutes by a furious Iowa offensive, let loose a crushing counter-charge in the second half today to whip the Hawkeyes, 13 to 6, in their battle for the Western conference leadership.

Fifty thousand home-coming fans saw the Gopher horde rise up for a two-touchdown rally in the last half after Iowa surprised the Norsemen with a first-quarter touchdown.

The Gophers assumed control of the contest immediately after the start of the third period.

George Roscoe, Sheldon Beise and Tuffy Thompson, the burly Gopher backs, were the big features as Minnesota piled up 209 yards from scrimmage, most of it in the last half, while Iowa collected 103 yards by rushing.

Oze Simmons, the Iowa negro star, could not break through the heavy Minnesota line for any of his celebrated touchdown sprints today, but the Texas lad was a constant threat.

Oze started the Iowa touchdown drive when he returned a punt from his 10-yard line to his own 35. Minnesota received its only penalty for roughing the Iowa back, and was set back to midfield when Thompson piled on Simmons after he was downed.

Hild crashed over left guard for the Iowa touchdown but Simmons missed the try for the extra point.

Minnesota started to march in the second half. Roscoe slipped a long top to Babe Levoir, who was downed on the 9-yard mark.

Beise then cracked off right guard for the tying points. Levoir's place-kick was wide.

The Gophers opened their winning drive a few minutes after the start of the last period. They got possession of the ball when Crayne kicked out of bounds on the Minnesota 23-yard line and let loose a sustained march down field.

Beise and Thompson drove through the line to the 6-yard mark and then the latter went wide around the Iowa left end for the touchdown. Levoir's kick for the extra point split the posts, and Minnesota led, 13 to 6.

Moscrip's Foot Gives Stanford Another Win, 3-0

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 9.—(AP) A field goal by Jim (Monk) Moscrip in the last 40 seconds of play enabled Stanford to defeat Southern California, 3 to 0, today before 40,000 spectators, including former President Herbert Hoover.

Stanford, heavily favored to win by 10 or more points, saw more than 59 minutes of the game pass without a pay-off. The contest was practically over when the big Red machine finally threw itself into high gear and gave a great crowd of Stanford rooters their first chance to yell their victory cheer.

Stanford lost the ball on downs on Southern California's 1-yard line in the middle of the third quarter and could not get going again until the game progressed to its last five minutes. The winners then completed their first pass. This led to the field goal by the sharpshooter Moscrip from the 15-yard line. It was the third game Moscrip's toe has given the Cards this year.

MOREHOUSE SET FOR TWO GAMES

The undefeated Maroon Tigers begin the last half of their 1935 campaign for Southern Conference honors by playing two games during the coming week. On Armistice Day, Monday, the Morehouse team will meet Knoxville, a conference opponent that it defeated last year, 13-0, and on Saturday afternoon, the 16th, will play its local rival, Clark, which last year it played to a scoreless tie. Both games will be played in Atlanta.

Saturday's game with Clark will serve to carry on the ancient and close rivalry between Atlanta's undergraduate bodies, and will be a climax to "Morehouse Week." In the last 10 years, Morehouse and Clark have played eight games, of which Clark claims four, Morehouse three, while one was a scoreless tie.

Morehouse should win both games, according to critics. In that event, the Tigers will have a string of 10 consecutive games. Not since the 1934 encounter with Morris Brown have the Tigers bowed to defeat. With Knoxville and Clark safely out of the way, one major hurdle to an all-victorious season remains, the encounter with Alabama State on Friday, November 22, and the coaches are pointing up the team for this game.

BREAK of the DAY!

"Yes," said the man from Iowa. "The red snapper there is fine and our food in Iowa is—"

"Two more sazeracs," said the banker from New Orleans, "and make it snappy."

They had two more, and then the gumbo arrived. "Not bad," said the man from Iowa, "and these here licorice drinks don't taste so bad."

"Two more," said the man from New Orleans.

The oysters arrived, enticing in their green dressing.

The man from Iowa sniffed the delicate and entrancing aroma. "Not bad," he said.

"How about two more of those drinks,"

"Yes, sir," said the waiter.

The trout margery arrived in due time with its golden sauce through which showed the pink of chopped shrimp, covering the trout.

There was some white wine with the trout, and the man from Iowa ate in silence but left nothing.

They brought him a tiny glass of benedictine. He closed his eyes and sipped it slowly. Then he put it down and beckoned the waiter.

"Waiter," he said loudly, "two more of those licorice drinks. And you know what I think of Iowa,"

"No, sir," said the waiter, "I do not."

The man from Iowa took his sazerac and lifted it on high.

"To hell with Iowa," he said.

"Yes, sir; quite so, sir," said the waiter.

THE MANAGERS ARE WORRIED.

"You can handle dentists, all right," said one of the hotel managers. "They aren't so bad. I am sorry to see them leave. You can tell a dentist you won't have a room for him for two or three hours and he doesn't mind. He goes on into the bar or he takes his wife out shopping for antiques.

"But these bankers are different. A banker is used to telling other people they can't do something, especially when it comes to notes. And when you tell a banker the rooms won't be ready for an hour or so, he doesn't like it."

"Did I tell you how we happened to get the dental convention?" asked the manager. "It was this way. At the last convention they elected a committee and the chairman of it led the fight for New Orleans. When they had voted for New Orleans, he said to them:

" 'Gentlemen,' he said, 'you may wonder why I was so anxious to go to New Orleans. Well, I'll tell you. My old Alma Mater, Colgate, plays a game down there a day before the convention opens. I ask you all to be my guests.'

"It's been a great week," said the manager. "I wish I could go see Georgia and Tulane play. But I can't. I got to stay here and tell a lot of bankers they can't have their rooms until two or three hours later when the dentists check out. Now, there's a great crowd."

AT THE STADIUM.

Well, anyhow, here we are at the stadium. It's a hot day and a clear one. The Tulane band has just paraded. And the crowd is coming in.

L. S. U. is playing just a few miles nawth of here at Baton Rouge, yet despite that fact the crowd here looks good. It should reach 15,000.

Neither Tulane nor L. S. U. would arrange the schedule to avoid a conflict. As a result, both suffer; yet the appeal of football is receiving quite a tribute. There is a great crowd at each stadium.

Out come the cheer leaders. The Sophie Newcomb girls are here to cheer for Tulane. With the two girl cheer leaders who must have been selected on the basis of good looks.

It's quite a show, your football game.

'Bama Shows Versatile Attack in Big Triumph

Freddie Sington Says Tide Resembled 1934 Team; Line Play Is Superb.

By Freddie Sington,
Former All-American Tackle at Alabama.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Nov. 9.—Alabama's swirling Tide engulfed the Clemson Tigers here today, 33-0. And in doing so simulated the power, versatility, deceptiveness, and teamwork that characterized them during their 1934 championship season.

The Alabama line was superb today, reminding one of the greatness with which the Crimsons played last year.

Captain Jimmy Walker was the chief thorn in Jess Neely's Tigers' path. Walker's famous end-around plays, executed as brilliant and well as those of Don Hutson last season, accounted for two scores for the national champions.

Riley Smith scored the first touchdown early in the second period and then added the point after.

Another Alabama score came from an intercepted Clemson pass. The Tidesmen then resorted to the reverse play with Clarence Rhordanz leading the downfield parade. Then Jimmy Walker took the ball over on a fake reverse and the old end-around. It was perfectly executed and the Crimsons were gaining momentum as the first half ended.

In the second half, Alabama began their steam-roller tactics with passes intermingled with line bucks. Williamson passed twice to Walker to put the Tide within scoring distance. Another fake reverse and Jimmy Walker with the end-around accounted for the score.

A backfield composed of Boozer, Stapp, Williamson and Neshitt showed class today.

The Clemson squad was bigger than the average team, but the fast-charging Alabama line with Kay Francis, Jim Whatley, Jimmy Walker and Tarzan White outrushed and outcharged them throughout the afternoon.

Riley Smith turned in another superb performance. For the Tigers, Black, Inabinet and Brown in the line were best, while Berry and Horton stood out in the backfield.

The Tide's varied and deceptive attack will give the Jackets plenty of trouble in Birmingham next Saturday.

MERCER LOSES TO MOCCASINS

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 9.—(AP)—A costly fumble on the part of the visitors combined with the success of their own passing attack, gave the University of Chattanooga a 12-to-7 victory over the Mercer University Bears today before 2,200 fans.

Chattanooga's Moccasins drew first blood after gaining ground on an exchange of punts in the first quarter, when Ring tossed a beautifully executed lateral to Watland, who eluded the Georgians' secondary to go 36 yards for a touchdown.

Grainger missed the try for extra point.

Mercer drove back in the second quarter with a multiple lateral, Owen to Bryan to Smith to Varner, bringing the ball to the Moccasins' 20-yard line. Woen picked up 5, eluding three tacklers, then Varner hit right tackle for a touchdown. Bryan's place kick was good and the score was Mercer 7, Chattanooga 6, when the half ended.

Play seesawed until late in the third quarter when Trew passed to Andy Kelly for a 48-yard gain on the Bears' 27. Another toss, Trew to Watland, brought the second score. Trew missed the placement.

Another Chattanooga touchdown in the making was stopped by Ring's fumble on the Mercer 11-yard line.

In the final period, Hinds fumbled on his 39 and Mercer recovered. Porter ran 22 yards to the Chattanooga 14, picked up 11 more in three plays to the Chattanooga 3-yard line. Two line plays were stopped cold and then Porter fumbled over the Moccasin goal and Chattanooga recovered to take the ball on its own 20-yard line.

After Ring punted out of danger, Bloodworth was thrown for a 10-yard loss and the game ended with the ball in Chattanooga's possession in midfield.

WOLFPACK WINS FROM V. P. I., 6-0

PORTSMOUTH, Va., Nov. 9.—(AP)—North Carolina State's Wolves, playing superior football but blocked by a stubborn defense when Virginia Tech's goal was threatened, intercepted a pass to score the lone touchdown and eke out a 6-to-0 victory over the Techmen before 10,000 spectators here this afternoon.

Charles Gadd, ace quarterback, sent into the game in the second period, came in fast, took a pass which Foots Dickerson, Tech fullback, had hurled far out to the right side of the line, and scampered 30 yards in a clear field for the Wolfpack's touchdown just before the half ended.

That's all the record book shows, but the real thrills came in the final half as State battled successfully against the jinx which carried them to defeat a year ago, 7 to 6, when State was the prime favorite.

Tech drove to State's 33 as the fourth period opened, but the alert Wolves battered down the Engineers' passes and took the ball on downs. Howard Bardes punted to Tech's 15-yard line and Marvin Cregger tucked the ball under his arm and raced 85 yards down the sidelines and across the goal as the spectators rose with a tremendous shout.

The shrill scream of the referee's whistle called the ball back and the Techmen were given the ball on their own 30-yard line, where it was ruled that Cregger had stepped outside. Nevertheless it was a beautiful, dodging run and it gave the spectators the greatest thrill of the game.

North Carolina State made 13 first downs to 5 by Tech and gained 93 yards by rushing as compared with 50 for the Engineers.

State completed 5 out of 14 passes for 84 yards, while Tech could complete only two out of 13 for 17 yards.

PURPLES HEAVY FAVORITE; DOPE MEANS NOTHING

Prep Classic at Grant Field Is Lone Battle of Week.

By Roy White.

Boys' High plays Tech High Saturday afternoon at Grant field. That lone statement carries more interest and sentiment than all other prep stories of the year and is the one game on btoh schedules which means more than all the others combined.

There are no championships hanging in the balance, but either team will give its entire season's record just to win that one game.

It is the o ly prep game here of the week and with Tech in Birmingham against Alabama, one of the largest prep crowds of the year is expected to be present.

Boys' High, with nine straight victories this season, and a record of 22 wins in the last 23 starts, will be a heavy favorite, but the form sheets have been ripped to shreds in selecting winners in the past games.

LETDOWN.

The long winning strain and pressure is beginning to assert itself in the Boys' High team. The Purples played one of their worst games two weeks ago at Montgomery and the last half play Friday night at Macon against Lanier High was nothing to write home about. In fact, the Purples were outfought practically all the way and certainly were outplayed in every department in the last period.

Tech High, with every player from last year missing when the 1935 roll was called, has progressed slowly. The Smithies have won three, lost five and tied one game. Their record can be wiped off the boards with a victory Saturday and since the defeat by Marist in the second game of the season, the Smithies have turned their attention to Saturday's game with Boys' High.

And with the Smithies on the upgrade and Boys' High showing no signs of improving, it is certain to be another of those bitter Boys' High-Tech High battles.

Win, lose or tie, Boys' High is assured of at least a chance in the playoff for state championship honors.

STILL IN RACE.

G. M. A. is still in the race for both city and state honors, with two wins, one loss and one tie in state competition.

Richmond Academy is the only team to hold a victory over G. M. A. and a loss for Boys' High Saturday will throw the race into a muddled condition.

And should the Purples lose to Tech High, G. M. A. will have an equally strong claim with the Purples for city prep honors. Conflicting dates made it impossible for the two to get together this season.

Four other Atlanta prep teams, Commercial, G. M. A., Russell and Decatur will be away from home Friday afternoon. Marist has an open date and with only the Tech High-Boys' High game on Saturday scheduled here, Marist is anxious for a Thursday or Friday night game at Ponce de Leon park.

BATTLE AT MONROE.

Commercial and Monroe Aggies will battle Friday afternoon at Monroe for third place in the Georgia Interscholastic Athletic Association race. First and second place will most likely be decided between Boys' High, Richmond and G. M. A., with the Friday game naming third position.

G. M. A. will have a rest game with Rome High Friday afternoon in Rome.

Decatur plays at Griffin Friday night and Russell plays at Gainesville in an afternoon game.

Druid Hills High, with four wins, leads the North Georgia Interscholastic conference, but the Druid Hills team has not played Decatur, Marist, Russell or Commercial.

Commercial has three wins and one tie and is in a better position to claim the title, because of its heavy schedule. Marist has two wins and one tie and appears to be on a par with Commercial as the leading teams in the conference. They played a scoreless tie some time ago.

son made his kick good and the 13-7 lead looked insurmountable.

PUNT HELPS.

But a booming 55-yard punt by Toby Palmer that bounced out on Mississippi's 1-yard line rallied the bruised Volunteers. Bernard got off a poor punt to his own 31-yard line. On fourth down, Derryberry passed to Tansil, Vol end, on the Ole Miss 8-yard line. Again he faded back and rifled a pass to Rose, end, standing in the end zone, to tie the score, with 15 seconds left to play.

J. Craig booted a perfect placement.

From scrimmage, Ole Miss riddled the Vol line with a deceptive series of reverses that usually found either Rodgers or R. Hapes slashing at the tackles, rolling up 252 yards to 53 for the Vols. But it was the deadly Tennessee overhead game that baffled the Ole Miss secondary in the critical moments. Derryberry today might have been the ghost of Tennessee's immortal Bobby Dodd, who could hang a pass "on a peg" with the football great.

OLE MISS CROWD.

When Craig booted the opening kickoff, the stadium and temporary stands were packed with the crowd, predominantly pro-Mississippi. But the valiant spirit of the seemingly outclassed Vols thrilled them.

Tennessee's first quarter march of 80 yards for a touchdown was their only sustained drive of the game. It was started when Palmer dropped back in punt formation, faked a kick perfectly and then suddenly shot a pass to Rose, who was pulled down on the Ole Miss 48. Palmer and Sharp rammed the left side of their line for 8 yards between them.

Again it was Rose who was on the receiving end as Derryberry nestled a floater into his arms and it was Tennessee's ball on the Ole Miss 5 with a first down. Three tries at the line were futile.

BIG GREEN ROUTS WILLIAM & MARY

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 9.—(AP)—After struggling through a first quarter which threatened destruction to their unbeaten record, Earl Blaik's Dartmouth Indians ground out a 34-0 victory over a grimly determined William and Mary team on Memorial field here this afternoon before a crowd of 9,000.

Held to a 7-0 score at the half, a disorganized big Green eleven swung into line to roll up four tallies over the fighting southerners in the second half. Frank Nairne, lanky halfback, carried the ball across twice.

After a scoreless opening period with William and Mary playing Dartmouth to a standstill, the second quarter saw little Phil Conti flip a lateral to Gordon Bennett, who charged to the 15-yard stripe, where a Hollingsworth-to-Camp forward sent the veteran end across. A fatal quick kick in the third period cost the southerners 7 more points when Hollingsworth got under the ball and weaved 45 yards for the touchdown, with Christiansen converting.

From this point on the William and Mary fire died, and the game ended with the big Green scrubs battling the visitors to a standstill, after the regulars had piled up 20 more points.

The initial touchdown was the only score resulting from a forward pass attempt.

Score by periods:
William & Mary ..... 0 0 0 0— 0
Dartmouth ..... 0 7 13 14—34

Scoring: William & Mary, none. Dartmouth: Touchdowns, Camp, Hollingsworth, Billings, Nairne 2; points after touchdowns, Joe Handrahan 3, Christiansen.

BOXING CARD HERE THURSDAY

Forty-four rounds of boxing will feature an all-star white and colored boxing card Thursday night at the city auditorium. Promoters Robey and Bettis, well-known here, will offer some of the outstanding boxers of the southeast.

Joe Hall, Oklahoma City middleweight, who, according to newspaper clippings, is one of the most promising fighters in this section will, headline the program. He will meet Harold Glymph, Atlanta's favorite, in a 10-round setto.

Roy Dunn, local colored welterweight who has been winning over all opposition in his latest bouts, will clash in the semi-windup bout with Tiger Lanier, hard-punching colored mixer, of Albany. This bout promises to rival the main event for action.

In the main preliminary bout, "Dynamite" Red, who hails from New Orleans, will meet T. Hubert, colored middleweight, of Atlanta.

Four other popular preliminaries will round out the card.

The promoters announced that sections at the auditorium will be divided for the white and colored fans. Unusually low scale of prices will be in effect for Thursday's hostilities. Prices will be ringside seats, 40 cents, and dress circle seats, 25 cents.

The Letter Carriers' band will play during the evening.

'Rough Richard' Ready For Match Tuesday

Not dismayed in the least by his defeat at the hands of Danno O'Mahoney, the Irish heavyweight wrestling champion, Rough Richard Daviscourt is preparing to meet any and all advances made toh im by Dorve Roche the big Scranton coal miner when the two meet Tuesday night in the 90-minute feature match at the auditorium.

And the rugged California veteran, in answer to Roche's statement made Friday in which the ex-miner said that he would make short order of Daviscourt, said that he would return the compliment. So fans are eagerly awaiting the match between the two.

But this is only one of three star matches to be presented. In the one-hour semi-windup, Joe Cox, the former Red Terror, comes to grips with Whitey Grove, former Detroit pro football star. Ellis Bashara takes on Bob Wagner in the 30-minute opener.

Popular prices will prevail and ladies will be admitted free with a male escort. Tickets may be secured at the Piedmont Hatters.

Davis Is Star As Wildcats Beat 'Gators, 15-6

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 9.—(AP)—While 8,000 home-coming day fans shouted themselves hoarse, Bob Davis, flashy University of Kentucky halfback, executed one of his spectacular long runs here today to lead the Wildcats to a well-earned 15-to-6 grid victory over the University of Florida Alligators.

Davis' 59-yard touchdown sprint, while not the margin of the Kentuckians' victory, their first in their last three starts, came at the psychological moment and stifled a fourth period Florida rally that already had put the 'Gators within striking distance to victory.

The lanky backfield ace stole the show from his running mate, Bert Johnson, who had hard going against the Floridians and was taken out after his fumble paved the way for the Alligators' only score.

The break that gave Florida its sole touchdown came early in the final period. Hughes, Florida guard, recovered Johnson's fumble on Kentucky's 14-yard line after an exchange of punts and in half a dozen plays the visitors smashed down the Kentucky defense as McAnly skirted left end for a one-yard gain and a touchdown. Hughes' kick for the extra point was knocked down.

Late in the period, after he argued down a suggestion that he be taken out for a rest, Davis uncorked his long run for the last score of the game. Ayers' kick for the extra point was wide.

Score by periods:
Florida ..... 0 0 0 6— 6

PITT TRAMPLES ARMY TEAM, 29-6, ON LATE ATTACK

Aroused Panthers Score Three Touchdowns in Last Period.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 9.—(UP)—The Pitt Panthers rode the Army mules to a crushing 29-to-6 defeat today.

A shouting throng of 68,000 packed the stadium to watch Pitt gain momentum slowly, they burst out with three quick touchdowns to give Army, crippled by injuries and illness, its second straight setback.

After turning Army back in the first period, the Panthers marched deep into Cadet territory. There it was that Army threw back three line thrusts, but Frank Patrick, big sophomore fullback, place kicked a field goal from a difficult angle on the 31-yard line.

In the third quarter, Bobby Larue, junior right halfback, scored the first Panther touchdown on a lateral from Patrick, who was on the 8-yard line. Patrick booted the extra point to make the score 10 to 0.

Little Monk Meyer, the Army's left halfback, came into the game at the beginning of the second half, and it was his passes that set the stage for the Army's touchdown in the fourth period.

The drive started on Army's 33 and didn't end until Clinton True, of New Orleans, sub fullback, took Meyer's pass on the 3-yard line and went the rest of the way for the score.

The last Pitt touchdown came as the fans fought their way out of the stadium. Pitt had a mixture of third and fourth team players on the field. The ball was on Army's 46-yard line. The quarterback, Arnold Greene, faded back and sailed a 50-yard pass to the substitute end, Shaw, for the score. The extra point was missed.

DUKE DEFEATS DAVIDSON, 26-7

RICHARDSON FIELD, DAVIDSON, N. C., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Duke University loosened its power, speed and deception against Davidson College here this afternoon to defeat the Wildcats before a home-coming crowd of 7,000 under cool, calm, clear conditions. The score was 26 to 7.

Elmore (Honey) Hackney, Duke reserve back, provided the game's most electrifying play in the third period when he skirted the well-clipped edge of the scrimmage pile, cut back behind a screen of fast-forming interference and paced off 64 yards to the goal.

In the opening quarter on the Davidson 30-yard line Hackney bulleted a short pass to Hudgins, who cut in behind down-field interference and scored standing up.

Duke's regulars replaced the reserves at the start of the second quarter, repulsed a Wildcat invasion and took the ball on the Duke 23. That started a 77-yard advance that led to a touchdown, with Jack Alexander faking the ball over.

Davidson's counter came just before the final whistle. Dennis recovered Hudgins' fumble on Duke's 21. A pass, Lafferty to Armfield, carried to the 1 from where Swede Johnson, sub for Pittman, bucked it over on fourth down.

Buckeyes Rally To Beat Chicago In Thriller, 13-0

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—(AP)—In a blood-and-thunder thriller, an infuriated Ohio State team came from behind today and fought with all its power to keep its Western conference record unblemished.

Trailing the downtrodden Chicago Maroons, 13 to 0 midway in the third period of their game, the Buckeyes cut loose with a smashing, passing drive that resulted in three touchdowns, and a 20-to-13 triumph. The glory of the game belonged to Jay Berwanger, captain of the Maroons and sometimes called the one-man team.

The great Chicago halfback raced 85 yards down the field through the whole Buckeye team, dodging and twisting in the snakiest gallop seen on Stagg field since the famed Red Grange sped over the gridiron ten years ago.

That hair-raising run gave Chicago its second touchdown and a 13-to-0 lead over the Ohioans in the third. But Berwanger wasn't quite enough to combat the powerful last-period attack. Heekin, Wendt and Williams scored touchdowns while Busich and Beltz place-kicked the extra points.

OUR DEBT TO RURAL GEORGIA

The debt owed by the business and industrial centers of Georgia to the rural sections of the state is described in an editorial, ringing with sincerity and inspired by a deep and understanding appreciation, in the Albany Herald, published in a progressive community in the heart of one of Georgia's finest agricultural sections.

Editor H. T. McIntosh, scion of a family of newspapermen who have contributed generously to the development not only of their city but of the state as a whole, summarizes the part played by our rural sections in the economics of Georgia in the following glowing tribute:

Take away the contribution of rural Georgia to the sum of the state's prosperity, and signals of distress would soon be flying over every city bank, every wholesale and retail store, and all but a few of our industrial plants. Georgia's agricultural products—cotton, and cottonseed, peanuts, tobacco, pecans, grain, hay, watermelons, truck, fruit, poultry, eggs, hogs, cattle, syrup—have a value close to a quarter of a billion dollars this year.

No wonder that this able and talented Georgia editor writes that "any blanket indictment of the people who dwell in the rural communities—any charge or intimidation that they are more social and economic liabilities than assets—is gross slander." The editorial appears in full on the opposite page.

No commentator in Georgia is more competent to discuss the wealth of the rural sections of the Empire State of the South than Mr. McIntosh. His distinguished father, the late H. M. McIntosh, as editor of the Herald was one of the outstanding leaders in the development of the farming areas in southwest Georgia.

From a widespread territory, with but few inhabitants, this section has become one of the garden spots of agricultural America, and as the farms have become more numerous, and those who have tilled them more prosperous, Albany and other fine and progressive communities have kept pace.

The foundation of Georgia's economic structure is, as pointed out by Editor McIntosh, fundamentally based on the magnificent revenues received annually from the agricultural products of the state—amounting this year to almost a quarter of a billion dollars.

In no state in the country can a greater variety of farm crops be produced, nor in finer quality. With the abandonment of the one-crop system of farming, diversification has grown by leaps and bounds and now the fertile soil of Georgia sends to all the world the finest of fruits, vegetables, berries and nuts.

The dependence upon cotton kept Georgia agriculture back for many years, but with the emergence of our farmers from this bondage, conditions in the rural sections have been revolutionized.

No more are we sending from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 out of the state each year for the purchase of feed and food produced in other states. Now our farmers are raising their own feed and food and the millions formerly sent away are being used to modernize farms and homes and in the purchase of luxuries they have never before been able to afford.

No rural areas in the United States have more new automobiles in them than do those of Georgia, this being evidenced not only by the cars on the roads of the state, but by statistics showing that Georgia leads all the states of the Union in the purchase of new cars as compared with the number bought even in the boom years.

The great mail order houses are reaping rich profits in rural Georgia, and the small-town stores and factory agencies are finding themselves hard put to it to keep their shelves and warehouses filled.

As Editor McIntosh points out, rural Georgia is still not an El Dorado, but with the continuance of the changing conditions of the past quarter of a century, the next few years will see the farming sections of the state second to none in prosperity in the country.

The combination of Georgia's rich and fertile soils and matchless climate, and a people who to an unusual degree are descendants of the hardy pioneers who carved America out of the wilderness, is assurance that in future the state will become an even more sound and prosperous agricultural empire.

THE DIVIDED REPUBLICANS

Dyed-in-the-wool republican newspapers are loudly acclaiming the results of Tuesday's elections—but an analysis of the G. O. P. claims of defeat for the New Deal reveals the extent to which they represent a clutching at any kind of straw in a time of continued adversity.

In commenting upon recapture by the republicans of the New York assembly, the New York Herald Tribune says:

The result is a substantial and unmistakable rejection of the New Deal. . . . The assembly election is an omen of promise and a signpost on the road to victory in 1936. May its directions be followed and its promise be performed!

The fact is overlooked that the democrats controlled the assembly of New York state in 1935 for the first time in 27 years; republican for that long period, the recent election hinged principally on state matters having no relation to the New Deal. If the New Deal was at issue in that state then the election was a triumph for Roosevelt and his policies, since in the two districts in which there were congressional contests the democrats won handily—a fact which the republican papers ignore in their comments.

Regarding the election in Philadelphia, the Inquirer hails the result as repudiation of the New Deal, saying:

Philadelphia stands fast! It has repudiated the New Deal and all its works. It has held the line for safe and sane republican government.

Just what happened in Philadelphia to arouse such enthusiasm? The city elected a republican mayor. They have been electing republican mayors in Philadelphia regularly since 1881—that is 54 years. In 1931 the republican edge was 338,879; in 1935—last Tuesday—it was 47,214. Because the republican candidate won, it is called a repudiation of the New Deal. Had the democratic candidate wiped out that small plurality of 47,214, then the cry would have been that the election hinged principally on local affairs.

Much is made over the republican victories in New Jersey, already republican, and a state in which the democrats did not expect to win, and fought only to cut down republican pluralities. Wherever a republican won out, if only for a city council seat, the party organs hail the victory as repudiation of the New Deal; but in Kentucky, where a democrat defeated a republican for governor, the incident is treated as purely a state matter.

Meanwhile, the various and sundry aspirants for the republican presidential nomination are erecting their lightning rods from which flutters pennants bearing a multitude of conflicting ideas.

Governor Alf Landon, of Kansas, declares he stands for a "pay-as-you-go" policy for government, and a "sound, commonsense administration."

Colonel Frank Knox comes out with a four-point program as a substitute for the New Deal which, on analysis, resembles closely the republican policy that was repudiated at the polls in 1932.

Senator Vandenburg, of Michigan, declares the republicans can win in 1936 if they are ready with "affirmative plans" for the nation's troubles. He fails to mention those "affirmative plans," but while advocating a "Lincoln liberalism" platform says: "An attack on everything the Roosevelt administration has done will not succeed."

All of which means that the republicans are still wandering around in the wilderness of despair; they do not know which of the various leaders they should choose, and there is no definite path for them to follow. They cheer at every ray of sunshine that breaks through the tree tops, but that is only to keep up their courage.

Meanwhile, the country moves onward and upward as benefits of the New Deal become more pronounced. From all sections come reports of improved conditions, one instance of which will suffice. The Moultrie (Ga.) Observer says:

The Moultrie and Colquitt county area has shown a decided trend back to normalcy during the past 12 months, a survey here reveals. City and county officials, real estate men, automobile dealers and even laymen in the street reported better conditions. The return of prosperity, said officials and laborers, is not confined to any particular line, but is spread among practically all professions and businesses.

There can be no better barometer of economic conditions brought about by the administration of New Deal policies than increases in bank accounts, and the last reports made by Atlanta banks show record-breaking gains that reflect great improvement in all lines of business.

Enemies of the New Deal may cry aloud and beat their breasts in futile dismay; they may refuse to cooperate and dig in their heels to retard progress, but the country is on the highway to prosperity, and so long as it continues to progress the efforts of republicans and disgruntled democrats to throw up smoke screens to befuddle the public will be unavailing.

MEAT-CURING PLANTS

Announcement is made that the meat-curing plant at Waycross is open and ready for fall business, and, in all probability, others in various parts of the state are either already open or preparing for that event.

The establishment of these curing plants, most of which are in connection with local ice plants, has done much to increase hog production in Georgia. Before these facilities were available to farmers it was necessary to wait for a severe "cold snap" before it was safe to butcher the porkers; even then the weather mighty suddenly turn warm before the carcasses were thoroughly chilled, resulting in heavy losses.

In addition, there was the cost of feeding hogs, probably for several months after they were in prime condition, waiting for suitable "hog-killing weather."

Now the farmer may slaughter his hogs any time in the fall they are in condition and he has the time to attend this farm duty, rush them to the curing plant in his truck, with confidence he will suffer no loss from spoilage.

Some plants simply chill the carcasses, after which the farmer takes them home and completes the curing of the meat according to his own formula. Other plants are equipped to complete the entire job of chilling and curing, and the cost is so low that this procedure is becoming popular.

The Waycross plant has operated three years, and has cured as much as 360,000 pounds in a single season. Increase in the number of hogs in Ware county and surrounding territory has been so great, together with the popularity of the improved method of handling carcasses, that the Waycross plant's capacity has been increased to the point where it can care for a million pounds of meat this season.

CHINA SEETHES AGAIN

The attempted assassination of the premier of China and two members of his cabinet by a man identified as being closely aligned with the semi-independent Canton government in the south, and the discontent manifest among leaders in the northern area dominated by Peiping, makes it clear that the Nanking government is again facing a serious crisis.

A bloody separatist rebellion is sweeping a large area of north China, and General Shang Chen, governor of Hopei province, lays the blame to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's conciliatory policy toward Japan.

Chiang completely dominates the Nanking government, and about a year ago adopted an attitude of cooperation with the Japanese, a policy ascribed by his supporters to a realization that unless Tokyo is kept in a friendly mood, China may lose still more territory, while his enemies darkly hint of bribery.

Rebellion has been brewing in the northern provinces for months, chiefly because of the high taxes levied by the Nanking government, all of which are being used to finance the armies now fighting the communists in the upper Yangtse valley.

The northern Chinese, far removed from the communist provinces, are bitterly protesting this use of their tax monies and demanding that some of it be spent in the regions where it is collected. They hold that the whole of North China is being "bled white to finance Nanking's military adventures."

It is typical of Chinese leadership that the tax collectors are putting the blame for the discontent upon propaganda being spread by Japanese emissaries.

Reports from both Peiping and Tientsin indicate that there is more serious danger of a further division of China proper through the establishment of an independent state in North China than has ever before existed. This would leave the Nanking government in control of the central and western portions of the nation, with Canton controlling the southern section.

It is known that many merchants and farmers in North China are in favor of the creation of an independent state, not only because it would relieve them of the burden of furnishing the greater part of the money on which the nationalist government operates, but would recreate the profitable commerce that existed with the fertile plains of Manchuria before the creation of the new state of Manchukuo.

Ever since the downfall of the Chinese empire nearly a quarter of a century ago students of conditions in the far-flung country have from time to time expressed the opinion that the real future of China lay in the division of the country into four smaller nations along racial and sectional lines.

The customs and language of the Manchurians, the northern central and southern Chinese are largely different, and living conditions in the territories they inhabit also vary widely.

The Nanking government may be able once more to "unify" the country, as has been announced so often in the past, but the serious discontent now existing may easily lead to a major upheaval.

SILENCE WINS IN NEW YORK

Wholehearted public approval of Mayor LaGuardia's campaign to reduce unnecessary traffic noises is reported by the New York Herald Tribune, and credit for the recently registered 22.5 per cent drop in automobile accidents on the streets of the city is attributed to the more peaceful conditions.

The Herald Tribune points out that—

The horn is supposed to be a safety device, but it is true, nevertheless, that horn blowing is more often than not a substitute for care in driving. New York's experience of a month with noiseless nights confirms the fact and so does what has happened in England since it began shushing the tooters. There in the five months from April 1 to September 1, 1935, as Major Curran has pointed out, deaths from automobile accidents decreased 17 per cent and injuries 7 per cent, as compared with the same five months in 1934.

Unnecessary noise is enough of an evil simply as a nuisance and sleep destroyer. When it can be measured in terms of injury and death, it comes close to qualifying as public enemy No. 1. Let's not forget, as the campaign to suppress it creates its inevitable irritations, that not only nerves but lives are at stake.

No city in the country needs a noise abatement campaign to lessen the din on its streets than does Atlanta.

At all hours of the day and night, in both the crowded downtown business sections and the outlying residential areas, eardrums and nerves are tortured by the proneness of some autoists to "sit on their horns." Cars are boldly operated with mufflers so out of order as to be of little use in quieting the roar of the cylinders, while other drivers take fiendish pleasure in causing their motors to backfire, to the alarm of everybody within hearing distance.

The city suffers from these and numerous other illegal noises while somnolent policemen lounge on their beats and make no effort to enforce the anti-noise ordinances on the statute books of the city.

Until recently sound trucks, with blatant loudspeakers, were permitted to operate on the streets of the city in open defiance of the law. It was only natural that a member of council should come to the conclusion that an ordinance was needed to put an end to this abomination—only to find when he introduced such a measure that the law was already on the statute books, with the police making no effort to enforce it.

Atlanta has ample laws to prevent unnecessary noises, but it might be a good idea for some councilman to again introduce measures of like nature as a move to awaken the police to the fact that much of the din on Atlanta's streets from early morning to late at night is not only annoying and dangerous, but illegal.

SILHOUETTES

BY RALPH T. JONES.

She washes dishes,
Scrubs the floor,
And cooks three meals a day;
She goes on Sunday
To the church
To hear them sing and pray.

She plants a garden,
Ev'ry year,
And loves each humble flower;
She lives her lifetime
Day by day,
And hour by quiet hour.

You'll hear her singing
At her work,
Ofttimes as you pass by;
From open window
Catch the scent
Of new baked bread or pie.

And when her menfolks
Homing come,
From desk or forge or store,
She's always waiting,
With a smile,
To greet them at the door.

Life holds no problems
For her soul,
She meets each simple duty;
She'd be surprised
If she were told
She's filled her niche with beauty.

From such a woman
Radiates
Comfort beyond compare;
Yet women such As I've described
Are mighty, mighty rare.

Built
Special Tabernacle.

The death of Billy Sunday, last week, brings colorful memories to Atlantans old-timer enough to remember back 20 years.

When it was decided to bring Billy Sunday to Atlanta for five weeks of daily revival meetings, the first thing done was to finance and build a special wooden tabernacle on the old Wheat street circus grounds.

According to memory the seating capacity was 10,000, or something like that.

Rody and His Saxophone.

Billy had his wooden platform in front of the stand for the great choir that Rodeheaver trained and led. Rody's specialty was the saxophone and he used to do some mighty moanin' through his sliphorn while the choir sang.

At either side of Billy's platform were special accommodations for newspaper reporters and all three papers were amply represented at each service. I almost said "performance."

For the entire five weeks of his stay, each of the three papers carried a front page, top-head story on his meeting every day. All his sermons were published in full, by special arrangement with the publishers, though it required from 6 to 16 columns daily to do it.

Reported by the Son
Of a Great Exhorter.

At that time the late Paul Jones, one of the best reporters ever to cover a run in Atlanta, had returned to his home in Cartersville after working on one or other of the Atlanta papers for various periods of service. He was the son of the Rev. Sam Jones, Georgia's most famous contribution to the evangelistic ranks.

The Constitution conceived the idea it would be a fitting and exceptionally apropos thing to get the son of Sam Jones to report the Sunday meetings.

So Paul was offered a job, accepted, and came on to join the staff in time for the Sunday revival.

And brilliantly he did the job, covering two services a day with never-failing enthusiasm and writing some grand stories about it all.

A Platform
Incident.

One night a stranger forced his way onto the platform where Billy Sunday was preaching and said, or did, something or other that was never quite clear. Billy knocked the man down and the police hurried him away to the station house.

It was reported as an attempt to attack the revivalist but I've always believed the man's purposes were innocent. He seemed to be, I thought, one of those rather wild intellectuals who spend their lives seeking somebody to listen to their fanatic theories and arguments. But usually harmless enough.

Billy "Regular"
With Reporters.

Billy was always a great friend to all newspapermen. He met them on their own ground and was a thoroughgoing "regular fellow" in his daily contacts.

I recall riding with him to the federal penitentiary when he went there to preach to Uncle Sam's wards and, while the subject matter of our conversation en route is forgotten, the memory of an exceptionally fascinating talk remains.

Easy To "Hit Trail."

Billy was clever enough to realize that the more people who "hit the sawdust trail" at each service the greater was the measure of his success. So he made it as easy as possible for people to come down those sawdust-covered aisles and shake his hand at the end of his sermon. Sometimes he asked them to come just to shake hands as a mere matter of courtesy. He never made their coming a symbol of outright "conversion," but at the most told them it indicated a resolve to lead a better life.

So a fair proportion of the "trail-hitters" were simply listeners who came down to shake hands with the noted preacher as a matter of good fellowship, as an event of importance in their lives or as a courteous encouragement to the cause.

Powerful Factor
For Better Living.

That his five weeks of preaching achieved a large amount of good there can be no denying. I know men and women whose mode of life was entirely reformed—for the better—as a result of the resolves they made in that vast wooden tabernacle.

I know others who, so far as I can see, have reaped no benefit. Men and women who made their affirmations of reformation with tears in their eyes but who have since gone right on with their more or less irregular habits of life and, in many instances, are really worse citizens now than they were then.

That, however, is human nature and it would be totally unfair to say that the leaven Billy introduced into Atlanta's life has not worked for the great good of the community since.

His effect is still felt.

His methods were crude, surely. Today they are, probably, outmoded. But they suited his time and they were a powerful factor for better living and greater decency.

Peace be to his soul.

When Carver's wild west show was here one of its members, a wild steer rider, fell in love with a young lady living near Atlanta. He wrote her a letter giving reference in Denver. Pacifists or Peace-Makers?

Tomorrow, November 11, is Armistice Day. The radiant red number on our calendars, seems to mock us with its memories of our joy over the glad tidings that the war was over. The war to end all wars, we were told. Now we can almost hear the rumble of armed tanks and the roar of artillery across the seas. Something has gone wrong — terribly wrong. That war did not end war. Has Armistice Day lost its meaning? What shall we celebrate tomorrow?

That was a very gallant, and characteristic, gesture of the British government, when they declared that no longer would they celebrate November 11. Foreign diplomats were informed that they would not be expected to observe the usual courtesy of placing wreaths on the tomb of the "unknown soldier." This was done in order not to seem to exult over a defeated foe, stirring up old passions out of which another war might be born. The spirit thus manifested deserves our highest admiration. But I raise the question, whether in the expression of this fine spirit of sportsmanship, it is necessary to ignore the day, and thereby seem to ignore the boys who put their lives in jeopardy in that great conflict.

Significance of November 11.

It is true that in the passing years we have revised our judgment concerning nations, and the measure of their responsibility for that bloody tragedy. Hatreds engendered in those terrible days have faded, and, with a better perspective, we may judge more fairly the issues involved. We must not forget, however, that we revised our opinion of that war, and of all wars, after these boys had died in our stead. No matter what we may think now, our boys went to the fields of France for what we thought then. No new light which may have come to us can change the truth, that we sent our soldiers across the ocean to fight in a "war to end wars," and that this nation could never have been aroused to the fervent heat of sacrificial earnestness which characterized it in 1917-18, save for its purpose to make a permanent peace upon the earth.

And it is just here that I find our justification for the celebration of November 11. That date marks the day we stopped fighting. "Armistice Day" means a truce for the purpose of making a permanent peace. The wild joy which swept over this nation that day, was not primarily because of a victory. It was because of the profound and inexpressible relief which came with the consciousness that the war was over, and our boys were coming home to live in peace.

To my mind November 11 should remain radiantly red on our calendars as a constant reminder that those who died, and those who were willing to die, have left us a sacred responsibility to make real the ideal for which they fought—a warless world. Of course, the stupid blunder which we all made, was to believe that any war could end wars. That does not relieve us, but only adds to the weight of our obligation to search for some method by which to make another such war impossible. Now in the presence of the immediate danger of just such another world catastrophe, shall we shirk this high and holy obligation? Shall we accept the ancient fallacy that war in inevitable, and betray the trust these boys imposed in us?

Passenger or Pilot?

Yes. The nation is well-nigh a unit behind the declaration of our President, that we shall not become involved in the war between Italy and Ethiopia. Our people seem to approve, also, the warning given that those who seek to trade with either of the belligerents, do so at their own risk. So far, so good. We seek to avoid becoming involved in a war. But in this course the United States seeks to be a "pacifist." She takes no potent part in seeking to prevent future wars. A "pacifist," whether an individual or a nation, is merely a "neutral," a negative influence. A "peacemaker" is a positive creative force, who seeks to make a world in which nations may dwell in peace and prosperity.

This is a stupendous task, which requires the co-operative effort of all the civilized nations. The League of Nations is absolutely the only organized effort in all the world for that task. It is the only instrument offered to all the nations by which they can co-operate for international accomplishment. It is strong and effective to the extent that the nations co-operate. It is weak and ineffective as the nations withhold their counsel and force. The absence of the United States from Geneva has proven the weakness of the League, as repeatedly the nations have halted and hesitated to act definitely in international crises, because they could not count on our support.

The justification of our course of isolation has been, that we refuse to enter the League in order to keep out of war. But all the lessons of the past prove, that we are in more danger of becoming involved in war outside of the League, with no voice in its council and no part in directing the course of events, than we could be as a potent member. Why should this great nation remain a mere passive observer of the course of history, subject to, and perhaps a victim of, the decisions and actions of others, rather than take a leadership in creating history? Our covenant with the boys who sleep in France is infinitely more than to keep out of war. It is to make a warless world.

Asks Why Rain Should Cause Traffic Jams On Streets of Atlanta

Editor Constitution: On a recent afternoon it rained and it rained hard. That is not unusual for the section, for during the fall and winter it often rains, but it was out of the ordinary to see traffic jammed. People sitting on their horns and noise, confusion, trouble in traveling on every side, in front and behind.

Who shall ever forget the terrible time of standing still, unable to move for long periods?

The thing that troubles those of us who were in the jam is what is going to take place in the future when it rains. Is a great city like Atlanta going to be stymied when it rains, with nobody able to move and untangle traffic?

If a rain can produce such results what if something more calculated to produce trouble were to come forth?

People in cars and walking found a jam such as they had never before witnessed. One thing was evidenced clearly and that was that we need more traffic men and should have them. For a city like Atlanta to face another such situation would be to admit inefficiency where inefficiency should not be in evidence.

SUNDAY'S YESTERDAYS.

November 10, 1632—The general court of Massachusetts Bay colony enacted: "It is ordered that no person shall take any tobacco publicly, under pain of punishment; also that every one shall pay 1 d. for every time he is convicted of taking tobacco in any place." This didn't stop it, so the fine was raised to 2s, 6d. for each offense.

November 10, 1728—Oliver Goldsmith was born in Ireland, a minister's son. He started for America, lost his money in a gambling house, and had to stay at home. Otherwise, he might never have written his immortal "The Deserted Village" and "She Stoops to Conquer." Well-remembered Goldsmith golden line: "The French would be excellent cooks if they had anything to cook."

November 10, 1769—Captain James Hollymore died in England. When he was a child his mother told him he would die on November 10, 1769. All his life he looked forward to it as his death date. On November 9 he made his will, gave order for his funeral and went to bed in seeming good health. In the morning he was found dead in bed!

FIRST WORLD WAR DAY-BY-DAY.

Twenty Years Ago Today, November 9-10, 1915—British submarine warfare in the Baltic was more than matching the fury of German and Austrian submarines in the Mediterranean, with both Berlin and London reporting an average of more than one ship a day destroyed. On the 8th, Berlin announced that the freighters Tara, Woolwich, Buresh and Glenmore had been destroyed by two submarines in the Mediterraneon. These were the U-35, and U-38, and within a month they were to dispose of 23 ships. London revealed the torpedoing of the Pernambuco of the Hamberg-American Line; Soderhamm, Johannes Russ and Hernoesand.

The Allies were forced to turn more and more to the United States for supplies, and Germany to devise desperate new means of wresting the hundred and one things she needed to keep her vast war machine going, from neighbor states and conquered territories. The influence of naval warfare on history was never made more apparent.

It doesn't, as is shown by the fact that it snows in the coldest parts of the world. But many of the heaviest snows do come during the mildest parts of the winter, a fact easily explained.

Indifference of Public, Inadequate Ordinances, Poor Enforcement Blamed For Bad Traffic Conditions in Atlanta

By EDWIN LUDWIG.

The Constitution's safe-driving campaign, however commendable it is, cannot succeed in Atlanta. Those persons who have been around the country, who are acquainted with cities other than Atlanta, can see why.

Four and one-half years ago, in a traffic analysis printed on the editorial page of The Constitution of Sunday, May 17, 1931, I wrote of traffic conditions as I, a newcomer to Atlanta, then saw them. Traffic violations and dangerous practices were enumerated in detail, along with the sections of the then-prevailing code which outlawed such practices. There was, and still is, double-parking, making right-hand turns against the red without stopping or yielding the right-of-way, weaving, cutting traffic signals, illegal parking, right-hand turns from the center lane, and so on.

Since 1931 conditions have grown worse, as evidenced by the growing number of accidents and the safety campaign now carried on by The Constitution. Already, in 1935, there have been, according to the Dixie Motor Club, 2,814 accidents in Atlanta—with 943 injured and 38 deaths. These figures are for the first nine months only, and are for Atlanta only. For metropolitan Atlanta, the figures no doubt are double.

Anyone who doubts my allegations has only to stand on any prominent corner, like Ponce de Leon and Juniper, and count the traffic violations, including the making of right-hand turns against the red and even the amber without first stopping; or has only to go to some suburban business center, like the Peachtree-Tenth section, on Saturday and count the double-parkers and other violations. There is double-parking on the downtown streets, too. The double-parkers, respected citizens of Atlanta, seem not to care that their selfishness and thoughtlessness blocks traffic and may cause an accident. Parkers pull away from the curb without a hand signal or even waiting for an opening in the traffic. Generally, when hand-signals are given they are inaccurate, not according to Section 32 of the present traffic code.

Here, then, in the attitude of the people, is the first reason why The Constitution's safe-driving campaign cannot succeed as long as the people of Atlanta remain as they are now; and the established habits of a people are not changed in a day. Civic pride is absent. Consider, apart from traffic, how priceless Civil War relics are being allowed to rot away through neglect. Cannon, which 20 years ago were in good condition, are today little more than junk. A monument to General Walker, erected in old Fort Walker in Grant park, has been destroyed through vandalism and neglect. Thus the city loses some of its outstanding historical and tourist values and money-making attractions. The city is about to lose the Texas locomotive, which figured in Andrews' raid, to the N. C. & St. L. railroad, because the city has neglected to keep the engine in good condition.

The Public Attitude.

Instead of acknowledging the accuracy of my allegations, or attempting to disprove them by testing my statements, the good people of Atlanta will at once bring into play all sorts of so-called defense mechanisms, very vociferously deny the charges, say that anyone not satisfied with Atlanta doesn't have to remain here—and continue to violate traffic laws, and continue to wonder why the toll is so great. Such an attitude is responsible for the present deplorable traffic conditions.

Yet the increased accident figures for this year remain, and who is directly responsible? Lack of law observance is undoubtedly the cause for many, if not most accidents. And who is responsible for enforcing the laws? The police; or, more specifically, the police chief. The partial and partisan application of the traffic laws in Atlanta has, naturally, created a disrespect for, and indifference to, the traffic laws.

Sometimes officers are "planted" at various corners, like Parkway drive and Ponce de Leon, to lie in wait for the violator. Of course, they have to make a showing. A certain "haul" which Officers E. A. Dorsey and C. A. Cook made prior to May 9, 1935, was tried in police court on May 9 before Judge A. W. Callaway. The cases were broadcast over the radio. The testimony of these arresting officers was so frequently and so generally refuted by the victims and their witnesses that the judge was heard, over the air, to suggest that these two officers have their eyes tested for color-blindness.

Here, then, is just one example of the kind of traffic law enforcement we have, when we have it. Such enforcement creates more disrespect for the law.

Some laws are sometimes enforced; some are never enforced—yet they are laws. How is the citizen, then to know which are meant to be obeyed? For example, there are yellow curbs and no-parking signs on both sides of Peachtree between North and Ponce de Leon. Let, every Sunday about 2 o'clock cars park solidly on both sides of the street, and have been doing so for at least the past year. Here is lax law enforcement. It is only natural for a citizen who parks illegally in one place without a citation to park illegally elsewhere; and he can, and naturally does feel just resentment at the partial, spasmodic application of the law. Chief of Police Sturdivant knows that this particular illegal parking exists, and has known it for five months now, yet the illegal parking continues. Here, again, is more direct and irrefutable evidence why there is so much traffic violation in Atlanta—why Atlanta is notorious for the way the people drive.

It is rather queer that anyone should expect it to be the responsibility of the pedestrian on the sidewalk to watch out for cars crosisng the walk, rather than the other way around, which impression is given by a sign posted on the sidewalk at Ponce de Leon and Juniper.

A people will obey the law whether there is a policeman on the corner or not when they respect the law. Respect for the law is borne of the knowledge that the law is being applied impartially—that there is no "pull" to nullify it for anybody.

Suggests Reforms.

A city's ordinances can be enforced. First, rewrite Atlanta's ordinances in correct English. Some attempt has been made to clarify the 1931 ordinances by removing the advertising and the superseded ordinances, in accordance with one suggestion I made in 1931. The section numbers, however, have been changed, so that what was Section 20 in the 1931 code (requiring vehicles to stop before entering a through street) becomes Section 45 in the 1934 code, which change is an additional handicap to one who works with the ordinances.

One change which will reduce traffic hazards greatly is to eliminate the much-abused privilege of making a right-hand turn against the red light.

I was speaking with a man recently who lives in Atlanta, but travels throughout the United States, and has lived in many other cities. He states that Atlanta is the most poorly illuminated city of its size that he knows. He told me of a white-way street light on the northwest corner of Peachtree at Sixteenth that has been mutilated by someone painting one side of the globe green so that the light would not shine on the apartment building across the street. Of course, the street is darkened also. By whose authority was this mutilation, and additional traffic hazard, made; and if by no one's, why was it allowed to be made, and why is it allowed to continue? By the ordinary exercise of their duty, the police should have detected this obvious violation.

Secondly, get a new police personnel to enforce the laws if the present police won't or can't function. If possible, require the police to become acquainted with the ordinances so they can be of real assistance in law enforcement. Unify the police department; eliminate petty politics and bickering. Remove from the Atlanta papers such headlines as "Politics Hampers Police on Traffic," which headlines appeared in The Constitution on January 5, 1931. Since then there have been other articles of similar content in the Atlanta papers.

Thirdly, and most important of all, administer the law—all of it—fairly, impartially, constantly. By example, let the people know that the law will be enforced on all alike, and the law will compel their respect. Remove any excuse for such an article as appeared in the American magazine of December, 1932, entitled "Can You Get a Square Deal in a Traffic Court." Atlanta is mentioned on page 13. Such writings are not good advertising for Atlanta.

If my three suggestions be followed, there will be a new and better Atlanta within three months or less; there will not be the need for a safe-driving campaign; and, best of all, accidents and deaths will decrease sharply.

Four and one-half years ago I made similar constructive criticisms and suggestions. What has Atlanta done toward improving her traffic situation? The situation today is worse than it was then. Today I repeat my criticisms and suggestions. What will Atlanta do? I know—but let time disclose the answer.

Around the World in Sixty Days

This is one of a series of gossipy, interesting letters from a well-known Atlanta businessman on a tour circling the globe in two months' time, traveling via the Atlantic, Europe, the Mediterranean-Indian ocean, China, Japan and the Pacific.

By ROBERT HECHT.

I stood on deck watching the entry into the Golden Gate. Having seen all the main ports in this world it is an unforgetful sight.

We anchored near Alcatraz Island, where Al Capone is taking a long and deserved rest.

We all would think that American boats, which have been subsidized by our government by mail contracts and otherwise, would carry strictly American crews, but that is not the case. Chinese mostly, both the sailors as well as the stewards, and mostly coming from Hong Kong. When we are spending so much for relief and unemployment that we should subsidize the differential in wages and give American boys employment on these steamers.

Coming from the east I saw enough of the yellow people and so has every American and we would prefer white service on these boats, which would be more satisfactory both from a standpoint of cleanliness and understanding. When you call your bellboy and he is a college boy from California and he has to take orders or convey orders to a Chinese coolie I think a change would satisfy the passengers.

The presidio's beautiful parks are the most gorgeous I have seen on the entire trip and compare even with the most outstanding botanical gardens in Candy, Ceylon. The drive along the beach, with its seals on the rocks, the magnificent blue of the water lined with scattered rocks and beautiful mountains are of unrivaled beauty. As far as beauty is concerned San Francisco ranks above the wonderful ports of Naples and Hong Kong.

The civic center with its beautiful city hall and municipal auditorium is the outstanding feature. A trip through Chinatown is obligatory and don't tell it to my friends, I bought the rest of my Asiatic presents there and the prices and quality compare favorably with what we bought in the east, as in bargaining in China and Japan we did not have much success.

Racing around the world you cannot spend much time in San Francisco and off we are for a motor drive to Los Angeles, paying our homage to the beautiful church at Stanford University, which well compares with the edifices of Europe; to the national park to see the big trees as old as our present civilizations; Del Monte with its fascinating beach and drive and passed through the vegetable and fruit section into Santa Barbara.

A visit to the mission and a very lovely guide by Brother Louis through its gardens; gave us a bit of history of California. A beautiful beach bordering the beautiful Biltmore hotel with its magnificent gardens shows you the most beautiful hotel in the world, looking more like a private mansion. (You pay for it, too). The drive to Santa Monica along the beach is colorful and acquaints you with the homes and palaces of our movie stars.

Hollywood: A stranger in Hollywood can see very little of movie life. Fortunately, a new rising star, little Louise Rainer, a great little Austrian actress of Max Reinhardt vintage, was our hostess and we spent a day with her.

To locate her at the Metro studio, where they were just starting her new picture, "Mr. Ziegfeld," in which she takes the leading part, was the hardest work we did on this trip. It is easier to call on some ruling prince in Europe; but after being scrutinized and having anti-chambered for a couple of hours, we contacted her.

We were put into a car and driven over the 80 acres of land, visiting foreign cities, jungles, swamps, homes and even part of hell as they still had some of the paraphernalia from "Dante's Inferno." What's the use to take a trip around the world. With a little imagination and a good deal less expense you can do it in a studio.

Little Louise Rainer, in her swanky Ford roadster, gave us a ride through Beverly Hills, which will be hard to forget, not only for the impression we had of these beautiful homes, gardens and flowers, but the way she drove, which rather made us pray than observe. The Vendome at Hollywood, where many stars have luncheon, with newspaper people checking who goes in, makes outsiders pay an extra price for lunch, because I cannot believe that even stars can afford what they charge.

Leaders in three religious groups, Protestant, Catholic and Jewish, define a "Present-Day Good Neighbor"

HERMAN L. TURNER.

—Gerard Swope, chairman 1935 Mobilization for Human Needs releases the following statement: Asked to define a "present-day good neighbor," representatives of the three largest religious groups in the United States, Protestant, Catholic and Jewish, without comparing notes, sent into Gerard Swope, chairman of the 1935 Mobilization for Human Needs, definitions which though couched in different terms, were identical in substance. In announcing the definitions submitted by the three representatives of the clergy, Mr. Swope stated that the phrase, "Be a Good Neighbor," is the slogan of the 1933 Mobilization for Human Needs, under which hundreds of cities are now raising funds for community chests or other welfare services.

The Atlanta Community Chest is now in the midst of its 13th annual campaign to secure a goal of $412,500. The spokesmen for the three religious groups quoted by Mr. Swope are: Dr. Ivan Lee Holt, pastor of St. John's Methodist Episcopal church, St. Louis, Mo., and president of the church federation of that city, for the Protestant churches; Monsignor Robert F. Keegan, executive director of Catholic Charities for New York diocese and president of the National Conference of Social Work, for the Catholic churches, and Rabbi Abbe Hillel Silver, of the Temple, Cleveland, Ohio, for the Jewish group.

One interesting point on which spokesmen for the three religious groups all agree is that the terms "good neighbor" and "good citizen" are not synonymous. Dr. Holt's "good neighbor" definition in full is: "The good neighbor is a man who voluntarily shares. 'The gift without the giver is bare.'" What a man pays in taxes to help his government and his fellows makes him a 'good citizen.' To be a 'good neighbor' he must do more; he must give to others with a sense of gratitude to God that he has money to give!"

Monsignor Keegan explains the "good neighbor" in this way: "Give to him that asketh of thee, and from him that would borrow of thee, turn not away."—Matt. V:42. "Taxes devoted to welfare service discharge an obligation of citizenship—self-imposed responsibility of organized society to preserve its parts, in order to maintain the security of all. Private charity discharges an obligation of man to his Creator and to his fellowman in return for benefits reserved by the Creator for man alone. It is the application of the Divine mandate, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.' Private charity measures the individual's appreciation that ultimately all possesisons belong to God. Man is endowed with a stewardship. The dispensation of one's means measures that stewardship. Private charity has no economic standard or limitation. The 'good neighbor' willingly makes a sacrifice in helping those whom government can never reach and in turning not away from those who would borrow. Generous sacrifice, not compulsion, is the essential in private charity, and thus charity becomes a leaven establishing the democracy of neighborliness, chartered on the principle of voluntary giving."

Rabbi Silver defines "good-neighbor ing" as: "The duty to help those who are in greater need than we are is a moral mandate which is binding upon all men at all times, regardless of what government agencies may be doing to alleviate human suffering. The individual is not justified in waiting for the time when the collective morality of the group will have reached such a point of development when all the social needs of our people will be financed through taxation. Every man, if he is to be worthy of that title, must feel the compulsion to do whatever he is able within his sphere and in his own community, out of his own substance, to ease the load of those who carry too great a burden of life's handicaps and deprivations."

In the November issue of The Rotarian, there is an article entitled, "Are You a Good Neighbor?" by Gerard Swope, president, General Electric Company. The question is asked: "What does it mean to be a 'good neighbor' today? Some people think it means paying taxes as cheerfully as possible. Others feel that it means a great deal more. They hold that responsibility to their fellowman, when fixed by law, becomes a duty to be borne. But responsibility not prescribed by law, but assumed by the individual because of his understanding of and interest in humanity, is after all the acid test of whether or not a man is at heart a good neighbor. Things men are compelled to do, excellent and necessary as these things may be in themselves, are no true index of real character. It is by the things that men do of their own volition that we can judge best of the measure of their humanitarianism. To me, 'good-neighboring' means taking an active interest in the fate of one's fellowmen. To take an active, intelligent interest, I must know first of all what my tax dollars are buying. For my own information, I have jotted down a few of the tasks which my tax dollars will not cover this fall."

Of itself the Community Chest of Atlanta does no work of charity or relief. Through it, you make possible the work of 37 co-ordinated, efficient agencies that administer to the needs of the unfortunate among our neighbors. How is this work carried on with the maximum efficiency so that every dollar does the work of two, and not a single cent is wasted in the face of the great necessity? The answer is a story of devoted service that few of us realize unless we know what is going on right here in our community. It is impossible to explain in a few short sentences the broad field of service that is covered by these agencies, who will ask you within a few days to help them continue their work during the coming year. But even a casual survey shows that these services are so personal, so absolutely necessary to the welfare of the individual and the community that they must be carried on and that we must do the job ourselves for the sake of our own neighbors.

There are five broad classifications of service, none of which can be performed by any impersonal government agency: (1) Caring for families, (2) the great field of child care, (3) institutions to be maintained—these wage unceasing warfare against disease, provide havens for the aged and infirm, throw the comforting arm about the friendless, hold out hope for the afflicted. (4) the character building and youth guidance agencies, (5) services that must be carried on if the ing for our own unfortunates, but must solve many new problems created in the minds and hearts of those who have been on the government rolls. Thank goodness our own situations have improved and we are able to do more for those who still face problems too difficult to solve alone. Let's say yes and be good neighbors in these days of great need.

"Slanderers" of Agricultural Georgia Scathingly Rebuked by Editor McIntosh

(From the Albany Herald.)

In no sense is "rural Georgia" half as bad as a few critics seem pleased to paint it. It may have its weaknesses, and it certainly has its problems, but it presents a fine and wholesome side of which Georgians well may be proud.

If it is a reproach for a people not to have accumulated wealth; not to have acquired the veneer which so often and so easily passes for culture; not to have kept pace with the giddy crowd which begins the day at 10 p. m. in many a big town; not to have given every boy and girl at least a high school education, and not to have modernized farms with machinery for plowing, planting, cultivating, safeguarding and harvesting the crops—we say if these reflect on a people mark them for reproach, then indeed is rural Georgia in a bad way.

But while no informed person who has traveled through a good deal of rural Georgia fails to realize that much needs to be done to improve the condition of thousands of families, any blanket indictment of the people who dwell in the rural communities—any charge or intimation that they are more social and economic liabilities than assets—is gross slander.

Take away the contribution of rural Georgia to the sum of the state's prosperity, and signals of distress would soon be flying over every city bank, every wholesale and retail store, and all but a few of our industrial plants, Georgia's agricultural products—cotton and cottonseed, peanuts, tobacco, pecans, grain, hay, watermelons, truck, fruit, poultry, eggs, hogs, cattle, syrup—have a value close to a quarter of a billion dollars this year.

Where does it come from? From "rural Georgia."

And if it were not for that huge sum, there'd be mighty little business moving through banks, stores, shops, service stations, warehouses, real estate and renting agencies, and a lot of other places. Oil mills would be forced to shut down, and cotton mills, too. Fertilizer manufacturing plants would be deserted and silent. Sawmills would cease operations, our credit structure would collapse, and the tax collector would have mighty few callers. For while the millions which Georgia farms, orchards and pastures yield every year may not make Georgia farmers rich, without them business of every class in our state would quickly collapse.

And there's something else that comes out of rural Georgia—something easily overlooked and unappraised by one who seeks to evaluate, solely on a cold-blooded basis, the assets of the state; something for which there is no financial yardstick because the values involved are not material values.

We have reference to those good, wholesome people who live on the farms and in the villages where folks still have time to be neighbors, where churches and schools are still social centers, and where a man does not have to be well dressed to be well thought of.

Some of the finest men and women in America live in rural Georgia, and the children they are bringing up will make for their state some of its sturdiest citizens when the next generation swings into the saddle and gets its feet in the stirrups. Not many of them are rich, but plenty of them are well-to-do, and without them Georgia would have no future.

Slandering rural Georgia is stupid, for it ignores facts and makes use of specious half truths. It is foolish to argue that the rural sections of our state are not backward in many ways and deficient in many things, but it is no less foolish to hold it up to the world as benighted and decadent, for it is neither the one nor the other. Some rural families are pathetically poor, and the spur of ambition seems never to have touched them, but they are no more dependent and far less pathetic than many more thousands who live in the country's industrial sections, or fight for life in the congested slums of our great cities. There is less crime in all of rural Georgia combined than there is in any one of half a hundred of the country's best great cities.

Rural Georgia may not be Utopia, but neither is it the hopeless, helpless and hapless region which some of its maligners seem to enjoy representing it as being. In it live and labor some of the finest people in America.

Numerous Indian Villages Flourished At Various Points Along Chattahoochee

In another one of her interesting and ably prepared articles on the early Indian life of Georgia, Mrs. Patterson writes today of the "point towns" inhabited by the redskins at various locations on the Chattahoochee river. These towns were occupied by tribes of which little has been written, but who played an important part in the early days of the white man in Georgia. Another article by Mrs. Patterson will appear in an early issue of The Sunday Constitution.

By ISABEL GARRARD PATTERSON.

The "big bend" or the longest point formed by the Chattahoochee river begins just south of Fort Mitchell, Russell county, Ala., on the west bank of the river and also just south of the infantry school of arms of the United States army located at Fort Benning, Ga., in Chattahoochee county.

The river flows from west to east to a point a bit north of Jamestown, Ga., then bends back in a long irregular curve from east to west. The end of the big bend seems to be about where the Seaboard Air Line railroad crosses the Chattahoochee river between Omaha, Ga., and Cottonton, Alabama.

The "big bend" in Ben Hawkins' time was known as "Oswichee Bend," taking its name from Oswichee creek, supposedly. Later, it was known as "Hatcher's Bend" and "Wright's Bend."

Some of us find an interest in turning back the pages to the stories of yesteryear and a certain fascination in compiling the facts recorded in these documents.

The Point Towns of the Chattahoochee offer a number of interesting Indian tribes who inhabited these lands at one time or another.

In dealing with this subject research has been made into the accredited records of the early travelers and traders who came into direct contact with the Indians.

The map compiled by Dr. John Reed Swanton illustrating the geographical distribution and movements of the tribes and towns of the Creek Confederacy has been consulted and adhered to in order to locate accurately the peoples of this section.

Dr. Swanton gives Yuchi (3h) just south of the confluence of Uchee creek and the Chattahoochee river. (Numbers indicate the successive positions of the tribes; letters are employed where tribes separated into two or more bands.) Just south by east of Yuchi (3b) is Osochi (4) on the west bank of the river about opposite the mouth of Oswichee creek. A little farther on Chiaha (5a) seems to be located. Okmulgee (2) is in "the point" itself with Chiahuti a bit farther south after the bend turns back and is curving from east to west. A little below and southwest of Chiahutci is found a Yuchi (4b). This was also known as "Westo," a name given to the Yuchi by the Cusabo and appears to be in the Cusabo language. The Apalachicola (4) are a little farther south, while below these on the last curve of the point to the west and south are located the Kolnie (2), Atasi (2), and Tuskegee (2a), within a short distance of one another.

Just beyond the end of the big bend we find Kasihta (5) near Cottonton, Ala., while across the Chattahoochee, a little south of Hannahatchee creek, is Oconee (2a) in the present Stewart county, Ga., near Omaha.

North of Stewart county where "Hitcheta" creek flows through the southern part of Chattahoochee county, there were two Indian villages located on a map drawn in 1869 by the "Supt. Public Works." This map of Chattahoochee county was "made by Authority of the State." These Indian villages appear to be Hitchiti (4); or perhaps "Big Hitchitee" and "Little Hitchitee." They are within a short distance of one another and west of the present Cusseta-Lumpkin road.

A large Indian village is shown which occupies parts of several land lots of the 1869 map. This seems to be the Likatcka (1) on Dr. Swanton's map of 1919. It is opposite Osochi (4) near Oswichee creek in Chattahoochee county, Georgia.

"Likatcka was situated on a trail and a ford 12 miles below Kasihta." On the 1869 map of Chattahoochee county the Oswichee creek is called the Uchee. This accounts for some of the argument as to its location. We know there were other settlements of this branch of the Coweta as mention of them are made by Benjamin Hawkins (Senate Doc. 512, 23 Congress, 1st sess., IV. pp. 386-394.).

The name of Uchee creek in Chattahoochee county seems to have been changed to Oswichee. An historic Indian trail led to the Osochi (4) village; a ford was on the river here reaching the east bank near the former socalled "Uchee creek," so it is probable that when this trail was known as "Oswichee" the name of Uchee became Oswichee.

The origin of the name Osochi, according to Dr. Swanton, is to be sought in the names of Ucahile, Uzachil, Veachile and Ossachile. These were the names applied in the translations of that Florida province through which De Soto passed in 1539 before he reached the Apalachee (near Tallahassee, Fla.).

Spanish documents inform us of one northward movement after the rebellion in 1656, which broke out among the Tinuecua people (in central Florida) and spread even to the Apalachee northward of the Ocilla river (Aucilla).

"This rebellion was blamed upon the friars of the mission by Governor Robelledo but the letter of a missionary lays the blame upon the governor because he had tried to compel the Indians to bring corn upon their backs to St. Augustine."

"In 1672 there was another great uprising."

"The list of missions drawn up in 1680 while showing more in the Apalachee province and practically the same number in Guale, exhibits a distinct decrease among the Timucua missions and it is evident that some former Timucua missions were largely concerned with different peoples."

"The destruction of the Timucua misisons by the Creeks and the English, along with those of the Apalachee and other Florida Indians now followed rapidly, so rapidly that one writer declares the destruction of the provinces of Timucua, Apalachee and Guale took place within four or five months He places the date in the year 1704, which is only approximately correct."

Other evidences of their northward migration in 1700 and 1703 and in 1707 on the Lamhatly map seems to place them farther away from Ucachile in the province of Timucua. (Ref. Amer. Anthrop. n. s. Vol. X. p. 571.).

"A town or tribe at or near the junction of the Apalachicola and Flint rivers was called "Apalache o' Sachile" at a considerably later date. The o' in the last term has been mistaken for the Spanish connective o' by the cartographer, but there can be no doubt that it properly belongs with what follows. Osochi is always accented on the first syllable. The spot indicated on this map is that at which the Apalachicola Indians settled after the Yamassee war. We must suppose then, unless we have to do with very bad misprint, either that the Osochi were considered an Apalachicola band or that they were living with the Apalachicola midway between their old territories and that of the Lower Creeks. These facts do not, of course, amount to proof of a connection between the Ucachile and Osochi, but they point in that direction." (J. R. Swanton, Bulletin 73, pps. 165, 166.).

James Adair in "The History of the American Indians" which was published in London in 1775, mentions the "Osecha" as one of the nations which had settled in the lower part of the Muscogee country."

The French census of 1760 shows this tribe between the Yuchi and Chiaha, and those of the years 1738 and 1750 near the Okmulgee. (MSS. Ayer Coll.).

"In the assignment to the traders July 3, 1761, we find "The Point Towns called Ousechetaws, Chehaws and Oakmulgees," given to George Mackay and James Hewitt, along with the Hitchitee Town."

"In 1797 their trader was Samuel Palmer."

"Benjamin Hawkins has the following to say about them in 1799: 'Ooseoo-che, is about two miles below Uchee on the right bank of Chat-to-ho-chee, they formerly lived on Flint river and settled here, built a hot house in 1794; they cultivate with their neighbors, the Che-an-hans, below them the land in the point.'

"The census of 1832 gives two settlements occupied by this tribe, which it spells "Oswichee," one on the Chattahoochee river and one "on the waters of Opillike Hatchee."

"In 1804 Hawkins condemns the Osochi for a reactionary outbreak which occurred there when we were told they would adhere to old times, they preferred the bow and arrow to the gun." (J. R. Swanton, Bulletin 73, p. 166 is quoted in the last four paragraphs.)

The Osochi (2) were located in southwest Georgia in Seminole county near the famous Sealy Spring. They then traveled to a place on the Flint river. This settlement recorded as Osochi (3) was on the west bank of the river, near the edge of Dougherty county a few miles below the well-known "Radium Springs."

There was a close association between the Osochi and Chiaha. The two together settled a town known as Hotalgihyquana.

"O-tel-le-who-you-nau (hurricane town) is six miles below Kitch-o-foonee on the right bank of the Flint river . . . they plant the margins near the mouth of a little creek." "This village is generally named as belonging to Che-an-hau, but they are mixed with Oose-oo-chees" — according to Benjamin Hawkins.

The Osochi's familiarity with the Hitchite language may have been the natural result of long association with the Chiaha and Apalachicola Indians. No remembrance of any language other than Hitchite is preserved among them.

This is given to show the reason for the name of "Oswichee Bend" as it is today applied to the "big bend" along whose banks were located the Point Towns of the Chattahoochee river.

Protests Governor's Listing Wife Beating As a "Small Crime"

Editor Constitution: If I were a wife, I would feel like pulling the red suspenders off the chief executive of the State of Georgia; in his speech a few days ago, he not only defended the chain gang, but advocated the whipping post for small crimes, such as wife beating, etc. I do not object to the whipping post, its virtures are many, it keeps the confidence men, gangsters and rackateers out of the state of Delaware; it reforms more petty criminals than all the ministers of the gospel in Delaware; it has reformed every wife beater in the several states that still use punishment for that crime; no husband gets mad enough, or drunk enough to beat his wife after he has had his visit to the whipping post.

There is no excuse for the chain gang, either county or city, they are one of the heaviest burdens that have been placed on the backs of the tax payer; they do not reform criminals, in fact they have the opposite effect, in fact many of them become so hardened after serving one sentence, that they look on a second sentence, as a vacation of just that many months with all expenses paid by the county, plus,a bonus of three dollars or more according to the number of months served.

But to think of a great big red suspendered chief executive of the great state of Georgia, classifying wife beating, as small crime, gets my goat; I am sure his wife would not agree with his classification of that crime; and I think it is in order for the wives of his state to assemble at the state capitol and hold an indignation meeting, and demand that he refrain from wearing red suspenders until he learns enough to place the crime of wife beating where it properly belongs.

Handsome Returns From Poultry Raising Seen by Hunnicutt

Editor Constitution: I would like to see one ideal poultry farm operated in Georgia. In order to have one of this kind, according to my opinion, all of the feed for the chickens would have to be grown on the farm, so that every dollar received from the sale of eggs or chickens would go to pay the owner for feed produced and his labor.

In all my travels I have only known one poultryman who had as many as 1,000 hens who grew his own feed and made his own mash. This farmer lived in South Carolina. He grew wheat, corn, oats and kafir corn. He wrote to Clemson College and got a formula for mixing those feeds so as to make a mash for baby chicks and for laying hens.

I would like for one farmer in Georgia to grow these feed crops and write to the Agricultural College over at Athens and get the formulas to make the mashes necessary and then buy 200 baby chicks and commence the experiment to see how many dollars worth he could sell in 12 months and just what returns he will secure for the feed grown and the attention given the chickens. The farmer who would do this would not only do a profitable job for himself but render a valuable service for the farmers over the state.

Heart Throbs.

ARMISTICE DAY.

Armistice Day, 1918! An entire world delirious with joydeath had completed his red harvest and his scythe dripped with blood as he hideously surveyed the crimson sheafs on a thousand fields. Reluctantly he turned away to follow the four horsemen back to the hell from whence they came. No wonder the world rejoiced. The curse of war had been lifted—the boys were coming home. Truly it was a great day in world's history. A war to end war—what mockery—what hypocrisy—what a heartbreak in that slogan. It was spawned in deceit, born in hatred and will die by the sword. All the youth of the world was sacrificed in vain—all the billions in treasure was gambled away for naught—all the tears shed for glory were useless—in this "war to end war." The war that ended on that foggy, drizzling day 17 years ago is not over for the soldier who still lies on a hospital bed—it is not over for some silver-haired old mother who wears a gold star near her heart, and looks at a picture through tear-blurred eyes. It is not over for the wife or sweetheart. Till the last pulse beat they will cherish a little cross and in their heart will always be an ache, because fate once laughed at their prayers. It is not over for us so long as hate, avarice, greed and deceit govern nations.

ARMISTICE DAY.

I.

There's a maimed and crippled soldier
Still lying on his bed
Though many years have drifted
Since the guns were belching red.
He can hear the martial music
As the band sweeps down the street;
He can hear the people shouting,
And the tread of marching feet.

II.

And he knows they're celebrating
This glad Armistice Day,
Which to him is just another
That is dreary, drab and gray.
Yes, they're celebrating victory
With speeches and with hymn,
But the war is never over
Not for any, such as him.

III.

There's a gentle sweet old mother
With silver in her hair,
Who always dreams at twilight
In her easy rocking chair.
Dreams about a cross in Flanders,
Where the scarlet poppies bloom;
Looks upon an engraved picture
Hanging there within her room.

IV.

Thinks about a golden morning
In those yesterdays of yore,
When a little lad was playing
With his toys upon the floor.
And she hears the night wind rustle
And the rose leaves softly stir
Though the war has long been over
It can never be for her.

V.

There's another not a mother
Whose heart-strings throb with pain,
Many lovers have come wooing,
But they all have wooed in vain,
For her heart and love lie buried
In a soldier's grave in France,
When they killed her gallant lover
They killed all of her romance.

VI.

Just an old maid, people call her,
But she keeps that silent vow
That was pledged that far off summer
With his kisses on her brow,
And her heart swells up in yearning
And the tears her soft eyes blur,
Yet they say "The war is over!"—
It can never be for her.

VII.

Learn a lesson, oh ye nations,
Who prepare for future strife,
It's the mother who must suffer,
It's the sweetheart and the wife,
It's the maimed and crippled soldier,
It's a host of gallant dead
Who lie buried 'neath the crosses
Long before their youth has fled.

VIII.

All the teardrops shed for glory
Should quench the fires of war;
All the fame which war lords reach for
Should be shattered on the floor.
Broken hearts and mangled bodies
Are a debt no man can pay
And the war can ne'er be over
For their shattered lives today.

CULTIVATION OF FRUIT TREES

By W. ELBRIDGE FREEBORN.

Fruits and berries as well as vegetables are much fresher, more satisfactory, more delicious and more healthy when picked and used immediately. There are some instances that have come to our attention where a person finds that certain fruits or vegetables that are indigestible as they are offered for sale on the market, are perfectly digestible as they come from the plant fully ripened.

In the ordinary commercial routine that fruits and vegetables must follow to reach the ultimate consumer, and we are speaking now of those products raised in Georgia, it is oftentimes three days or more before they reach your table. So the very finest fruits and vegetables, those with the best favor, the freshest, must of necessity come from our own garden. Because of these reasons, and due to the unusual interest, we want to discuss some of the fruits and berries that may be depended upon for good results here in Atlanta.

Peaches.

In spite of the fact that we are in the midst of the finest peach section in the United States, there is surprisingly little information generally known about this fine fruit. In the planting and growing of peaches for home consumption there are several facts that should be well in mind.

If you are fortunate enough to have a wide selection of places in which the trees may be planted, choose the north side of a fairly steep hill for best results. There are two reasons for this: There is always danger of peaches blooming too early and then suffering from a late frost, so for that reason we should choose a cool, air-drained position to hold the trees in a dormant condition as late as possible. The steep hill will give the air drainage and the north side of the hill will be cooler than any other location.

Peaches will grow in almost any sort of soil fairly well, although they seem to prefer a fairly heavy, rich soil. Stable manure, bone meal or sheep manure are fine to use at the time of planting, while a commercial fertilizer analyzing about 12-4-4 will be very satisfactory while the tree is growing. It is a good plan to plant some sort of a cover crop in the orchard during the winter. The two cover crops used more than any others in orchards here are vetch and Austrian winter peas. If you have any use for hay, insist on vetch; otherwise use the peas, as they will improve the soil as much as vetch, and the seeds are cheaper.

There are literally hundreds of varieties of peaches from which we may choose the varieties for our home garden, but this is not as difficult a task as it seems, for the varieties most widely planted are limited to about one dozen.

Sometime when you are thinking of varieties of peaches to be planted, ask an old-fashioned farmer what he would plant and in almost every case he will name at least a half-dozen varieties that he would use in his orchard. If you are patient, he will explain that the use of several varieties is only a matter of insurance. Each year some varieties will bear heavier than others. The insects may attack one variety, or the late frost will damage only one or two varieties. So for your own protection, plant several.

The freestone peachs are generally used for the table and for making pies, as well as for the little boys to hook and set behind the barn. Named in order of their fruiting, we suggest a limited number of varieties that have been in the past very astisfactory: Mayflower, Hiley, Carman, Early Elberta, Belle of Georgia, Elberta and J. H. Hale.

The clingstone peaches are not as widely planted as the freestone varieties, but they serve a very definite purpose of supplying us with peach pickles, and for that they should certainly be thanked. Chinese Cling, Indian Cling and occasionally the old-fashioned White English are planted.

In the old orchard there is some work that should be carried on this month to insure a good crop of sound fruit next year. For the borers, they should be treated with paracide. This material when coming in contact with moisture lets off a gas that penetrates the soil, bringing death to the borers that are wintering in the soil. For San Jose scale, little scaly insects that appear to be a thick coating of grey mildew covering the larger limbs usually, spray with lime sulphur solution or scalecide after the trees are thoroughly dormant. This is also the correct time of the year to carry on the annual pruning. Remember to keep the head of the trees well open, removing all dead or diseased limbs, and keeping the tree about the same size as it was the previous year.

There is a wonderful tribute made to the apple family every year. Annually there are more apple trees planted than any other fruit. This is a wonderful tribute to the general satisfaction of the tree throughout the country. In addition to this fact it must be borne in mind that apple may be depended upon to bear for from 10 to 20 years, which is considerably longer than a great many other fruits.

Another reason for the popularity of this fruit is the fact that it is fairly disease resistant. This does not mean that they may be depended upon to grow without the proper care, but it does mean that there will be fewer years with no yield, and that spraying need not be carried on with the same regularity that peaches require. For dormant spraying use scalecide now.

We always dread recommending varieties of apples to be planted. In apples we have some very decided personal preferences, and we are always afraid that these preferences will get the best of our better judgment. On the other hand, there are varieties that should be found in every orchard. With the above warning we will recommend a few varieties. For the spicy or winter apple, plant Stayman's Winesap. For the little boys in the neighborhood, plant several Yates, as these not only have a fine favor after frost has hit them, but they also make good ammunition for apple fights. Red June, Delicious and Yellow Transparent are all good mellowapples.

WHAT TO PLANT IN NOVEMBER.

PLANTS: Set out roses, strawberries, shrubbery, iris and peony crowns.

BULBS: November is the best month for planting all kinds of spring flowering bulbs, crocus, grape hyacinths, snowrops for very early flowers. Tulips, daffodils, hyacinths and anemones for March and April flowers in the bulb garden. Plant paper white narcissus, Lily of the valley, hyacinths and single early flowering tulips in the house for winter beauty.

SHRUBBERY: November is the accepted month for planting all kinds of shrubs, both the evergreens and the flowering shrubs. Plant them slightly deeper than they stood in the nursery.

LILIES: Plant Regal lilies, Speciosum Magnificum, Tiger lily and out-of-door lily of the valley.

VEGETABLES: Lettuce, cabbage and onion seeds in the cold frame for transplanting to the open field in January and February. Plant the asparagus bed now.

Weekly Poll Shows Nation Divides 3 Ways on Liquor Question

36 Pct. Call Conditions Better Since Repeal

Almost Equal Number Believe Conditions Are Worse; Future of Liquor Policy Lies With Group of 31 Per Cent Who Say "the Same."

Nation Polled on This Question

In your locality is the situation in respect to the use of alcoholic beverages better [ ] about the same [ ] or worse [ ] than it was during the last few years of prohibition?

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP
Managing Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

If nine Americans were marched up to a microphone and told to say what they think about drinking conditions today as compared with the last few years of prohibition, three would seize the microphone and shout "BETTER," three would drawl "ABOUT THE SAME," and three would bark "WORSE."

If all nine were republicans the number who shouted "WORSE" would be greater than if all nine were democrats. The proportion would also be different if all nine were young people or if they all came from a state which repealed prohibition by an overwhelming majority.

But the sum total of public opinion, from Maine to California, reacts on the average as follows:

"Better," say 36%.
"About the same," say 31%.
"Worse," say 33%.

AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION

Seldom has public opinion on any major issue been so evenly divided as on the question of post-repeal drinking.

This information was obtained by the American Institute of Public Opinion through a nation-wide poll covering all classes of people in every state in the Union. It is the first national referendum on drinking conditions since the repeal of the 18th amendment nearly two years ago.

Influence of Party Politics.

Curious are the influences which color public opinion on the use of alcoholic beverages. This poll was not a vote on prohibition—for many years a hornet in the hat of every party leader—but simply a request for each person's opinion of actual conditions in his locality respecting the use of alcohol. Yet that opinion is apparently influenced by party affiliations. Five out of every ten republicans think drinking conditions have become worse since repeal, whereas only two democrats in ten think so. Here are the percentages:

PERSONS SAYING:	REPUBLICANS	DEMOCRATS
Better	24%	47%
Same	26	33
Worse	50	20

Previous Wetness a Factor

Furthermore, opinion on the question of drinking is influenced by the previous dryness or wetness of each locality as reflected in official popular referendum on the liquor question since 1933. This may be illustrated as follows:

There were 18 states in which the popular vote for repeal of the dry law was greater than the average for the country, which was 72%. There were 27 states in which the popular vote for repeal was less than the average. In simple words, the first group was relatively "wetter" in sentiment than the second group. Now note how public opinion on conditions with respect to the use of alcohol differs today in the two groups of states:

PERSONS NOW SAYING:	States Where Repeal Vote Was BELOW AVERAGE	ABOVE AVERAGE
Better	29%	44%
Same	34	26
Worse	37	30

Almost half of the persons (44%) in states which, by their repeal vote, were above average in "wetness" think conditions are better. Fewer than one-third (29%) think conditions are better in the relatively "drier" states where the vote for repeal was below average.

Effect of Systems for Liquor Control.

Public opinion on the drinking question does not vary to any marked degree under the two systems of liquor control—licensing of retail outlets, and state monopoly. If either system has any advantage, it is the licensing system, as shown in the following tabulation:

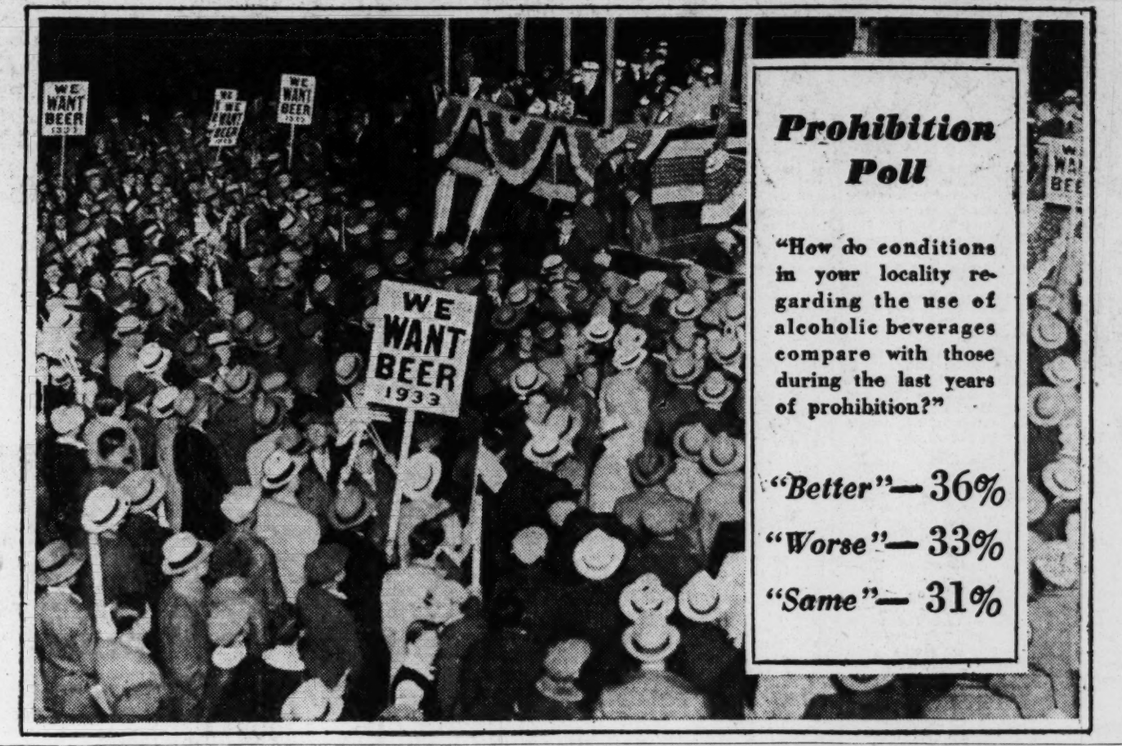

PERSONS SAYING:	States Controlling Liquor Traffic by LICENSE	STATE MONOPOLY
Better	42%	35%
Same	27	28
Worse	31	37

Note that the proportion of people saying "Better" is higher in states with the licensing system than in states with monopolies. But it would not be entirely fair to say that the reason for this difference is the system itself. The difference may have been brought about by the relative efficiency with which each system is administered and by the dryness or wetness of sentiment in each section. It happens that states with an above-average vote for repeal tended to adopt the licensing system, whereas states with a below average vote for repeal tended to adopt the monopoly system (probably from fear of the private profit motive corrupting the liquor traffic). Thus the relative proportion of wet sentiment rather than the actual system of liquor control may account for the difference of public opinion under the two systems.

How Sections Voted.

A breakdown of the vote by sections of the country indicates a fairly even division of opinion the country over. The largest number of votes for "better" appears in the Pacific coast states and the Middle Atlantic states, which include several wet strongholds.

'Open' States Tend To Call Things Better

In states which permit sale of both beer and spirits a larger number of people think drinking conditions have improved than in states which permit the sale of beer only.

This information was obtained by the American Institute of Public Opinion by comparing the results of its poll on drinking conditions in the six states which permit beer only with the average for all other wet states. "Beer" states are Kansas, Oklahoma, Mississippi, Georgia, Tennessee and North Carolina, though North Carolina permits hard liquor to be sold in some counties under local option. The tabulation follows:

	Persons Saying: Better	Same	Worse
Six beer States.	21%	44%	35%
All other wet states	39%	28%	33%

Note that while a larger proportion think conditions are about the same in the six states with beer only, the number who think conditions are better is about half that of the average in wet states.

This comparison is significant in view of the fact that prior to repeal many leaders declared that by allowing the public to drink beer, but not spirits, the liquor problem would be solved.

The American Institute of Public Opinion also sent ballots into the two states which are bone-dry—Alabama and North Dakota. Of course voters in these states could not compare conditions under repeal with those under prohibition because state-wide prohibition is still in force. Nevertheless, answers were received as follows:

	Persons Saying: Better	Same	Worse
Bone dry states	20%	50%	30%

Would U. S. Vote For Peace?

Last June the results of the famous English "peace ballot" indicated that English public opinion is overwhelmingly prepared to cooperate with other nations in keeping peace in Europe—even if military measures should be required to enforce it.

Observers agree that much of recent British policy can be interpreted as a response to this ballot.

How does America vote on the "peace ballot?" Do Americans view this problem the way the English do?

The answers to these questions will form the basis of next Sunday's report by the National Weekly Poll of Public Opinion in The Constitution.

"Common Counsel of All."

Woodrow Wilson in his book, "The New Freedom, wrote: "The whole purpose of democracy is that we may hold counsel with one another, so as not to depend upon the understanding of one man, but to depend on the common counsel of all."

What This Poll Shows

The prohibition poll reported here reveals the following important facts:

1. Repeal of the eighteenth amendment didn't settle the issue of prohibition. A natural and inevitable reaction has apparently set in—a reaction which has not progressed far yet but which may gain momentum as time goes on.

2. To a great extent prohibition still remains in the realm of partisan politics. Republicans are much less satisfied with the situation today than are democrats. It is quite possible that politicians may mount the hustings on this issue in a number of states in the approaching presidential campaign.

* * *

3. Voters, as a group, seem to cling to their early ideas about prohibition regardless of the manner in which liquor is sold. The number of persons dissatisfied with the situation today is relatively as great in states with the licensing system as in states with the government monopoly system. Even those states which permit only beer to be sold find as much fault with post-repeal conditions as states where hard liquor is sold.

* * *

4. Persons most satisfied with the situation today, as compared with the last few years of prohibition, are the young voters of the nation. Next to this group come persons on relief.

How Does America Speak Through the Weekly Polls?

Why Is American Institute of Public Opinion Conducting Them?—Sponsors Answer Such Typical Questions From Readers.

The Constitution is being asked many questions about the National Weekly Poll of Public Opinion—questions that come by mail, by telephone; questions from persons who burst in upon the city editor, questions from persons who stop reporters and advertising solicitors on the street. Questions . . . questions . . . questions.

Here are some answers furnished by the American Institute of Public Opinion, 285 Madison avenue, New York city, the fact-finding organization conducting the weekly polls.

How Do Ballots Go Out to Voters?

Ballots are normally sent by the American Institute of Public Opinion to between 100,000 and 200,000 persons for each question reported in The Sunday Constitution. Three-quarters of these ballots go by mail—some on cards, some in letters under a three-cent stamp, some by air mail. The other quarter is submitted to citizens by a staff of trained personal interviewers working in 75 populous centers. Returns from the mail ballots vary from 15 to 50 per cent—depending largely on the manner in which they are mailed and the degree of public interest in the question.

Who gets the ballots? Persons are chosen to receive ballots according to the most approved statistical practices. These persons represent an accurate cross-section of the country as a whole. For instance, each state gets ballots in proportion to the number of its voters. If two-thirds of the persons in a state live on farms, two-thirds of the ballots received from that state come from persons who live on farms. If one-eighth of the voters of a state are on federal relief rolls, one-eighth of the ballots from that state come from persons on relief. If half the homes in a state have telephones, half the ballots from that state come from telephone subscribers. If three-quarters of the families in a state own automobiles, three-quarters of the ballots from that state come from persons who own cars. If 70 per cent of the families own radios, 70 per cent of the ballots come from these families. It required nearly two years of experiment during which time more than 50 test polls were conducted to work out the innumerable details necessary to satisfy statistical requirements of this kind.

How accurate is one of these polls? Statisticians agree that a poll conducted according to the principles already outlined will be accurate within 1 or 2 per cent. That is, if every voter in the country filled out and returned a ballot, the result would differ from the result obtained from an accurate cross-section by not more than a per cent or two. Assuming that ballots go to a reasonably large number, it is the correctness of the cross-section polled which determines the accuracy of the result to a greater extent than the number of ballots. Approximately half the families in the country have telephones, but if a poll were restricted to members of those families, or to members of families owning automobiles or radios—even if every one of these families received and returned a ballot—the result would undoubtedly fall short of being accurate. This would be particularly true with respect to a question concerning which persons in different economic levels had varying points of view.

How can a small cross-section give an accurate answer? A chemist analyzes a cupful of liquid taken from a large container and gets the right answer, if the cupful is a fair sample of the liquid in question. An ore-tester can learn the quality of the ore in a mine by making test borings at different places.

Why is the American Institute of Public Opinion conducting these polls? The American Institute of Public Opinion is interested solely in ascertaining the facts about public opinion. It furnishes these facts to newspapers of all shades of editorial preference. It believes that, by making current public opinion on major issues of the day known, it is helping to make possible a worthwhile advance in the science of representative government long desired by statesmen and writers on political subjects.

Do the polls show a distinct bias for one political party? Not unless the country is biased in favor of the program of one party. The first poll reported by the American Institute of Public Opinion undoubtedly pleased republicans more than it did democrats, as it showed three persons out of five opposed to the government's spending program for relief and recovery. But the second poll showed that President Roosevelt, after going down in popular favor for a period of some months, had at last turned upward and now is preferred by 53 per cent of the voters. This should have brought cheer to the hearts of democrats. A 53-to-47 majority, while close, is not uncomfortably close. As shown by the election of 1932, 59 to 41 is a landslide.

Are all the newspapers publishing the results of the poll members of the same political party? The 45 papers now publishing the results of these weekly polls classify themselves as follows Republican, 10; independent republican, 5; democratic, 4; independent democratic, 7; independent, 19.

Who is Dr. Gallup? Dr. George Gallup, managing director of the American Institute of Public Opinion, has been devoting his entire time for the last dozen years in scientific research connected with the measurement of group responses. He has conducted many "reader interest" surveys for newspapers and weekly magazines, he has checked the size and responsiveness of radio audiences, he has measured reader reaction to advertisements. Dr. Gallup has a Ph. D. degree from the University of Iowa. He has taught there and at Northwestern University and Drake University. This year he is a visiting professor at Columbia University. Dr. Gallup is now director of research for a business firm in New York city. It was not until he had conducted 54 nation-wide polls over a period of two years that the American Institute of Public Opinion was willing to offer its present weekly project to the public.

Genealogy of 'Speakeasy.'

The word "speakeasy" was not invented during prohibition. It was used in an issue of Voice," anti-saloon magazine, in 1889, as follows: "Hundreds of unlicensed dealers in both cities (New York and Brooklyn) continue to run under the names of clubs and speakeasies."

Young People Satisfied With Repeal Results

Since repeal, oldsters have often clucked: "Think what all this drinking is doing to our young folks!" The poll conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion indicates that the young folks aren't worried at all. Six out of every ten persons between the age of 20 and 24 think drinking conditions have improved since repeal. Only one in ten thinks the situation is worse. Two say: "About the Same." Here are the figures:

	PERSONS SAYING: Better	Same	Worse
Age 20-24	63 pct.	25 pct.	12 pct.
Average for Country (All Ages)	36 pct.	31 pct.	33 pct.

Next to the youngster, the poor man looks upon drinking with the mildest eye. One-half of the persons on relief say the situation is better than under prohibition, while less than one-quarter say it is worse.

Forty-Five Editors Name Issues for Polls

Of the 45 newspapers now publishing the results of the National Weekly Polls of Public Opinion 10 classify themselves as republicans, 5 as independent republicans, 4 as democratic, 7 as independent democratic, and 19 as independent. Editors of these newspapers with their conflicting political views assist in selecting the questions on which the country is polled each week. The list of papers follows:

Republican — 10. Boise Idaho Statesman, Dayton Journal and Herald, Minneapolis Tribune, New York Herald Tribune, Oakland Tribune, Philadelphia Inquirer, Rochester Democrat and Chronicle, Sioux City Journal, South Bend Tribune, Toledo Times, San Francisco Chronicle.

Independent Republican—5. Chicago Daily News, Fort Wayne News-Sentinel, Indianapolis Star, Spokane Spokesman-Review, Rockford Star.

Democratic—4. Atlanta Constitution, Houston Chronicle, Memphis Commercial Appeal, Mobile Press-Register.

Independent Democratic—7. Birmingham News, Chattanooga Times, Cleveland Plain Dealer, Norfolk Virginian-Pilot, Portland (Ore.) Journal, Richmond Times-Dispatch, Shreveport Times.

Independent — 19. Bloomington Pantagraph, Boston Globe, Buffalo Times, Cincinnati Enquirer, Dallas News, Des Moines Register, Detroit News, Evansville Press, Knoxville News-Sentinel, Muncie Star, Nashville Banner, Oklahoma City Oklahoman and Times, Pittsburgh Press, St. Louis Globe-Democrat, Seattle Star, Tacoma Times, Washington Post, Wichita Eagle.

Sentiment for Prohibition Has Waxed, Waned 3 Times

Signs of New Cycle Appear in Trend of Public Opinion Since Repeal; Movement Has Not Yet Produced Another Carry Nation.

"The prohibition movement is gaining new force and it is only a matter of time until the nation re-enacts a program of prohibition," said Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, in a newspaper interview last month.

The temper of such comments has led some persons to believe that prohibition may once more become a political issue. It is certainly true that prohibition, once squelched, has always popped up again. In fact some statisticians say there have been three distinct cycles or waves in the history of the movement, as reflected in the passage of dry laws by the individual states.

These cycles, beginning around 1846, were spaced about 30 years apart and the last one, of course, culminated in the adoption of the 18th amendment in 1919.

Is a new dry wave beginning? Has public reaction started the cycle on its fourth swing?

The poll analyzed elsewhere on this page indicates that a reaction in feeling has begun to set in. But it has not progressed far yet. One-third of the country thinks conditions are worse now than under prohibition, one-third thinks conditions are better, and one-third thinks they are about the same. The drys have something to cheer over but so have the wets. Everything depends on which way the people who now say "about the same" will swing in the coming years. The trend of wet and dry sentiment will be reported at reasonable intervals in the future by the National Poll of Public Opinion.

If, then, repeal didn't settle the issue of prohibition, and if opinion is divided on the subject of whether conditions have improved, does a majority of the nation now regret repealing the 18th amendment?

The American Institute of Public Opinion is able to answer this question on the basis of results of a previous poll conducted last February and published in this column today for the first time.

The nation was asked in February: "Do you believe, now, prohibition should have been repealed?"

"Yes," said 63 per cent.
"No," said 37 per cent.

This is roughly a 6 to 4 verdict approving repeal.

The popular vote in 1933-34 in favor of repeal was approximately 7 to 3. So the wets have lost a little and the drys have gained.

One good way of judging how far the prohibition movement has progressed is whether it has produced its corps of barnstorming evangelists. Carry Nation, for instance, kept the prohibition question on the fire during the last downswing of the dry cycle. She began her crusade after her first husband had drunk himself to death. Her second husband divorced her because she would not come home until she had rid the nation of "hell broth." Single-handed she proceeded to "hatchetize" the country, never permitting her name to be spelled "Carrie" but always "Carry," because she believed she had an imperative call to "Carry a nation" toward prohibition. The federal dry law was adopted eight years after her death in 1911.

There are no Carry Nations today though the W. C. T. U. and the Anti-Saloon League are both continuing their dry activities. Most wet organizations have closed down or, like the Crusaders, have turned their attention to other fields. One newly-founded organization is approaching the liquor question from a fresh angle. The Council for Moderation is urging intelligent modefation in the use of alcohol.

Wets and Drys Cite Reasons for Opinions

The National Weekly Poll of Public Opinion discovers not only WHAT people think when it polls the nation but also WHY they think as they do. Hundreds of voters scribble pithy remarks on their ballots of their own accord. A trained staff of personal interviewers collects additional comments each week and rushes them to the American Institute of Public Opinion by mail and by airplane. comments are copied and classified as carefully as the ballots themselves for through them, even more than through the ballots, America speaks.

"Better!"

Persons who believe that the situation with respect to the use of alcohol is better today than during prohibition generally mention these reasons: (1) The liquor is better, (2) there are fewer drunks and less rowdiness, (3) repeal helped prosperity, (4) there is less crime and fewer bootleggers, (5) disrespect for law has decreased. Some typical comments:

"Folks drinks just as much, but it doesn't kill them."—Pittsburgh Democrat.

"Of course, I'm interested from the hotel side. . . . There used to be too damn much drinking in rooms and too much furniture ruined. People still drink in rooms, naturally, but there really doesn't seem to be so much rowdiness."—Seattle hotel clerk.

"There's not as many drunks lying around in the streets."—Pittsburgh Democrat.

"Repeal has cut down on 'Blind Pigs."—Detroit housewife.

"Young people are not drinking hooch in holes in the walls."—St. Louis man.

"We can step in and out of saloons without a pinch being pulled on us."—New York city cement mixer on relief.

"Yeah, we all got the feeling of freedom now."—New York city negro.

"We don't have all those bootleggers and murders."—Chicago housewife.

"Repeal has helped prosperity."—Columbus girl, will vote democratic.

"We can drink now without disobeying the law." — Indianapolis housewife.

"Purchase of liquor's so easy now, the excitement's gone out of it."—Los Angeles man, on relief.

"Worse!"

People think conditions are worse because (1) there is more drunkenness, (2) girls and children are being corrupted, (3) liquor is too expensive, (4) saloons take all the poor man's money, (5) liquor is too easy to get. Typical comments:

"There are too many tap rooms where young girls are permitted to loiter, causing their downfall."—Philadelphia policeman.

"There are too many girls in beer parlors and such places."—Seattle woman, on relief.

"It's a shame that the young people can get whisky so easy."—Chicago housewife.

"I see a lot more people drunk now, and the way they carry on in front of children."—Detroit man.

"Saloons are combining with commercialized vice, and are also selling to children."—Pittsburgh businessman.

"The price of good liquor is prohibition to the poor man."—Columbus negro.

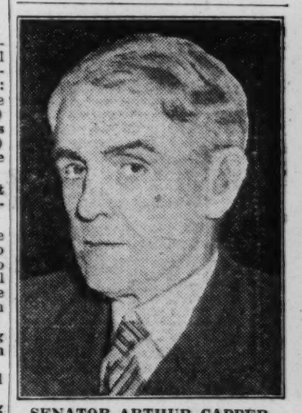

"The saloons make most of their money from poor people who shouldn't be allowed to spend their money for drink."—Columbus woman.

"They're runnin' round drunk as lords."—New York city man.

"Liquor's too easy to get now—the amount should be limited, like in Canada."—Minneapolis woman.

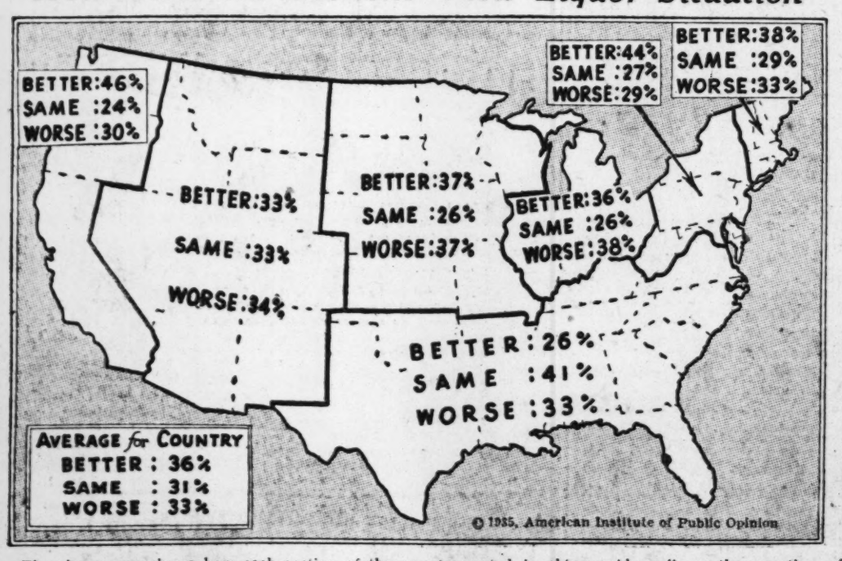

"The increase of auto accidents and menace of drunken drivers makes worse a situation otherwise more healthy."—New York city clerk.

"Men and women drink now that would never drink if it were illegal."—Indianapolis man.

SENATOR ARTHUR CAPPER, Kansas Dry: "It is only a matter of time until the nation re-enacts a program of prohibition."

How Different Sections View Liquor Situation

The above map shows how each section of the country voted in this week's poll on the question of whether the drinking situation today is better than it was under prohibition. The largest percentages of voters who call conditions better are in the Pacific coast states and the middle Atlantic area, the latter including such historically wet states as New York and New Jersey. The smallest percentage of improvement is noted in the south, where one state is bone dry, four permit the sale of beer and wines only, or beer only, and one permits local option in only a few counties.

States Experiment With Types of Liquor Control

The above map shows systems of liquor control in the 40 wet states. Fourteen have state-operated liquor stores, 25 have the licensing system, and one state, Texas, has not yet adopted a system though control laws are now up for consideration in the legislature. Public opinion on the drinking situation does not differ markedly under the two systems, this week's poll shows. Six states permit sale of beer and wines only or beer only, though one of these six—North Carolina—allows hard liquor to be sold under local option in some counties. Three of the "beer" states—Kansas, Tennessee and Oklahoma—limit the alcoholic content of beer to 3.2 per cent. Alabama and North Dakota are the only bone dry states. North Dakota will hold a popular referendum next year.

10 Industrials				104.32	+0.15

By FRANK MacMILLEN.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Profit-taking in the utilities, after their sharp bulge in the previous session failed to shake the balance of the stock market list today.

The general run of rails and industrials showed mild improvement on balance after irregular early dealings, while most of the power and light shares dipped less than a point.

Trading was fairly active for the short session, aided by evening up of accounts for the holiday on Monday. Turnover in the stock exchange totalled 3,156,554 shares.

The Associated Press average was unchanged at 54.0. A dip of .3 of a point in the 15 utilities was offset by a gain of .4 of a point in the 15 rails and an upward slant of .1 of a point in the 30 industrials.

Cotton was able to make progress in commodity markets, with a lift of 35 to 50 cents a bale, but the grains were easy and appeared to have little influence on sentiment in other directions. Wheat lost 1-4 to 3-4 of a cent a bushel at Chicago, while corn was unchanged to down 3-8 of a cent.

Rails Favored.

A few low-priced rail issues found favor in the bond market, especially the Alleghany Corporation loans, on predictions of better earnings for Chesapeake & Ohio, principal investment of Alleghany. Elsewhere the trading was of a routine character, with most price changes narrow. United States government obligations were stagnant with small fluctuations in either direction.

The same C. & O. influence was apparent in the stock market were Chesapeake Corporation, another large holder of C. & O. shares, advanced 5 1-2 points to 51 1-4, while Chesapeake & Ohio was up 2 1-2 at 48 1-8.

Week-end news from trade and industry continued predominantly encouraging. At the top of the column came the report of United States Steel on shipments of finished steel products, up 71,808 tons in October compared with September. Last month the total was 686,741 tons, compared with only 343,962 tons in October, 1934.

Western Union, a recent favorite with traders, revealed earnings of $3.26 in the first nine months of the year, compared with $1.70 in the like 1934 period, and Houston Oil and New Jersey Zinc came through with improved results as compared with a year ago for the third quarter. Western Union stock finished with a gain of 2 1-4 points at 70 3-8.

Power Shares.

Some of the power shares which got down fractions to around a point on realizing after Friday's uprush included Peoples Gas, at 36, Pacific Lighting at 54 1-4, Pacific Gas at 30, Columbia Gas at 14 7-8, North American at 27, United Corporation at 6 1-2, United Gas Improvement at 17 7-8, and Public Service of New Jersey at 44 3-8.

A few specialties found followers for good gains. Among them were Owens-Illinois Glass at 127 3-4, up 6 3-4 points; Chrysler up more than 2 at 86; Electric Storage Battery up 1 1-2 at 56; Evans Products ahead about as much at 21 1-2, and Commercial Solvents up better than a point at 21.

Among the active issues in the so-called pivotal group there were a few gains of better than a point, including Union Pacific at 97 and Westinghouse at 94 3-8, while International Harvester got down about as much at 58 1-4. Fractional improvement appeared in such issues as American Can at 144 1-2, New York Central at 23 1-4, General Motors at 58 3-4, Southern Pacific, at 18¾. Others off fractions to a point included American Telephone at 148, Sears at 62 5-8, Anaconda at 20 3-4, and Montgomery Ward at 36.

By G. A. PHILLIPS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Quiet backing and filling movements that represented for the most part adjustments of accounts in preparation for the extended holiday, took up most of the two-hour session on the bond market today.

United States governments were virtually at a standstill with trading reaching a total of only $140,000, par value. Fluctuations were insignificant and closing prices were mixed, 1-32nd higher to 3-32nds lower.

Electric power and light bonds, the center of Friday's activity, were extremely quiet and prices in most cases were within small fractions either way of the previous closing. Utility Power & Light 5s and Columbia Gas 5s were among others edging a trifle higher.

Reports of good earnings by the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway sent that road's bonds up more than 3 points along with several issues of Alleghany Corportion, most of which were 2 to 3 1-2 better. Other rail bonds did little either way. New York Central 5s and Northern Pacific 4 1-2s were among others gaining fractionally. Baltimore & Ohio 4 1-2s were 1-4 lower at 55 1-4.

There were quite a few firm spots in the industrial division and this group, as measured by the Associated Press averages, established a new high for a year or longer at 100.3, up .2 of a point. The averages for other groups were .1 of a point higher to that much lower.

Italian bonds firmed somewhat following overnight reports of further success on the battle field, but there was little activity elsewhere in the foreign division. A gain of a point or so among Czechoslovakian bonds was a feature.

Transfers of $5,575,000, par value, compared with $5,618,000 last Saturday.

Q. S. S. to Push National Cheese Week

The entire group of 190 stores of the Q. S. S. in Atlanta will concentrate their efforts behind National Cheese Week, November 10 to 16. Prominent displays will be placed in the stores and special prices will be put on all cheese items during the week. In the picture above, R. L. Renfroe, manager of the Kraft Distributing Company, at the left, is discussing plans with M. Blank, president of Quality Service Stores and operator of a store at 1198 Highland avenue, N. E. "Cheese, this year, as never before, represents the great bargain in foodstuffs," Mr. Blank said yesterday. "Low cost and high food value—these are the theme songs with which cheese takes the center of the food stage this year."

ATLANTA MUSIC NOTES

by Mozelle Horton Young

SYMPHONIC FEAST.

A feast is in store for Atlanta music lovers!—a symphonic feast! The occasion is the two concerts to be given by the National Symphony orchestra, Hans Kindler conducting both concerts, at the Fox theater Wednesday afternoon and evening. The matinee performance is being given especially for the benefit of the children and students of Atlanta and vicinity, and, although it will hold fascination for grown-ups, too, the program is designed to appeal to the very young musicians and music lovers. Children will be admitted for 25 cents, and no child should miss the opportunity of hearing such a musical treat. An adult taking 10 children will be admitted free of charge. Otherwise, adult admissions are $1 each.

The program for the matinee lists "Marche Militaire," Schubert; "Sarabande and Gigue," from Bach's "Suite in B Minor;" the entire "Peer Gynt" Suite, by Grieg, including "Morning," "Ase's Death," "Anitra's Dance," and "In the Hall of the Mountain King" and "Procession of the Sardar," from "Caucasian Sketches," by Ippolitov-Ivanov. A chorus of 200 voices from the Atlanta high schools will sing with the orchestra in three numbers, "Pilgrim's Chorus," from Wagner's "Tannhauser;" "Dear Land of Home," from Sibelius' "Finlandia;" and "Unfold, Ye Portals," from Gounod's "Redemption."

On the evening program, which is the second of the All-Star Concert Series, is the "Egmont Overture," Beethoven; the entire "Symphony in C Minor," Brahms; "Waltzes," from "Der Rosenkavalier," Richard Strauss; "Praeludium," Jarnefelt; "Traume," Wagner; and "Prelude to Act One," from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger."

BRAHMS' C MINOR SYMPHONY.

Brahms' C Minor Symphony, his first symphony, one of the greatest of all the symphonies, will be the "piece de resistance" of the evening concert to be given by the National Symphony orchestra Wednesday evening. Brahms was 43 years old when his first symphony was produced at Carlsruhe under Dessoff, in 1876. He was at the height of his maturity and through his chamber music, choral, and piano compositions had established his position in the eyes of the more conservative German musicians. In his former compositions he had made it clear that, while he held great regard for the classical forms, he was no slave to them. Therefore, never had a symphony been awaited with more eagerness and anticipation. And Brahms himself realized the production of his first symphony would be an important landmark in his career. He labored on the work for many years off and on, writing and rewriting, changing parts many times over with a dogged determination that this symphony should be a worthy expression of his powers. From Grove's Dictionary comes an account of its first production—"The theme of the finale of the symphony aroused an opposition and suggested a line of defense that afford a counterpart to the war over the piano concerto. It is beyond all question that it reminds the hearer of the great theme in the finale of the Ninth Symphony of Beethoven; this fact was pounced upon by one party as a proof of Brahms' lack of originality, while his defenders made matters worse by calling the new work the "tenth symphony," and declaring that Brahms began at the point where Beethoven left off." This gives an idea of the stir that was caused in the art world of Brahms' time upon the production of his first symphony.

Of Brahms' symphonies P. A. Browne, in his "Brahms, the Symphonies," says: "It may be said that the dominant characteristics of the Brahms symphonies are intellectual and spiritual power and depth rather than sensuous beauty or startling brilliance; and that they are in the main stream of the finest musical tradition, impressing the listener immediately with their grandeur and adding constantly to the strength of that impression as familiarity with their beauties grows by reptition."

The New York Philharmonic Orchestra will play this symphony in their regular Sunday afternoon broadcast this afternoon. It is my suggestion that you "listen in" this afternoon in order to reap richer enjoyment of the concert Wednesday evening.

Charlotte Lockwood Comes.

Charlotte Lockwood, the celebrated American organ virtuoso, will appear in recital at the Peachtree Christian church on November 21, sponsored by the Georgia Chapter of the American Guild of Organists, Ethel Beyer, dean. Miss Lockwood was born in Hartford, Conn., and spent her youth in North Carolina. So pronounced was her musical talent that at the age of eleven she was organist at the First Methodist church of Reidsville, N. C. After graduation from Salem College she studied in New York with Clarence Dickinson and within two years won both her Associate and Fellow degrees with the Organ Guild. Later Miss Lockwood studied in Paris with Charles Marie Widor and with Gunther Ramin in Leipzig. She holds a master's degree in sacred music from the Union Theological Seminary in New York. At present she is organist and choirdirector of Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Plainfield, N. J. and West End Synagogue, New York, and is a member of the faculty of the School of Sacred Music, Union Theological Seminary.

Studio Club Musicale.

The music group of the Studio Club presented this season's second monthly musicale Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Asa G. Candler Jr., starring Harriet Hirsch, pianist, and Charles Sheldon, organist, as guest artists. In the absence of Marvin McDonald, chairman of the music group, Stewart Gelders, president of the club, served as "master of ceremonies." A beautiful program was offered to a large assemblage of music lovers who accepted it with eager appreciation. Dr. Sheldon not only showed his own skill as an organist, but revealed the rare beauties of the large and tonal-wealthy Candler organ in several solos including "Finale," Cesar Franck; "Elfes," Bonnet; "Harmonies de Soir," Karg-Elert; and the vorspiel of Wagner's "Lohengrin." Mrs. Hirsch, who plays with a fine spirit and artistic fervor, attracted her audience in her solo, Liszt's "Etude in F minor," after which an encore was demanded. "Gavotte," Gluck-Brahms. The two artists gave the highlight of the evening in the rendition of the first movement of the Schumann "Concerto in A minor," with Mrs. Hirsch playing the solo and Dr. Sheldon playing the orchestral score at the organ. Debussy's "Clair de Lune" was the second piano and organ number and met with warm applause.

Music Club Program.

The monthly morning musicale of the Atlanta Music Club, presented in the auditorium of the Atlanta Woman's Club last Wednesday morning, brought to the members an analytical study of the Brahms C Minor Symphony. It was enjoyable intellectually and artistically. Frances Stovall Felder and Tallulah Codington Reed gave a two-piano rendition of the first two movements of the symphony that was marked not only by artistic piano playing, but a genuine understanding of the context, and a complete sympathy with each other in interpretation. In short, their reading of the work was delightful! Mrs. Armand Carroll preceded the performance with a discussion of Brahms' works, comparing his style with Bach and Beethoven, and then making an analysis of the symphony with the pianists playing the themes. A good-sized crowd expressed their appreciation for an opportunity to study the symphony in this way. Mrs. Harold McKenzie is president of the club.

There will be pep songs, patriotic songs, sacred songs and many types of songs which have a particular appeal to boys. Only men will be invited as guests to this program. The fathers of the boys of the school and a group of prominent businessmen who are interested in music will be the honor guests. The boys' motto is "Make Atlanta Boys Music-Minded."

Article in Etude.

My good friend, Elizabeth Craig Cobb, of Americus, prominent piano teacher of that city, sent me a copy of an article written by her on "Why Every Child Should Have a Musical Training," and published by the Etude, music magazine. It is a splendid presentation of the importance of music study for children and I wish it were possible to quote the whole article. Part of it follows: "The old idea of the 'thre R's' being the essentials in education for the masses, and of training only the talented in the fine arts, is giving way to a new order, because of the scientific and psychological methods employed in a modern education. Music is playing a leading role in this wonderful movement. . . . The study of music develops muscular control, mental poise, logical thinking, a retentive memory, accuracy and rapidity of thought, keenness of imagination and a poetical and spiritual insight into life's hidden meanings. . . ."

Editor's Note: The Atlanta Constitution announces the addition of a new column for its women readers to peruse under the caption of "Woman's Auxiliary to Medical Association of Georgia." The column will be conducted under the editorship of Mrs. Harry Rogers, of Atlanta, and will be published the first Sunday in every three months. The selection of The Constitution as the medium through which the news of the auxiliary is to be given publicity, again demonstrates the esteem in which this newspaper is held by Georgia women. Mrs. Rogers, a former newspaper woman, is an exceptionally gifted writer and is well qualified to take over the duties of editor. The column will deal with interesting subjects pertaining to the auxiliary and The Constitution will serve as the official organ of the state-wide organization.

By MRS HARRY ROGERS, of Atlanta, State Editor.

The layman often asks why the need of a medical auxiliary? When the Georgia Medical Auxiliary was organized a foremost consideration in the minds of those organizing it was its social value within the medical profession itself. It was felt that doctors' wives could perform a distinct service to the profession by helping to develop unity through fellowship between members of doctors' families. But it was soon found that merely meeting together in a social way did not create sufficient interest. Thus the philanthropic function developed. A group thus interested found out community needs and undertook to perform a service by meeting these needs that were related to the work of the medical profession. The medical auxiliary has thus become an important factor in extending the aims of the medical profession in health to other organizations through health education, public relations and Hygeia, the health magazine. But in doing their public health and philanthropic work the members have not lost sight of the fact that they are always to promote acquaintance among doctors' families and to assist in the entertainment and conventions of their respective societies.

Many Georgia auxiliary members are planning to attend the annual meeting of the woman's auxiliary to the Southern Medical Association, which will be held in St. Louis November 20 and 21. An Atlanta woman, a former president of the Fulton County Medical Society and of the Georgia Medical Auxiliary, Mrs. J. Bonar White, is president of the southern auxiliary and will preside. Mrs. Eustace Allen, also of Atlanta, is corresponding secretary of the group.

Among the Atlanta women who will attend are Mrs. James N. Brawner, Mrs. Olin S. Cofer and Mrs. Charles Daniels. A most interesting and instructive program has been arranged and this will be complemented by delightful social affairs. Mrs. Ernest Harris, of Winder, state president, will be an important figure at the convention.

A number of interesting district meetings, each of which was largely attended and enthusiastically enjoyed, have been held during the past few months. The first district held its meeting in Savannah, at which time Mrs. Cleveland Thompson, of Millen, was elected president. Other officers named were Mrs. L. W. Williams, of Savannah, vice president; Mrs. W. E. Floyd, of Statesboro, secretary-treasurer, and Mrs. J. S. Howkins, Savannah, parliamentarian. Dr. J. E. Paullin, of Atlanta, president of the Medical Association of Georgia; Mrs. Ernest R. Harris, of Winder, president of the auxiliary, and Mrs. W. R. Dancy, of Savannah, president-elect, gave interesting talks. Mrs. J. C. Metts and Mrs. A. A. Morrison Jr., delegates to the convention of the auxiliary to the American Medical Association, submitted their reports.

The meeting of the third district auxiliary was held in Americus at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Prather, with Mrs. Herschel Smith, district secretary, presiding. Reports were given by delegates from Sumter, Dodge and Dooly counties. An article by Mrs. Ernest R. Harris, of Winder, state president, on "Why Organize An Auxiliary?" was read and created much favorable comment. A musical tea was enjoyed after the business session.

Hall County Medical Auxiliary entertained the auxiliary of the ninth district at the Dixie Hunt hotel in Gainesville, Mrs. D. H. Garrison, of Clarksville, chairman, presiding. Mrs. Eugene Ward, of Gainesville, welcomed the guests, with Mrs. Randolph, of Winder, responding. Mrs. J. Bonar White, of Atlanta, president of the Southern Medical Auxiliary; Mrs. E. R. Harris, of Winder, state president, and Dr. Edgar D. Shanks, of Atlanta, secretary-treasurer of the Medical Association of Georgia, all made instructive addresses. Mrs. W. H. Garrison, of Clarkesville, read a paper on Jane Todd Crawford and Mrs. Charles Martin, of Gainesville, gave a number of poems. Later the visitors were guests of the Hall County Medical Society for luncheon.

Mrs. D. M. Carter, of Madison, presided over the meeting of the tenth district auxiliary, held in Elberton. Mrs. Philip R. Stewart, of Monroe, responded to the welcome by Mrs. Paul Brown and Mrs. D. N. Thompson, of Elberton. After a talk by the state president, Mrs. E. R. Harris, of Winder, Dr. E. Fred Griffith, of Eatonton, gave an interesting address on "The Wives of the Profession." New officers elected were Mrs. Ralph Chaney, of Augusta, district manager; Mrs. D. V. Bailey, of Elberton, manager-elect, and Mrs. H. G. Banister, of Ila., secretary-treasurer. Miss Phyllis Johnson, Mrs. D. M. Seymour, both of Elberton, and Miss Mary Stewart Brown, of Royston, gave a program. The women present joined the doctors at noon for a barbecue.

Reports of other district activities will appear in a later edition of the woman's auxiliary column.

West Central Group, B. W. M. U. Holds Meeting in Barnesville

Concluding a meeting held October 30-31 with the Barnesville Baptist church, West Central Division, Georgia Baptist W. M. U. adjourned to meet October, 1936, with the First Baptist church of Columbus.

The divisional vice president, Mrs. F. W. Withoft, Fort Valley, had prepared a program on the general theme, "The Banner of Christ," on which her opening address, "Consider," sounded the keynote sustained throughout the session.

Included among the speakers were Mrs. Una Roberts Lawrence, of Kansas City, mission study editor of the home board, and Miss Juliette Mather, young people's leader, Southern Baptist W. M. U. Mrs. Lawrence spoke Wednesday on "Lifting His Banner Throughout the Homeland," and conducted conferences also. Miss Mather's recent tour of foreign lands gave high points of interest to her address.

Miss Mary Christian secretary for Georgia B. W. M. U., presented facts and figures illustrating the needs and achievements of the missionary enterprise.

Miss Miriam Robinson, new leader for young people in the state, gave the devotional Wednesday evening, when she was presented by Miss Mary F. Webb, Lithia Springs, divisional young people's leader. Miss Robinson's pageant, "We've a Story to Tell," was presented by 15 Vineville G. A. girls assisted by Mrs. F. L. Mallary, pianist, and Wallace Williams, soloist.

Mrs. Maud Reynolds McLure, Columbus, former principal of the W. M. U. Training school at Louisville, and now divisional training school chairman, in Training Standard Bearers of Tomorrow, discussed the school. She deplored the fact that Georgia has only three girls enrolled at present, and made the urgent suggestion that each division in the state provide a training school scholarship.

Mrs. Miller Wood Macon, who prepared the program material for the recent season of prayer for state missions, made her initial appearance as divisional mission study chairman. "Forget Not All His Benefits" was the caption under which Mrs. D. Talmage Ellis, Macon, chairman for Georgia of the Margaret Fund, gave a comprehensive history of that phase of the work, from its incipiency to the present day status. Mrs. Harry Smith, Barnesville, divisional stewardship chairman, spoke on "Stewardship Lifts the Banner," stressing this as the solution of the whole problem of Christian activity.

"Publish Glad Tidings" was the medium through which the publicity chairman, Mrs. F. T. Vincent, Macon, urged such achievements in the Christian enterprise as would make news the reading public would welcome and heed. "His Banner Over Me Is Love," Mrs. H. G. Mouler, of Meansville, used as her topic for a brief talk on "Personal Service." Mrs. E. V. Deaton, of Columbus, and Mrs. J. W. Touchstone, Griffin, led devotionals, and Miss Mary Frances Webb spoke on "The Youth of Our Division for Christ."

Special features of the session included the presentation of a W. M. U. Training school pennant to that association making largest gifts to the school. Mrs. McLure awarded this for 1935 to Rehoboth, commending Mrs. J. C. Estes, Macon, who as associational chairman, undertook the project of raising a loan scholarship for Miss Grace Queen, of Fort Valley, in her association. The Bessie Tift quartet sang a group of songs. Miss Elsie Clor, Southern Baptist missionary to Jerusalem, was unable to speak, due to illness. Luncheon was served at the Barnesville Woman's Club to the divisional board and visitors on Wednesday.

Splendid Activities Are Reported At Third District Convention

By Mrs. George Burrus Jr., of Columbus, Third District Publicity Chairman.

Montezuma made the most outstanding report at the third district meeting of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs held in Ashburn, on November 1, and the Students' Club, of Columbus, won the gavel for the largest amount contributed to Tallulah Falls school during the past year, the sum being $45. Montezuma was presented the silver loving cup, which will be kept until the next meet, to be held in Fort Gaines, Fort Valley and Ashburn being given splendid mention. Mr. Ivey Melton, of Dawson, presided as president of the district, and officers present included Mrs. Maxwell Murray, of Ft. Valley, second vice president; Mrs. W. T. Credille, of Ft. Gaines, treasurer; Mrs. Troy Whatley, of Reynolds, recording secretary; Mrs. J. E. Hays, Montezuma, parliamentarian.

Distinguished guests were: Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, of Athens, president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. J. E. Hays, past president of the Georgia Federation; Mrs. George Burrus Jr., chairman of The Clubwoman, for General Federation Women's Clubs, and for Georgia, and third district chairman of publicity, Mrs. Thurman Whatley, and Mrs. A. C. Moye Jr., past president of third district federation.

Inspiring Message.

Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, in her inspiring message, stressed the privileges of the federation and of the work accomplished. She stressed education through the rural schools, giving these children the same opportunities as enjoyed by city children; better trained teachers to meet the challenge of today; fine arts in schools; school adviser in high schools or a dean of girls; county health; health service as a basis of good citizenship; she mentioned the fact that Hubert Owens, state highway beautification engineer, appreciated the work of the federated clubwomen as the most constructive which he had received. The federation yearbook was presented, which "tells a story in print."

Mrs. Ritchie mentioned the fact that no one club was expected to do every project, but each club was expected to do that which could be best applied to its own individual community. She also mentioned that other states liked so well the work done by Georgia clubwomen that they had adopted many projects. She explained that the federation gave a chance for service. She also mentioned that courses of study could be obtained from the University of Georgia extension service on citizenship, education, landscaping, drama, law and other subjects. This service is given especially to clubwomen at a minimum cost.

The success of the Tallulah Falls silver jubilee and the work of the student aid was lauded. The state meet will be held in Augusta and the general federation meeting in Miami. In closing Mrs. Ritchie urged the clubwomen to attend the conventions, and reminded them not to be content but to labor on for even greater achievements.

Student Aid.

Student aid was explained by Mrs. Thurmond Whatley, district chairman, whereby worthy students may borrow funds for their education. She spoke of the 60 girls from the third district who had been aided by this fund, and how these girls had made good in the professional world. Miss Katherine Cornell gave a picture of life at Tallulah, and Mrs. John Murrah, district chairman, told of the contributions that had been made during the past year. Mrs. J. B. Grimsley explained the Ella F. White foundation which provides a nucleus for the federation's expenses.

Mrs. George Burrus urged that every club pay for their subscription to the Clubwoman, official organ of the general federation, and announced that 23 subscriptions have been given in the third district of which Mrs. R. A. Hinton, of Reynolds, is chairman. Mrs. Chester Wilson gave a discussion on leadership which was so splendid that later the talk will appear in these columns.

Mrs. J. E. Hays presented the resolution that when speakers ask for space on the district programs they be placed at the last, in order to preserve the continuity of the program. The infantry school Woman's Club, of Ft. Benning, and the Good Will Industries, of Columbus, were received as group clubs. Mrs. A. C. Moye Jr. presented the courtesy resolutions.

Mrs. C. L. Clark, hostess president, assisted in presiding and in the entertainment at luncheon, served in the new community house, co-operation was the keynote and is also the keyword to modern efficiency. Over 100 women attended and enjoyed the hospitality of Ashburn clubwomen. Fort Valley will entertain the spring meeting and Fort Gaines the fall convention in 1936.

Questions on Parliamentary Law And Answers Published Today

By MRS. HOWARD McCALL, Of Atlanta, State Parliamentarian.

In assuming the duties of this department, the parliamentarian desires to make this article of the greatest possible help to the clubwomen of Georgia. Suggestions as to the kind of articles that are desired or of subjects that will be most helpful for discussion will be gladly accepted either from clubs or individuals.

Question: Our club meets every week and our executive board meets once a month. I am having the minutes of the board meeting read and approved at the following club meeting. Is this correct?

Answer: No. The club is not competent to correct or approve the minutes of the board, because the club members are not present at the meeting of the board. If, however, it is desirable, for any special reason, for the club to hear the minutes of the board meeting before the next meeting of the board has opportunity to approve them, the board can appoint a small committee to approve the minutes before they are read at the club meeting. Then at the next meeting of the board, the board may correct the minutes if any errors have been overlooked.

The chairman of the board may always bring the report of the board meeting to the club. This report will include all important business necessary to be acted on at the club meeting. (Usually, the duties of the chairman of the board are stated in the by-laws.)

At a state meeting all resolutions indorsed at the state executive board meeting are given by the secretary of the board to the chairman of the resolutions committee and will be presented by the chairman to the state meeting. (See state by-laws on duties of resolutions committee.'

Question: Is it allowable to vote by ballot on any questions other than in the election of officers?

Answer: Yes. While any question is pending the club may adopt by a majority vote an incidental motion to take the vote on that question by ballot. In cases where there is apt to be feeling and trouble by exposing the way members vote, it is often wise to vote by ballot.

Question: Does a resignation from a club have to be voted on?

Answer: A resignation, as a rule, is a voluntary act, and is a privilege that belongs to very officer and individual member of an organization. Where the resignation of an officer or member has been presented to an organization like a main motion, it becomes the property of the assembly and is treated in the same manner. The proper form is for the chair to state "You have heard the resignation of Mrs. Blank, the question is on its acceptance. Are you ready for the question." There it is open for discussion. This form saves embarrassment on the part of the members, because it can be voted on without remarks. Almost always a member wishes to add as an amendment "with regrets." The corresponding secretary can then be instructed to write a letter to the member resigning and express the regrets of the club. A vote on a resignation cannot be reconsidered, it goes into effect at once.

FAT GIRLS GET THE GO-BY—SLIM GIRLS WIN MEN

Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

There's a reason why so many people find dieting slow and often times futile in reducing. The reason, doctors say, is often because a little gland is not working right.

All the blood in your body goes through this tiny gland sixteen times every day. If it doesn't pour into the blood stream about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat. This fluid helps Nature to "burn up" excess food and fatty tissue in much the same way as a good "draft" acts in a furnace.

Now, physicians combat this condition by feeding this gland the substance it lacks—and millions of pounds of excess fat has been wiped out this way.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on the same scientific method used by doctors. So why not lose fat the easy way—without starvation diets or back-breaking, bending and rolling exercises? Start the Marmola treatment today that millions have used successfully to get rid of excess fat. The formula is in every box so you know just what you are taking. Don't wait—get Marmola today from druggists.

Each year the public rededicates itself to the ideal of popular government based upon an enlightened citizenry. Parents and citizens study the aims, needs and achievements of their schools. Schools need the sympathetic co-operation of all citizens during this critical period as they never have needed it before, and Education Week offers an opportunity for such co-operation."

The following topics for the day-by-day discussions are suggested: November 11, "The School and the Citizen;" 12th, "The School and the State;" 13th, "The School and the Nation;" 15th, "The School and Country Life;" 16th, "The School and Recreation;" 17th, "Education and the Good Life." State Legion Auxiliary Editor Writes on Indianapolis Conclave

By MRS. J. M. TOOMEY, Of Decatur, Publicity Director for Georgia Legion Auxiliary.

The conference of department presidents and secretaries of the American Legion Auxiliary, held in Indianapolis, Ind., on November 3 and 4, was one of the most instructive and informative meetings ever held by that organization. Papers were read by the national chairmen of the various committees and the activities for the ensuing year were outlined.

Especially interesting was the paper on child welfare that was read by the chairman of that committee. This paper showed that during the past 12 months 276,143 children in the United States were given assistance by the American Legion and its Auxiliary for which $1,100,000 were spent. A very fine program has been formulated and will be carried forward by the units in every state.

In the Georgia department the Albany unit reports its major project for this year is the equipment and maintenance of a nursery school for 25 small children. Mrs. Ed Mercer is president of the Albany unit and Miss Wilma Wright will be superviser of the school. The unit will pay the monthly rent, upkeep, fuel and laundry bills and the FERA will furnish the supervisor, cod liver oil, orange juice and one hot meal per day for each child.

Linen for the beds in which the children take their midday naps, as well as a supply of pajamas, were furnished by the unit. Twenty-five small lockers, holding towels, toothbrushes, wash rags and combs; individual sets of small knives, forks, dishes and glassware were also furnished by the unit. Throughout the house the decorations and furnishings were selected to be especially attractive to children. In the hall are hooks low enough for the children to reach. Each hook is marked with the picture of a bird, animal or flower and similar markers are used on the individual lockers so that each child will be able to identify his quickly. Kitchen and playground equipment has been furnished and the school will be far-reaching in its benefits to the underprivileged children of that community.

On Monday and Tuesday of this week an army of devoted women will be on the street of almost every city, town and village of Georgia to sell the veteran-made poppies to the public. The proceeds of this sale are used exclusively for rehabilitation and child welfare and many programs such as that sponsored by the Albany unit, will be financed by the sale of poppies this year.

The chairman of the national poppy committee, Mrs. A. D. Ladehoff, of Iowa, in speaking to the presidents' and secretaries' conference said: "The making of poppies furnishes thousands of veterans over the United States with employment. Can you think what this means to the veterans in hospitals and workshops who have had no money of their own for months? Last year in a hospital where veterans were making poppies for the first time, one veteran having just received his check said, 'For the first time in years I can buy my children a Christmas present.' Another veteran who was permitted to make poppies in his home for the second consecutive year said when the check for completed poppies was handed to him, 'This means I can pay the taxes on my little home, that I have struggled for years to pay for.' I know how happy he was for I handed him the check."

Miss May Harp, president of the Fayetteville unit, announces that the Armistice Day program of her unit will include patriotic exercises in the high school auditorium at 10 a. m., followed by a barbecue at which all the veterans of the county will be guests of the unit.

Manchester post and unit will celebrate Armistice Day with a banquet. Mrs. A. J. Stratton is president of the unit and will be official hostess at the banquet. The Douglasville post has invited a number of ladies of their community to be their guests at an oyster supper on Monday night to be followed by a meeting for the purpose of organizing a unit to that post.

Members were asked by the fine arts chairman to send her their favorite poem which will be placed in a scrapbook to be used on programs that include poetry.

Among activities sponsored by the club are typhoid and diptheria clinics held for adults and pre-school children; funds contributed to tubercular county clinic sponsored by the state board of health; gifts made to the Myrtle Gober Armistead scholarship; books furnished FERA teachers; $25 contributed to Tallulah Falls school silver jubilee celebration. The cooking school put on by the Athens Woman's Club was largely attended. Crawford winning an electric lamp for having the largest number present on one day. There is an active committee in charge of the beautification of parks and the grave of William H. Crawford. An application for the establishment of a state park on the Crawford estate is being considered.

Mrs. Charles Coan, chairman, introduced the numbers which included, "Essentials in Establishing an Ideal Home," Mrs. J. C. Superintendent's Message

My Dear Boys and Girls:

This week we will have two matinees which the boys and girls will enjoy very much and which will be of much benefit to them.

On Monday afternoon, November 11, at 3 o'clock at the Fox theater, Admiral Richard E. Byrd will show pictures and tell of his experiences in exploring the South Polar region. This children's matinee is sponsored by the Business and Professional Women's Club of Atlanta, and they have arranged a special admission price of 25 cents for children that afternoon. This matinee will give our boys and girls an opportunity to see and hear an explorer of international fame, and I hope many of you will be able to attend.

During this year we are emphasizing instrumental music in our schools. Through the courtesy of the Atlanta Music Club, a special matinee has been arranged for the children to hear the National Symphony orchestra. This concert will be held at the Fox theater Wednesday afternoon, November 13, at 2:45. Special admission price to school pupils will be 25 cents. The All-High School Chorus, composed of 250 junior and senior high school students, will participate in this concert.

Your teacher will be glad to explain to you the various instruments, the arrangement of the orchestra and the selections to be used in the concert. I believe that this is an opportunity for you to hear some wonderful music by a great symphony orchestra. I am anxious that a large number of our boys and girls take advantage of the opportunity to attend this concert.

Always your friend,

WILLIS A. SUTTON,
Superintendent of Schools.

WHITEFOORD CHILDREN HAVE NOVEL LUNCHEON

Well, well, well, if it wasn't Halloween at Whitefoord school last Thursday. Boy, o boy, guess what we had on our plate lunches! Well, I guess I'll have to tell. We had owl boats, nut witches, orange jack o'lanterns and a toasted cat.

The owl boat was stuffed potatoes, nut witches were sandwiches with peanut butter, the orange jack o'lanterns were oranges with black tape cut in a three-cornered shape for the eyes, nose and a piece for the mouth which made him look furious. Inside was Waldorf salad. The toasted cat was cut into a cat shape with a raisin eye. That surely was a nice plate lunch for 5 cents.

The dime plate lunch was hobgoblin salad, Carroty Ann sandwiches, bats wings, and witch cap surprise.

Carroty Ann was round bread covered with cream cheese, with two eyes of round carrots. Pimento made the mouth and nose. Shreds of carrots made the hair. We hated to eat her she looked so real. Hobgoblin salad was tuna fish in oranges with a hobgoblin face. The bats wings were bread in the shape of wings with peanut butter to make them black. The surprise was made of a cookie on which sat an upside down ice cream cone. Inside was ice cream. It was all very good beside being so pretty and attractive.

Mrs. Frank Dennis Issues Message To Georgia Division U.D.C. Today

By MRS. A. BELMONT DENNIS, Of Covington, Editor of Georgia Division, U. D. C.

Mrs. Frank A. Dennis, newly-elected president of Georgia division, U. D. C., issues the following message on today's official page in The Constitution: "Greetings. My heart is very full as I greet you as your newly-elected president. Full of appreciation for your friendship and for the trust you have imposed upon me, full of praise for your accomplishments of the past and full of hope and plans as we face these two years together. The general convention will convene in Hot Springs, Ark., November 19 through 22. Arlington hotel will be headquarters, reasonable rates are given by railroads and hotels. I do urge you to go. To be a part of a great general U. D. C. convention is truly a wonderful experience. This convention will be marked by the election of new general officers, therefore our Georgia division officers will be able to do little work until the new general board is installed. In this, my first message to you, I would like to urge that this year we stress as never before the enlistment of every eligible member in a Daughter of the Confederacy chapter. Make a survey of your town, list those whom you know are eligible and invite them to join your chapter, help them fill out their papers and then give them work to do. Almost any chapter can secure at least one new member each month, in a year you will have 12. Set as your goal at least one new member each month. Hoping to meet you in Hot Springs."

Miss Mary Lizzie Wright, recording secretary of Georgia division, U. D. C., urgently requests that reports of work accomplished during the recent administration be rushed to her immediately in order that minutes may be gotten out promptly. She says: "The success of the new year's work depends largely upon getting our minutes into the hands of the division at an early date. Therefore, all officers and chairmen are urged to send to me at once a typewritten copy of their report. Chapter presidents, please send me a typewritten report of your chapter activities and a roster of the newly-elected officers of your chapter. Many have already done this, for which I am grateful, but there are some who will not be recorded in the minutes unless this is attended to at once. The work accomplished during the past administration has been marvelous and we do not want anything omitted from our record. May I bespeak your continued co-operation for the newly-elected corps of officers and I am confident that under the leadership of Mrs. Frank Dennis the division will press forward to even greater success."

Delegates to the general convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy expecting to go to Hot Springs by train should write Mrs. T. W. Reed, University campus, Athens, Ga., for identification certificate needed to secure round trip tickets at reduced rates. It is absolutely essential that these identification certificates be used as round trip reduced rates will not otherwise be granted.

Interesting sidelights of the state convention held at Savannah included a gavel made of wood taken from the tree under which President Jefferson Davis was captured was presented to the division by Isidor Gelchrs, of Fitzgerald, Ga. Margaret Burdett, of LaGrange, one of the attractive pages, is state president Children of the Confederacy. Ann Raines, Savannah, page to the president, is the granddaughter of Mrs. L. H. Raines organizer of the Georgia division, U. D. C. Leila Griffith, of Eatonton, page to the president, is the great-granddaughter of the "Little Boy" to whom Uncle Remus told his stories. Her grandfather was the distinguished Joseph S. Turner, on whose plantation Joel Chandler Harris learned to set type.

The convention was saddened over the news of the death of Mrs. Oswald Eve, Augusta. Mrs. Eve has promoted the interest of division and general organization for many years. She made many efforts to have the Postoffice Department issue stamps bearing the likeness of General Lee. News of her death reached the convention just prior to the memorial service on Thursday. Dr. Thomas S. Clay, commander Sons of Veterans, and Dr. William R. Dancy, past general commander Sons of Veterans, were frequent visitors to the sessions. Mrs. William R. Dancy served as chairman of pages.

Miss Julia Stewart Henslee, Barnesville, and Miss Rose Walker Mayne, Athens, pages to the president, are both directors of Children of Confederacy chapters.

Twenty-three chapters were awarded gold star flags by Mrs. Mildred V. Rhodes. This is the largest number of chapters ever to attain the gold star standard. The coveted gold star banner was won by the Covington chapter, Mrs. Trox Bankston, president. Miss Lillian Henderson reported the marking of more than 300 Confederate graves last year.

Mrs. Kirby-Smith Anderson, of Madison, state historian, issues the following message relative to "Our Jubilee Year," and says:

We are now entering upon our jubilee year and that would imply the waving of banners and flags and wearing of our insignia pins and many other activities to show that we are going forward. We have a beautiful custom in our division of presentation of a flag by each chapter to the hostess chapter to remind them of the cordial hospitality extended us, and other beautiful thoughts.

While this is impressive and carries with it our representation of appreciation and pride in our organization and chapter, how lovely it would be this year for each chapter to celebrate this, our jubilee year, by becoming owner of a chapter flag bearing your name and of a size that would be more in keeping with the dignity of our work and this flag could be on a staff with a brass cap and cord, etc., and be carried in on the opening night of one session or as we now have it on Wednesday morning.

Using the battle flag for this exercise is hardly correct—it is not our organization flag—it is the one used by the United Confederate Veterans and while very dear to us often leaves in the minds of our new members that it is the one we adopted as our organization's insignia and is used on our insignia, pins, the Stars and Bars, the first flag of the Confederacy.

A few years ago each chapter that could so afford bought the set of our five Confederate flags and gave the pageant of the flags. It would be a fine time to have again this pageant by our chapters—select the time most suited to you, give it at the schools, have pupils take the parts and celebrate some day of remembrance in this way. Especially suited to Lee's birthday and Jackson's and Memorial Day.

Those chapters having already secured a chapter flag will you please write me what kind and other details. We would like to have them all uniform if possible, of durable material, but pleasing to the eye, not for presentation but for keeps and to be displayed by your chapter at meetings and on all special days and in public along with the United States flag. Our division owns its flag. Why should not each chapter own one with its name? Our insignia flag should adorn this flag, either in duplicate of our pins, above the name of the chapter, or a flag of the Stars and Bars, lined to bear the opposite side chapter name and number, or whatever may be most desired.

Every member should own and wear the insignia pin. I saw few on the members at the Savannah convention. Now that the first vice president will have this in charge why not make this a banner year in ordering pins?

Special history work for the chapters this year is to secure and send in, typed, the history of the flag of each company and regiment that went out from Georgia to serve in the War Between the States, giving the following data: By whom made, by whom presented and accepted, speeches of presentation and acceptance, where the flag was carried in battle, by whom, where is it today. Stories of valor connected with it. Begin this work now, some may have it along with their other Confederate history compiled, copy it and add a story about it. We wish it to place in the volume on Confederate flags, Georgia. All are urged to assist in this work, for reference and history.

Family History.

THE LEES OF VIRGINIA. By Burton J. Hendrick. Little Brown & Company, Boston. (An Atlantic Monthly publication.) 438 pp. $3.75.

"The family of Lee has more men of merit in it than any other family," wrote John Adams in the year 1779. The record of the Lee family has consistently been one of leadership, integrity and high courage since they first came to Virginia in the year 1640.

Thomas Lee, of the third generation, was largely responsible for making the northwest territory part of the future United States. Richard Henry Lee moved the resolution of independence, and with the Adamses of New England was an important factor in the separation of the colonies from Great Britain. Two Lees signed the declaration. It was Arthur Lee who was chiefly responsible for securing the first aid from France and Spain during the revolution. Meanwhile his kinsman, William, was busily engaged in bringing Holland into the war. "Light Horse Harry" earned his famous soubriquet for his services during the Revolutionary War. Robert E. Lee, the son of "Light Horse Harry," transcended the military exploits of his father and was in a personal sense the embodiment of the Confederacy. Fitzhugh Lee, a still younger member of the clan, made his mark in both the Civil War and the Spanish War.

"It is no exaggeration to say that the Lees have been the most representative family of the south."

That quotation from the dust cover of "The Lees of Virginia" is concise enough evidence that a book has been turned out worthy of attention. The past few years have seen America producing family histories almost in a frenzy to prove that we, too, are now becoming able to talk in terms of centuries, traditions, generations and ancestors. The result, naturally, has been a whole cauldron of pot-boilers.

This, however, is not a pot-boiler. Mr. Hendrick has already won three Pulitzer prizes and he has presented a story here that shows sound scholarship well mixed with historical insight. And yet the story with all its erudition maintains nearly the fascination of a novel.

The Lee family would have been worth writing about even had it not culminated after 200 years in its most illustrious son, Robert E. For that reason one could wish for more characterization than Mr. Hendrick gives, for a little more human color, or a more intimate picture of the individual Lees.

But as history there is little to ask. It would be difficult to draw a clearer or more interesting picture of the growth of Virginia and the American nation through the first two and a half centuries of its life. There are interpretations of the times, of movements, of growths. There is the work of imagination portraying the old plantations, wars, customs, all so convincing that one can't help being convinced that as a historian the author has something definite to say and that he knows about what he is saying it.

Name Your "Poison."

ALONG THE WINE TRAIL. An Anthology of Wines and Spirits. By G. Selmer Fougner. The Stratford Company, Boston, 306 pp. $2.50.

A neat little parlor manual of gin-fizzes and highballs, this interesting treatise should be of value to milady who delights in serving an intricate variety of mixed drinks at her tea parties.

The purpose of the book is to tell in simple manner the story of all the alcoholic beverages which have returned to popular favor since the repeal of prohibition. The author lays no claim to finality in his pronouncements, nor does he presume to say that he alone is right.

Much of the material has been quoted directly from the works of famous connoisseurs of wines and liquors, but gives the reader only a vague idea of the use of beverages, their origin and methods of manufacture. In this respect, the author drops a fine opportunity to make his volume singularly worth while.

Part I of the book is devoted to the subject of wine. Part II is a history of distillation, with special chapters for each of the main divisions of distilled liquors—whisky, gin, brandy and rum.

In Part III lies the value of the work. It is made up chiefly of a collection of specially selected recipes, with notations on the origins of some of the best known of this type of refreshment. The history of the cocktail is, according to the author, the most complete ever collected.

More than 500 recipes for mixing assorted beverages, including punches, cocktails, mint juleps, eggnogs and flips are given.

Just Another Book.

DARK CANYON. By W. L. River and Frank Wead. New York. Frederick A. Stokes Co. pp. 285. $2.

There must be some good in "Dark Canyon" or it wouldn't have been published, but unfortunately this reviewer failed to find it. The jacket says it is "the story of the clash of man's will and the relentless forces of nature; a giant battle fought against a background of the rugged grandeur of the west." That one sentence of explanation is the most lucid thing in the book. What is intended for rugged realism is more nearly confused crudity.

The story is a detailed account of an engineer's problems in building a dam. The capital behind him, the labor he must use, the actual engineering problems to be met and solved are the forces which the authors present as being pitted against him in a fight for success. Undoubtedly the material for a great epic is hidden in the situation, but it remained hidden. Indeed much of the time even the thread of the story is hidden in pompous verbosity and only by dint of much reading could any glimmer of sense be extracted. It is a pretentious book trying to gain literary effect by self-conscious changes of tense.

Says the Red Cent.

IN GOD WE TRUST. By William H. Ridgeway. W. A. Wilde Company, Boston. 118 pp. $1.

"When will times get better?" Here is an answer to the question of thousands—written by a captain of industry, Young Men's Christian Association worker, lecturer and author, who has weathered the hard times that followed the "panics" of 1873, 1892, 1907, 1920, and who firmly believes that we will come through the panic of 1929 when and if the faith and trust of the American people is reestablished.

Goddess of the Jungle.

GOLDEN GODDESS. By Rob Eden. John H. Hopkins & Son: New York. 253 pp. $2.

Lillis Fernol, having accepted a position with a Brazilian diamond magnate who advertised in a New York newspaper for a blonde, found herself on the Santa Rosario going to South America. But why did the Derger Mining Company want a blond stenographer?

On the boat Lillis meets Rian Troy, a young mining engineer, also newly employed by Derger, Manuela, a servant, and later, Jim Cavanagh, Derger's private secretary, who play important roles in liberating Lillis when, to her horror, she learns her fate. Her shrewdly mad employer, monarch over his little domain, hated by his servants who obeyed him through fear, had chosen her to be a goddness in the jungles of Brazil.

According to a legend, centuries ago, the goddess of the Irac tribe commanded them to hide their treasures in the temple of Mount Tiva. Every 10 years they visited Tiva, hoping their goddness would return to them their treasures. Derger knew this was no monstrous tale of superstitious legend. Bent on finding the treasures, believing Lillis to be doped, in a hypnotic state, caring naught for her life, he placed her on the altar of Tiva.

Hitherto Rian believed Lillis was in confinement since her arrival because of fever, that she would soon recover. But now he knew the truth, knew of her danger, and Manuela, in her exciting shrewdness and knowledge of jungle sounds, was leading him and Cavanagh to the rescue. Sending Rian and Jim, disguised like Iracs, into the temple to free Lillis, Manuela kills Derger and a number of his men, and escapes with Rian, Lillis and Jim in Derger's airplane to Rio where Rian and Lillis marry.

In this thrilling and dramatic story full of adventure and love one finds good, decent reading. It holds your interest from the beginning to the end, and leaves you wishing for more. Manuela really steals the last two or three chapters. Let us hope that Gary Cooper and Jean Harlow will be starred in this story as Rian and Lillis.

Music Student's Guide

AN OUTLINE OF THE HISTORY OF MUSIC. By Karl Nef, translater by Carl F. Pfatteicher. New York: Columbia University Press. 386 pp. Illustrated. $3.50.

Andre Pirro, the Sorbonne's well known musicologist, says of the French edition of this book that Karl Nef has provided "the most reliable guide for students, the most instructive survey of facts and opinions for the amateurs, of music."

An Outline of the History of Music has become a standard in Germany, France, Switzerland and Norway. Now Carl Pfatteicher's translation makes it available to students and teachers of the English-speaking world.

The book is comprehensive, yet it is not over-long. It does not make the mistake of placing too much emphasis on history at the expense of appreciation, or vice versa. In short, it is the kind of text which will be a stimulating basis for lectures and demonstrations and as such will fill a need that has long existed.

There are extensive footnotes which continue the matter above and which will gratify the more advanced student with their fullness. Moreover, the use and enjoyment of this volume will not be confined to students.

Actual scores are included to illustrate the narrative. These have been taken from the French edition. Karl Nef, the author, is the late professor of musicology at the University of Basel, Switzerland. Carl Pfatteicher, the translator, is director of music at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass.

Contents: Abbreviations. Part One: Monophonic Music: 1. Antiquity; 2. the Christian Era; Part two: Polyphonic Music, 3. The Ars Antiqua and the Ars Nova in the middle ages; 4. The Sixteenth Century; 5. The Seventeenth Century; 6. The Eighteenth Century; 7. The Nineteenth Century; 8. The Twentieth Century. General Bibliography. Index.

Not a Pretty Story.

MOTTKE THE THIEF. By Sholem Asch. G. P. Putnam & Sons, New York. 314 pp. $2.50.

There is no danger of your interest waning, or your attention wandering during the reading of this book, whether you like it or not. From the time the wealthy Shochliners engaged "Red" Slatke as a wet nurse (that being her regular business) before poor little Mottke was born, it was foreordained that he would have to steal or starve; and even a little Jewish mite, born in a corner of a cellar that housed many other families, does not desire to starve; and Mottke fought valiently against it. At first he woke the echoes with his screams that would not be beaten into quiescence, and then, as soon as he was able to crawl he resorted to guile and cunning.

Of morals he knew nothing, nor of love and home. Early he became King of the Dogs, because only the four-footed creatures understood him. Fate turned him as a weather vane is turned by the winds. Once he almost became a respectable glass blower, but a caravan of "tumblers" came along, and Mottke followed and became an "artist." Always he suffered the dislike and jealousy of his fellow men. He had no pass (demanded by the police) and no name, so he got himself both in the only way he knew. Made the man who owned them disappear, and took his place.

Always he had the determination to get ahead, to prove that he was not "Mottke the Thief," and always fate made him keep on being just that. Money he must have, and he made it the way those around him made it, with no qualms of conscience.

It is not a pretty story, but it is a gripping one, and well worth reading, if only to give us a bit more tolerance. MARY LAWTON.

First Love.

NO LOVELIER SPRING. By Lida Larrimore. Macrae-Smith Company, Philadelphia. $2.

With No Lovelier Spring, Lida Larrimore brings her readers another of her love tales, that will provide an evening of light entertainment and obvious ending.

One knows instantly that Sally will fall in love with the slim, dark hero of her mother's life. One knows, too, that it will all end happily, with Sally back at school and mother safely honeymooning on the golden isles. But despite the inevitability of its climaxes, the book, gay and inconsequential as Sally's first dream of romance, becomes a sort of mild spring tonic, to be taken in one dose, after a season of thoughtful, serious reading.

Honest Confession.

SPINNINGS FROM THE COBWEBS. By David R. Churchill. The Caxton Printers, Ltd., Caldwell, Idaho. 259 pp. $2.

David R. Churchill, a Nebraskan, of pioneer stock who settled near Rock Bluff in 1854, better known as "the poet from the country," and whose work is somewhat reminiscent of Edgar A. Guest, has given us an impressive collection of his spirited verses.

An injury, in 1921, forced the author to abandon work on his Idaho farm. He established a home in Twin Falls where constrained idleness prompted him to versify in rhythmical language his random thoughts and desires, resulting in his "Spinnings from the Cobwebs."

Prominent among his many sentimental, religious and patriotic, simple, true-to-life poems are those pertaining to country life. However, especially meritorious are his: "Echoes from the Anvil," "The Country Rube," "The House Across the Way," "Reprimand," "More Truth than Poetry" and lastly, a composition suggestive of the humorousness of Will Rogers, "Untutored," which reads in part:

"When I attempt to write a rhyme
I have no guide to follow;
Hence, critics very often find
Great lumps too big to swallow.

'Twas when I got a book of rules
To teach me what to say.
It seemed to me the work of fools;
I threw that book away.

To place the right inflection
On every word and line
Requires too much correction
To shape this stuff of mine.

If I had all the poets' skill
And pens at my command,
I'd try to write the sort o' stuff
That folks can understand."

Fight for Tolerance.

FESTIVAL AT MERON. Harry Sackler. New York: Covici Friede. $2.50.

Harry Sackler's story embodies the struggle of the Jews to overcome the dominance of Rome's power, and becomes in turn, the epic tale of humanity's fight for tolerance, with Simeon Ben Yohai symbolizing the courage and the understanding of all the great men who have fought before him in an effort to obtain freedom for their race.

As a youth, Simeon had one outstanding emotion: the temple should be rebuilt. And as his life unfolds, passing like a pageant before the eyes of the reader, the growth of this emotion becomes a force so strong that he deserts Michel, whom he loves, and risks the displeasure of his father, to give himself wholly to the cause. His impetuous brilliance carries him through the years to make him the last great hero of the ancient Jewish nation, at whose shrine on the heights of Meron, men hold festivals each year to commemorate his name.

Perhaps some readers will find the story detailed, and rather bewilderingly drawn out for chapters at a time, but Simeon was such a tremendous character that his story necessarily involves the intricacy of a whole nation. A great man, and a human one, this disciple of Akiba. He lives on each colorful page of festival at Meron as the leader of men who fought with the heroism and courage of a dying race, to uphold the traditions of Judaism.

M. BREITENBUCHER.

"The Dangerous Age."

ILLYRIAN SPRING, by Ann Bridge. New York. Little, Brown & Company. $2.50.

"Illyrian Spring" is decidedly Ann Bridge's best work, despite the fact that "Reking Ticnic" was a prize novel. It is simpler and more direct in structure and fewer characters than either her first book or "Ginger Griffin." But it attains a penetration and a clearness of characterization that, although present in her other works, was not so well done. It is hard to say whether this is because the field is more limited or because practice has made perfect. Certainly the feeling of confusion due to the multiplicity of characters and incidents found in the other books is missing in this.

Mrs. Bridge has dealt with the same problem in all of her novels: how an intelligent and attractive English woman passes through the "dangerous age." Having been dominated and absorbed by a capable husband until she has lost all color and almost all personality, she is uninteresting not only to her husband and family but even to herself. At such a point there comes a break where her life hangs in the balance. It is with this period of regeneration that each of Mrs. Bridge's books deal.

In this last novel, however, the scene is no longer China but the Dalmatian coast. Mrs. Bridge, as the wife of a diplomat, is widely traveled and writes with equal knowledge of her new scene. Indeed a good portion of the book would serve as a travel guide. But being very well done, this feature adds rather than detracts from the story.

TWO INTERESTING BOOKS.

Admiral Byrd, who spent five months of complete isolation in an ice-buried hut, 123 miles distant from Little America, during his recent antarctic expedition, says that of all the books he took along with him to read, the two that impressed him most were Joseph Conrad's "Victory" and W. H. Hudson's "Green Mansions." He took along with him much philosophy and adventure stories, too. Byrd will be heard here on November 11 in two lectures, including a matinee for children at the Fox theater, recounting the interesting story of the Byrd Antarctic Exnedition II, which returned here last May, with new geographical discoveries and important new scientific data. Admiral Byrd's new book, "Discovery," a record of the expedition, will be published before Christmas.

Inside French History.

THE ANGEL OF THE ASSASSINATION (Charlotte de Corday). By Joseph Shearing. Harrison Smith and Robert Haas, Inc., New York, 336 pp. Illustrated. $2.75.

The era of the French Revolution, perhaps more than any other period of history, was productive of a large host of those immortal egoists who are so in love with their own opinions that they will gladly accept an ignoble death in order that, for a brief space, they might shout forth those opinions, and, if possible, cram them down the throats of others. Joseph Shearing has assembled a great deal of data concerning the lives of three of these immortals—Charlotte de Corday, Jean-Paul Marat, and Adam Lux—into a volume which he has titled "The Angel of the Assassination." Mr. Shearing does not claim that he has uncovered anything new about these people, but this is the first time, he says, that a full account of their lives has appeared in English.

The material which Mr. Shearing presents appears to be full and complete. From it one can construct clearly defined pictures of the characters and the information one receives about them is interesting as well as informative. Mr. Shearing's treatment of this material, however, leaves much to be desired.

Choosing, always, the most commonplace phrase possible, the author, especially in the first part of his book, covers Charlotte de Corday with a thick coating of sentimentality to which, I believe, Corday herself would have been the first to object. In this very dull first part, Mr. Shearing strives to impress upon the reader the fact that his three characters owe Jean-Jacques Rousseau and Plutarch their ideals to a constant reading of by dint of repeating, in almost the same words, an assertion of the fact upon every second page or so. These defects detract from one's pleasure in the book immeasurably, but, in spite of them, the facts, which are not completely hidden by the author's treatment, are of sufficient interest to be well worth the reader's time. Mr. Shearing's manner of presentation improves, also, as the narrative progresses so that the last few chapters are not objectionable.

"The Angel of the Assassination" was a selection of the English Book Society.

Love and "Fireworks."

GONE AWAY. By Edward Acheson. Published by MacRae-Smith Company, Philadelphia, Pa. 288 pp. $2.50.

Sheila Talhurst was a product of the unconventional morals and manners of the World War period, and Colin Wylie was a member of the fox-hunting F. F. Vs., so it was quite natural that when they met the fireworks began. They had only one thing in common, and that was love.

It is around this theme that Edward Acheson has built his latest novel, "Gone Away." And in it he describes the difficulties of love and marriage of two entirely different natures. The surprise conclusion of the book shows an unusual depth of thought.

Edward Acheson has written several detective and mystery stories, but this is his first attempt at pure fiction. His use of mystery type of plot makes the book different from the ordinary run of current fiction. It takes several chapters for the reader to find out what it's all about, but even at that he doesn't lose interest.

There is very little description in the book except occasional sketches of the dogs, horses and hunting field, but his character portrayal is perhaps the most notable attribute of the book. His characters are extremely real and give the reader the feeling that he has met them somewhere befor.

BELLE MEADOR.

Along Snake River.

THE POWDER BURNER. by Frank C. Robertson. Ives Washburn, Inc., New York. 302 pp. $2.

The town of Lorenzo was the toughest place in the northwest and Nick Mulvey was not only the biggest shot but the toughest man in it. He controlled the range up and down Snake river for 200 miles. Nobody knew how many cows he had, but they knew he sold a lot more than he owned.

All Steve Zachary knew about Lorenzo was that it was a paradise for mosquitoes—mosquitoes so big the natives said they had to chain the houses down to keep them from being carried away when they went to sleep. But before a night had passed Steve found himself mixed up in an affair that promised much more serious danger to his skin than insects. The foreman of the Triangle S was hurt and had to leave it to Steve to warn Elsie Stroud, half owner of the ranch, of the trouble to follow.

To meet the aristocrat Elsie was no easy job, surrounded as she was by a couple of crooked easterners trying to get her ranch away by every means at their command, and with killers on his own trail intent on keeping him out of their leader's affairs. But Steve kept up his good humor and until the shooting was over and Elsie safe again didn't sleep without his wits, and his hand in easy reach of his pistol belt.

This is the best western of the author's career. There's more speed and plot and good horse fun.

Girls' High Meets.

Plans are being made to create at Girls' High an ornamental fountain. It will be placed in the bank enclosing the front grounds and will have a fish pool at the base, Miss Jessie Muse, principal of Girls' High, told the P.-T. A. board at its recent session. Mrs. E. L. Anderson, president, presided at the meeting. Mrs. S. W. Burgess, chairman of school grounds, aims to make Girls' High grounds "the beauty spot of the city."

The design for the fountain has been worked out by Miss Katherine Comfort, head of the art department at Girls' High, and F. T. Zimmer, Atlanta sculptor. The project is to be completed by spring.

Another feature of the meeting was the tour of inspection of the school by the board, conducted by Miss Muse. One department shows an adequate banking system in operation, deposits ranging to $40 to $50 each banking day. Graduates from this department find places open to them in the leading Atlanta banks. The business training section is also able to place its best graduates as secretaries and stenographers.

Miss Clars Lee Cone is head of the home economics department, and with a staff of six assistants teaches the girls to design and make garments for themselves, and frequently other members of their families; also how to plan, prepare and serve nourishing meals, substantial lunches and party menus.

Other departments are strictly scholastic, and from them will come the cum laude and scholarship pupils. Girls prepared at Girls' High are eligible to the best colleges in the north and east.

To help finance the budget the P.-T. A. will sponsor a cooking school December 10, 11, 12 in the Georgia Power Company building.

A bridge party, given by seniors of Girls' High will take place November 15 in Rich's tea room. Many prizes will be given. Reservations may be made through any senior, or tickets may be purchased at Rich's on the afternoon of the party.

Canadian Pacific Marks 50th Year Of Aiding Dominion's Development

Fifty years ago Novembzer 7 in the presence of a small group of men an ordinary iron spike was driven into a railway tie at Craigellachie, high up in the Canadian Rockies, uniting two railway lines from east and west and completing Canada's first transcontinental line under the name of the Canadian Pacific Railway. By that event Canadian confederation became a physical fact and the Dominion of Canada started upon its path of national development.

Growth of the Canadian Pacific Railway in the intervening half century is a matter of history. Its expansion has mirrored the coming-of-age of Canada as branches of this first main line carried settlement and development into every quarter of the dominion, while ships carrying the company's flag have become regular visitors at world ports on every ocean.

Although notable in its consequences the driving of the last spike was a simple ceremony and the number in attendance was small. The event is described in Steel of Empire, the new history of the Canadian Pacific Railway by John Murray Gibbon.

Silver Spike Vetoed.

"Lord Landsdowne (then governor-general of Canada) had expected to be present at the driving of the last spike," Mr. Gibbon writes, "and had ordered a silver spike to be prepared and suitably mounted as a souvenir. But William Van Horne (American engineer who was then general manager of the company) was of the opinion that spikes of silver and gold were not so good as plain iron. He knew of too many bankrupt roads inaugurated with the driving of a golden spike to consider the more precious metal a good omen. And in his downright fashion he declared that anyone who came to see the driving of the last spike on the Canadian Pacific Railway must be connected with the railway or pay his way.

"So the precedent of the Union Pacific was not followed. There were no telegraph wires to carry the sound of the hammer across the continent, and no arrangement to fire salvos of artillery in Montreal or Vancouver. Nor, as had been arranged at the driving of the golden spike on the Northern Pacific two years before, were any Indian chiefs brought in formally to cede their hunting grounds to the great chiefs of the Canadian Pacific to the accompanying blare of a brass band."

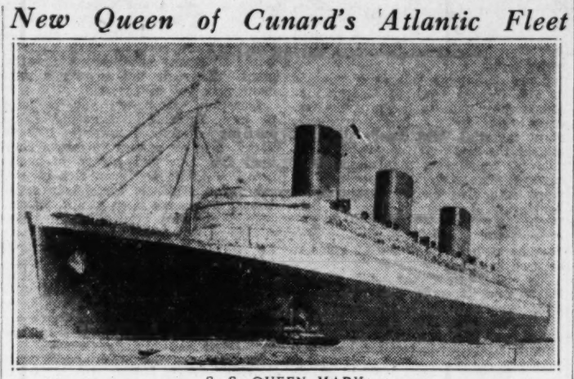

Small Group Present.

The place chosen for the ceremony was on the Eagle Pass, discovered 20 years before by Walter Moberly. Present were Donald A. Smith, Van Horne, Sandford Flemnig, Major A. B. Rogers, Yankee chief engineer of the mountain division; Henry I. Cambie, one of the government engineers on the job; George R. Harris, of Boston, a director; Tom Wilson, Major Rogers' guide; Dugald McKenzie, locomotive engineer, and half a dozen other officers of the road, and the construction gang. Major Rogers himself held the tie in position. After Donald Smith had driven home the spike the silence remained unbroken for a moment or two. Then a spontaneous cheer awoke the echoes of Craigellachie.

In driving the spike, Smith struck it first a glancing blow so that the head was turned over. Ready for the emergency, Roadmaster F. P. Brothers yanked out the twisted spike and replaced it with another. This time Smith took no chances and drove it with a succession of careful taps.

The discarded spike was recovered and split into thin strips which were mounted with diamonds and presented to the ladies who were closely connected with the party, but not present. When other ladies felt piqued, the resourceful Donald A. secured another iron spike and made similar souvenirs, slightly larger, however, to distinguish them. The actual spike was removed by Roadmaster Brothers to forestall souvenir hunters and afterwards presented to the present incumbent of the presidential chair, Sir Edward Beatty.

New Queen of Cunard's Atlantic Fleet

S. S. QUEEN MARY.

Special South American Cruise Slated From New York in January

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Stimulated by reduced steamship rates and the uncertain conditions in Europe, the winter call to South America continues to draw attention from steamship and travel organizations. Supplementing its seventeenth annual South American tour, the American Express Company, in co-operation with the Grace Line, this week announced a special South American itinerary, scheduled to leave New York January 25 on the S. S. Santa Barbara.

From the ports of the Canal Zone the cruise will head to Guayaquil, Ecuador, where a 30-mile water journey up the jungle-bordered Guayas river to the Panama hat capital of Guayaquil, will be made. Following the visits to Callao-Lima and Mollendo, Peru, the Chilean ports of call will be ushered in through the diversified northern cities of Arica, Iquique, Tocopilla, Antofagasta and Chanaral, renowned for their copper and nitrate exploitations. The cruise will arrive in the height of the seashore season, and will give glimpses of fashionable Chilean life, as seen at Vina del Mar. This famous resort, with its beaches, race track and municipal casinos, extends beyond the rich suburban district of Valparaiso, and is known as the Monte Carlo of South America.

Santiago de Chile, noted for its spontaneous gaiety, will present another capital of South Americans at play. The race clubs of the Hopico and the Hippodrome draw the high and low of the city and the surrounding country. The cosmopolitan streets are lined with smart French shops and perfume stalls. At noon when the cannon atop Santa Lucia Hill booms the hour of noon, fashionable promenaders begin their stroll along the Calle Ahumada, taking the glorious morning sun of Chile. The itineraries of Valparaiso and Santiago are planned to allow an intimate "close-up" of the mid-winter resort activities, as shown in the famed pleasure-loving capitals.

Arriving at Osorno, gateway to the Chilean lakes region, on February 17, the automobile tours to Lake Llanquihue and the Emerald Chain begin the introduction to Chile's "Wonderland," which will be linked by special steamer and train journeys through the Argentine National parks. From Bariloche, Buenos Aires will be reached by a scenic ride across the cattle-raising regions of Patagonia. The sojourn in the southern metropolis will include visits to "El Tigre", Montevideo, and the seaside resorts of Pocitos, Hamirez and Carrasco. Sao Paulo, Rio de Janeiro and the Port of Spain are listed on the homeward itinerary. The northbound voyage will be in co-operation with the Furness and Munson Steamship Lines, where special facilities have been arranged on the S. S. Southern Prince from Buenos Aires, and the S. S. Western World from Rio de Janeiro. The tour will arrive in New York March 26 from Bermuda.

Holland-America Line Contracts For 33,000-Ton Express Liner

NEW YORK, November 9.—F. W. R. Wierdsma, New York manager of the Holland-America line, disclosed today the complete details of the new express liner which has just been commissioned to be built by Netherlands firms to take its place, on completion, as the flagship of the company.

After prolonged negotiations in Holland, an agreement has been reached with the Holland-America Line, five Netherlands shipyards, and representatives of labor organizations to build the new ship in the Netherlands. The announcement, given out by the minister of commerce, Professor Dr. Gelissen, immediately caused general rejoicing, particularly in Rotterdam and Flushing where flags were run up on the town halls.

Shipping men and workmen everywhere in Holland know that the estimated wages of $3,500,000 will go to Holland home industries and home workmen.

The new express liner will be 33,000 gross tons, accommodate over 1,300 passengers in various classes, and show an overall length of 751.6 feet, breadth 88 feet, and the depth from B deck 55 feet. Two sets of turbines will generate 34,000 horsepower. The hull will be streamlined and the funnels so modeled as to minimize wind resistance.

There will be 10 decks with the passenger accommodations divided into three classes, embracing 550 first class, 530 tourist and 230 third class. Nearly all first-class accommodations will have private baths or shower baths and toilets. In the first class, a Ritz-Carlton restaurant is planned with a night club on the upper promenade deck. The dining room will be built in the middle, instead of over the full width of the steamer, and there will be a theater for moving pictures, theatrical performances and lectures.

TOURIST INQUIRIES GAIN AT ORLANDO

40 Per Cent Increase in Requests for Information Presages Bumper Crop.

ORLANDO, Fla., Nov. 9.—Advance reservations and a flood of early inquiries from the north have given this winter resort city, situated in the heart of Florida on the Orange Blossom trail, reasons to prepare itself to welcome a bumper crop of visitors this season.

Inquiries from the north about Orlando are 40 per cent more numerous at this time than they were a year ago, according to DeWitt Miller, president of Orlando's Chamber of Commerce.

Building permit figures tower over those of last year at this point, picturing augmented accommodations for the visitors. Real estate brokers report a heavier demand for living accommodations and a boom in the trading area of the city can be seen in the many new business buildings erected.

Orlando this winter is offering its winter visitors increased recreation and entertainment in theater plays, concerts, a large sports program, art exhibits, air meets, public addresses by nationally known figures, a fair, major league exhibition of baseball games and many other attractions.

The enlarged sports program for the city will be inaugurated December 5-7 with the new Orlando $2,000 open golf championship. Heading the field of entries into this event will be Sam Parks Jr., of Pittsburgh, Pa., reigning national open champion.

Other events listed on the expanded winter schedule include the Orlando invitation men's doubles tennis tournament, date not yet set; Orlando field trials, December 3 to 5; Orlando Olympic Stars Aquatic meet, January 4 and 5; Orlando men's amateur golf tournament, January 9 to 12; Orlando tennis championships, January 14 to 18, and the Orlando Yacht Club regatta, tentatively set for early January.

ANGLERS' UTOPIA FOR ATLANTIC CITY

Artificial Feeding Ground To Be Created for Coastal Fish.

ATLANTIC CITY, Nov. 9.—Plans for building a first-class fishing bank have been formulated and are being put into immediate action by the harbor committee of the Atlantic City Chamber of Commerce.

This bank will begin eight miles off the Atlantic City coast with a width of one mile and extending four miles seaward. It is to be constructed of old bricks, cement, boats and auto bodies. These are sunk on the sandy floor of the ocean, the purpose being to provide a breeding ground for the sea life that cling to hard surfaces and are the food of many species of migratory coastal fish. Final consent of the War Department is expected soon.

Thomas D. Green, of New York, president of the American Hotel Men's Association, announced that the association's convention which will meet here November 13-16 promises to be the greatest ever held.

A blast of dynamite, blowing a building to bits before a crowd of 5,000 interested spectators, launched New Jersey's first slum clearance project in Atlantic City. Guest speakers at the ceremony were Charles E. Pychon, assistant director of the housing division of the FHA; Governor Harold G. Hoffman, of New Jersey, and Mayor C. D. White, of Atlantic City. It was stated that 1366 people would be given work and that $1,500,000 would be spent in erecting a community of model homes and apartments.

The usual Armistice Day crowds will be swelled by many thousands because of the state teachers' convention which will meet in the convention hall November 8-11. More than 6,000 are expected.

With the small game hunting season in full swing, gunners are finding the South Jersey woods, with Atlantic City as headquarters, a hunters' paradise. The state has restocked the upland sections with 30,000 pheasants, 6,000 quail and 30,000 rabbits.

TOURISTS SOUGHT IN SOUTH AMERICA

Luxurious Hotels and Low Rates Making Bid for Popular Favor.

In recognition of the increasing interest of travelers in its offerings, South America is building luxurious hotels, inaugurating new rail and airlines, introducing new Pullman equipment, and making a real bid for the tourist trade. Giving impetus to this trend are the favorable rates of exchange, particularly in Peru and Chile, and also the fact that these republics are naturally equipped to offer travelers every attraction provided by the more frequently visited and perhaps better known travel fields.

In the lake district of Chile and Argentina a modern hotel is under construction at Laguna Frias, and another is to be built at Bariloche. Plans are under way for the building of a fine new 300-room hotel to join the dozen or more which now welcome guests to Santiago. In Vina del Mar, just outside of Valparaiso, there has been opened a new hotel. The O'Higgins (pronounced O'Heegins), which ranks with the best.

The travel dollar will go extremely far in Peru and Chile. In the latter the dollar is now worth about 25 1-2 pesos. In the Grand hotel at Vina del Mar, the Biarritz of the New World, a single room with bath may be obtained for about $1.20 per day; in the Crillon, most exclusive hotel in Chile's capital, Santiago, a single room and bath costs about $2.30. Meals are generally served a la carte, averaging about 60 cents for an excellent meal.

In addition to modern hotels there are good French, German, English and American boarding houses where room and board may be obtained for about $16 a week. If one desires to remain in Chile, furnished apartments may be rented with dining room, drawing room, kitchen, bathroom and two bedrooms at $60 per month.

ENVOYS AT OPENING OF MIAMI BILTMORE

Gala Armistice Celebration Is Combined With Season's First Formal Dance.

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 9.—Diplomatic representatives of Great Britain, France, Cuba, Venezuela, Haiti, and other Pan-American countries will lend an international atmosphere to the throngs attending the opening tonight of the Miami Biltmore, where southern society is combining the first formal dinner-dance of the season with a gala Armistice celebration.

Closely following the opening event will be a diversity of social and sports activity with high interest centering on the Thanksgiving golf championship, sponsored by Colonel Henry L. Doherty, November 25 to 29 at the Miami Biltmore Country Club, Coral Gables unit of the Florida Year-Round Clubs.

While the Thanksgiving golf match gives impetus to a round of gayety in honor of visiting players, the event will serve as the initial feature of the program for the Year-Round Clubs.

Meanwhile, the resort anticipates the opening of the Roney Plaza, December 10, a date ushering in events that include the Miami Biltmore $10,000 open golf championship; December 15 to 18, the Grace Doherty Christmas party, the first of a series of aquatic carnivals, and the Miami Biltmore Olympic stars' meet, December 29 to 31. Outstanding stars of the swimming and diving world will appear in the latter event, which was also a feature of last year's program.

MAIDEN VOYAGE SET FOR NEW CUNARDER

"Queen Mary" To Sail May 27 of Next Year; Reservations Exceed Capacity.

The new Cunard White Star superliner, Queen Mary, will sail on Wednesday, May 27, next year from Southampton on her maiden voyage across the Atlantic. The ship, which will stop en route at Cherbourg, is due to arrive in New York on Monday, June 1.

On her first visit to New York, the Queen Mary will stay in port five days, sailing eastbound on Friday, June 5. This will represent a stay of two days longer than the big ship will ordinarily make in order to allow a greater amount of time for various functions marking her arrival for the first time and for general inspection by the public.

Following the initial trip, the Queen Mary will make regular schedule sailings from New York and from Southampton and Cherbourg on alternate Wednesdays. The liner will maintain a year-round service making the complete round trip trans-Atlantic every two weeks including stays in port.

Because of her increased speed and regularity of turn-around the Queen Mary during the busy months of June, July and August will be able to make six round trip express sailings.

Applications for accommodations are already being received for the second and third voyages, although the rates for the three classes which the ship will carry have not yet been finally set. The applicants for the maiden voyage in each direction are already in excess of capacity.

S. S. BREMEN TO MAKE NEW YEAR'S CRUISE

Last year it was the Europa which deviated from the regular trans-Atlantic run to make an incursion into the cruise field with a four-day voyage to Nassau, and this year her famous sistership, the Breman, follows suit and makes her debut in pleasure travel by essaying a five-day cruise to Bermuda and Nassau over the New Year holiday period.

The Bremen will leave New York on December 27 to call at Bermuda on the 29th and Nassau on the 31st, with her return to the city city scheduled for January 2.

The Bremen will be the only ship making a short New Year's cruise call at both Bermuda and Nassau, her famous speed permitting her to make the voyage with the utmost of ease. After her departure from Nassau, the New Year will be ushered in at sea with the traditional merry-making.

Selection of Historic Landmarks Interest D. A. R.'s and Georgians

By Mrs. John T. Dorsey, of Marietta, State D. A. R. Editor.

Mrs. J. L. Beeson, state historian, sends the following letter to chapter regents and historians: Georgians are called upon to assist Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Georgia Tech, and Miss Ruth Blair, state historian, in selecting historic places in the state where suitable memorial tablets may be erected. The appeal for advice from historical-minded Georgians followed receipt of an award of $13,000 from the WPA to finance the work of making these memorial tablets in the foundry at Georgia Tech. Students will be employed for the work under the direction of the Georgia Tech faculty. The fund will provide more than 100 elaborate granite markers.

Dr. Brittain said that Georgians in any part of the state are urged to write in if they know of any unmarked places of this type. Georgia Tech will be glad to furnish the markers. However, the committee reserves the right to limit the markers for those places of real historic value. The site of Jeff Davis' capture, the place where John Wesley preached and scenes of colonial events are cited as the type of places to be selected for the markers. Write an accurate history of the most historic spot or spots in your community and send to Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Georgia Tech, and to Miss Ruth Blair, state historian.

It is interesting to note that Button Gwinnett Chapter recently unveiled their third marker for Revolutionary soldiers. The location of the grave of Shadrack Rowe and its authenticity was established by Miss Martha Lou Houston. Mrs. T. D. Power was in charge of the program and arrangements. Polly Barfield and George Doles, great, great, great, great niece and nephew of the soldier, unveiled the marker and Joe Hooten and Mildred Askew, also descendants, were flower bearers. Others taking part were Dr. Osgood F. Cook, Mrs. T. D. Power, Dr. Norman Lovein, Clinton Moon. The exercises were attended by relatives of the soldier now living in Columbus, West Point and Opelika, Ala.

Mrs. C. H. Leavy, state chairman of Ellis Island committee, sends the following message to chapter regents:

As chapters are actively engaged in planning their work for the year, I sincerely hope the splendid humanitarian activities being conducted at Ellis island will not be overlooked in your programs. This work of the D. A. R. has been called the "home and foreign missionary spirit of our society," and merits the help and consideration of all true members. Those detained at Ellis island are problem cases and are often there, not only for weeks but months, before they are able to receive their legal adjustments. There he waits, sometimes visited by his friends and relatives if he has them, but usually alone, worrying and distracted. Then in the large detention room our salaried worker appears, dressed in white, with a large basket on her arm, filled with wool and other material. He watches as the crowd of men gather around her with outstretched hands as she gives them material to make into garments for themselves or their loved ones. She gives them bright colored wool with a sweater frame and sits down to show him how to make one. The loneliness disappears and the thrill of achievement takes its place.

The same feeling is experienced by those being held for deportation. They are all human beings suffering from the most deplorable of all conditions—loneliness—leaving home and friends in both cases. It takes pounds and pounds of wool to keep these people busy, and yards and yards of cotton cloth and denim which they make into dresses, shirts, trousers and underwear for themselves. And this is where all chapters may be of untold help to these pathetic people, by sending boxes containing wool of any kind or color; pearl cotton No. 3 and No. 5 in colors; shirting in 3-yard lengths; and denim and khaki for trousers and jackets. We are asked to concentrate on material for men, as the women are fairly well provided for. And all boxes should be carefully packed and plainly marked with name and address of sender and chapter on outside, and on an enclosed slip, and send parcels post paid to Mrs. Robert E. Merwin, D. A. R. Social Service Department, Ellis Island, New York Harbor, N. Y.

"The D. A. R. is also giving occupational therapy to the patients in the U. S. Marine hospital on Ellis island, when in January, ending the first year of extended service, 205 medical patients had been cared for, 76 neurological cases, 24 surgical cases and 42 tubercular, during that period. The special Ellis island moving picture depicts the work there in action, and requires 35 minutes for showing, and is free to chapters, except for transportation, which must be insured parcel post, and may be obtained from the national chairman, Mrs. Robert E. Merwin, 796 Carroll Street, Brooklyn, N. Y. I have explained at length the work being accomplished at Ellis island, hoping to enlist your special interest, to the end that each chapter in Georgia will contribute the 3 cents per capita tax (on honor roll requirement) and forward at least one box of material during the year. May I have your wholehearted co-operation in the Ellis island work, with a report from each chapter that Georgia may be reported as 100 per cent at the next state conference?"

All articles to be published in the D. A. R. column must be sent to the Editor, not to Mrs. Stafford, as she sends them to the Editor. This delays the articles. After the D. A. R. column is closed on Wednesday it cannot be opened for any message unless it is an important message from the state regent. This will be put at the head of the column.

URBAN LEAGUE WEEKLY BULLETIN

By JESSE O. THOMAS.

At a recent meeting of the Atlanta Community Chest organization committee, J. B. Blayton, C. P. A., president of the Atlanta Negro Chamber of Commerce, executive vice president of the Citizens Trust Company, and professor of accounting at Atlanta University, was named chairman of the colored division. His election to this office is an expression of confidence in his ability as a leader in the business and educational fields among his people. Already he has organized the various administrative and operating committees which will conduct a campaign for Chest funds among colored people. The enthusiasm with which these committees are entering upon their tasks assures for the chairman and the Chest officials generally, a successful campaign. It is hoped and believed that the 1935 efforts will be more productive of results than any campaign among colored people in recent years.

It is recognized that the ratio of the needy among the colored is much higher than that among other elements of Atlanta's population. It is also recognized that the colored people receive proportionately more than white agencies from Chest funds, when the amounts of contributions of both groups are considered. It is pointed out, however, that in proportion to their means, their contributions are considerably higher than that of members of other groups. Investigation shows that Chest funds among colored agencies are managed most efficiently and that there are relatively more benefits obtained per dollar raised among these people than among any other groups.

Already Contribute Indirectly.

The chairman has declared his determination to make a better showing for the colored division this year than ever before. He makes the statement, however, that colored people already make heavy contributions to the Chest by reason of reduced incomes. That is to say, their wages are so low as to leave in the hands of their employers large sums for Chest and other purposes.

He is asking his committee to overlook this wage and living standard differential and do their best to co-operate fully and whole-heartedly with other campaign units. He realizes that the Atlanta Community Chest, more than any other agency in the city, is an expression of Christianity and brotherhood. He argues that this splendid relationship and co-operation between the white and black races should be encouraged in every way. He solicits the co-operation of white persons who employ colored help to the end that such employes may be urged and enabled to contribute generously to the 1935 Chest campaign.

Memorial Program.

The office of education will sponsor its sixth annual radio program during American Education Week on the education of negroes, November 14 from 2 to 2:45 p. m., central standard time, and from 3 to 3:45 p. m., eastern standard time. The program this year is a memorial to the contribution made to education throughout the world by Dr. Booker T. Washington.

United States commissioner of education, Dr. J. W. Studebaker, will speak briefly, and the main address will be given by Dr. Frederick D. Patterson, the recently inaugurated president of Tuskegee Institute. The institute choir will render the music. The National Association of Teachers in Colored Schools will also be represented on the program.

Garden Center Plans Focus the Interest Of Garden Lovers

James Davey, of the Davey Tree Expert Company, Kent, Ohio, lectured last week at the Garden Center, at Rich's, Inc., which was interesting and instructive. His lecture, titled "Trees of the World," featured slides of New Zealand, particularly interesting in variety and coloring. Pictures of the trees that grow close to the salt water along the shore filled with blossoms of flame and saffron were studies in color and effect. Mr. Davey is anxious to have these trees planted along the coastal country, particularly in North and South Carolina and Georgia. These trees are not available for commercial purposes at present, but he has secured seeds from which he hopes to win success. Mr. Davey was accompanied to Atlanta by Mrs. Davey, a charming and attractive woman.

The garden division of Decatur Woman's Club featured potpourris at the Garden Center on November 7. This almost-forgotten art created interest and the one featured was made from an old garden in Augusta, in 1860. The rose jar was brought from France a few years previous and each momentous occasion has been celebrated through the years in the memories of Mrs. Hudson's family connections, by the placing of one petal from the bouquet used on these special occasions. The owner of this potpourri is Mrs. W. Guy Hudson, chairman of the garden division of the Decatur Woman's Club. Directions for making a potpourri are, first, be sure to choose roses in the full perfection of their bloom and be sure there is no dew on the leaves. Let leaves dry in a dry, shady place. Procure a two-quart earthen jar and put in a layer of rose leaves two inches deep, sprinkle over with a handful of fine salt and repeat from day to day until the jar is full. Let stand one week after being filled with cover on. Turn out in a large enamel pan and add one-half ounce rose powder, one-half ounce heliotrope powder, one teaspoon ground mace, one-half teaspoon cinnamon, one-half teaspoon cloves, four drops oil of roses, 10 drops oil of chiris, 20 drops oil of eucalyptus, 10 drops oil of geranium and two drams of alcohol. Mix well and pack into small jars that may be tightly covered. Let stand for two weeks, and it is then ready for use and kill keep for years. In order that this may last for generations, twice a year put three drops of pure alcohol to keep it moist.

Visitors at the Garden Center were: Mrs. C. H. Martin, Gainesville, Ga.; Miss Annie Jackson, Carrollton, Ga.; Mrs. J. M. McMillan, Miss Lois McMillan, Palmetto, Ga.; Miss M. McPhutus, Raleigh, N. C.; Mrs. Robert Campbell, Cave Springs, Ga., and Mrs. C. D. Young, Gainesville.

Mrs. Samuel Inman held a meeting of the constitution and by-laws committee at the Garden Center on Wednesday. Tentative by-laws were drawn up, to be passed on at the meeting of the board of directors on December 2. A luncheon was given in Rich's tea room in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Davey and Mrs. Arthur Tufts met with the roadside committee.

The Garden Center was filled with flowers with chrysanthemums predominating in arrangements and many new varieties were exhibited. Mrs. Arthur Tufts exhibited an arrangement of tithonias, autumn leaves and berries.

Mrs. Hudson brought a message of beauty to the club which she called the "Heritage of a Garden," which inspired a deeper sense of gratitude for gardens and a richer appreciation of the benefits that gardening produces.

Tea was served by the hostess and Mrs. Lucien Harris Jr. and the flower arrangements brought by members were judged by Mrs. Hudson.

Mrs. Ben S. Forkner received first place for a white pottery container of exquisite snapdragons; Mrs. Edward L. Reforestation and Fire Prevention Appeal Made by State Garden Club

By Mrs. Ed Dorsey Jr., of Athens, Publicity Chairman for Garden Club of Georgia.

With the greatly increased interest in reforestation and fire prevention which comes at this time of the year, an urgent appeal is made to every good citizen of our state that they cooperate with the garden clubs of Georgia in their efforts to conserve the natural beauty and wild life of Georgia. With proper conservation, preservation of the natural resources and protection of natural beauty spots of the state, Georgia will once more become the paradise it once was.

With reference to conservation Dr. Charles Herty, nationally known chemist of Savannah and New York, has the following to say: "In the midst of so much talk about the commercial aspects of conservation of our pine forests, it is a genuine relief to think for a moment of the sweet side of things and remember the beauty of the wild flowers in our woods which can add so much happiness to our lives.

"The contrast between a trip through unburned woods with their charm in the rich assortment of wild flowers which nature provides, and another where fire has left only ashes and smoldering stumps, leads one to wonder how such despoilation of our earth covering can be wilfully brought about.

"We spend thousands of dollars in advertising to attract tourists to our section, a veritable mine of wealth, and too often deliberately induct them into our state home with the front yard a perfect mess of woods fires and constant danger to their lives as they motor along our excellent highways which, unfortunately, are lined with cattle and so beclouded with the smoke of woods fires. To remedy these conditions is the work of every citizen."

Georgia Garden Club President Praises The Constitution's Recent Garden School

Mrs. T. H. McHatton, of Athens, president of the Garden Club of Georgia, introduced Mrs. Fletcher Pearson Crown to the vast audience attending the recent school held at the Atlanta Woman's Club, under the auspices of The Constitution. The school was directed by Mrs. Crown, who is an acknowledged authority on horticulture.

The four-day sessions marked the first time that a garden school has ever been launched under the sponsorship of an Atlanta newspaper. In her letter addressed to the editor of The Constitution, Mrs. McHatton extended her congratulation and expressed her opinion of the results of the important undertaking. Her complimentary letter is published herewith:

"Please let me congratulate The Constitution and Mrs. Crown on the great success of the garden school. You should feel much pride and satisfaction. Literally it left nothing to be desired.

"The weather was perfect for gardeners and the huge crowd which daily filled the auditorium to capacity, was the most attentive, appreciative and enthusiastic of audiences.

"The echoes from the school will be heard far and long and bring in their wake, a more beautiful and greater Atlanta."

She talked at the welcome dinner at the Woman's Club the first evening.

'You, Your Garden' Will Be Subject Of Miss Harrison

Miss Edith Harrison, landscape architect, will lecture at the First Presbyterian church on November 15, at 3:30 o'clock, on the subject of "You and Your Garden." Of special interest will be the display of broad-leaved evergreens, perennials and annuals. Each group will be introduced separately and discussed, as to their best uses in the garden and around the foundation of the house. She will also talk on the importance of garden design.

Miss Harrison is a graduate of the Lowthorpe School of Landscape Architecture, Groton, Mass., and received her B. S degree at Simmons College, Boston, Mass. She has an office of landscape architecture with Constance Draper, at the planning center, 17 Alexander street, and is doing noteworthy work throughout Atlanta and surrounding towns. Her non-technical manner of speaking makes her lectures doubly interesting. She has talked before the outstanding Garden Clubs of Atlanta, and at the Garden Center.

Circle No. 2 of the First Presbyterian church, of which Mrs. E. S. Papy, is chairman, is sponsoring the garden lecture. A silver offering will be taken at the door, and an informal tea will be given in Miss Harrison's honor after the talk.

Conservation Talks Feature Meeting Of Rose Garden Club

Rose Garden Club met Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Doll Ballard, on Peachtree road, with Mesdames Charles Marshall and Frank Stevens as co-hostesses. It has been the annual custom of the club to donate to the Community Chest, and in view of the increased quota and acute need this year, a larger donation was voted to be sent.

Since November has been adopted by the Garden Club of Georgia as conservation month, the program featured talks by members on native plant material. Mrs. Cosby Swanson told of the many native shrubs available for foundation plantings and in gardens. The state of Georgia is divided into five main physiographic provinces, Atlanta being in the Piedmont section, which has a wealth of material available. Mrs. Frank Stevens gave a list of native vines to be used in gardens.

To demonstrate the use of fall leaves and grasses in home decoration, arrangements were made by Mesdames Fleming Law, Hayden Jones and William Dunn to further stimulate interest in conservation, particularly of the hollies and other greens which are so ruthlessly cut at Christmas time. The club members will bring suggestions for Christmas decorations to the December meeting. Table decorations, mantel arrangements, door wreaths, swags and many other clever ideas will be presented without the use of holly.

A buffet luncheon was served by the hostesses from an exquisitely appointed table, featuring a tiered birthday cake in honor of the club's seventh birthday.

Questions and Answers

By Mrs. Fletcher Pearson Crown, of Decatur, Ga.

Question: What condition should regal lilies be in when taken up? Should stalk be entirely dead? Answer: I see no reason for taking them up unless you decide to move them to another location or after being several years planted, to be divided. In either case I should prefer the fall for this work. Dig, divide, and replant at once as you would treat any other green, growing plant. They do not require a dormant rest out of the soil.

Question: How can you be sure to have successful heavenly blue morning glories? Answer: I have found them quite easy to grow. They need full sun and plenty of moisture. A dahlia fertilizer, rich in potash and phosphorus would help resist disease and make more prolific bloom. Should chewing insects attack them spray with arsenate of lead. At present mine are beautiful, covered with intensely blue flowers, which stay open on cool days. In fact I have taken some off of a trellis and even though discarded on the compost heap and without roots they are bravely opening day after day, the buds that had already formed.

Question: Are outdoor budded roses more satisfactory than those budded in greenhouses? Answer: I have always preferred to plant two-year-old field grown roses. These have been propagated for out-of-door planting.

Question: When do we take up spider lily bulbs? Answer: If by spider lily you mean the nerine lily which blooms without foliage from August until October you take them up after the foliage dies down about the first of June.

Question: What is a good spray for evergreen shrubbery? Answer: That depends entirely on what the trouble is. For scale we use an oil spray during the winter. Should bagworms or other pests begin eating the foliage use arsenate of lead. And if red spider is making your pyracantha or other evergreens unsightly we use tobacco in some form, or a kerosene emulsion. Please address all questions to Mrs. Fletcher Pearson Crown, Decatur, Ga.

Mr. and Mrs. Bryson Observe Anniversary.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Nov. 9.—Fifty years of wedded life will be observed Monday by one of Augusta's most beloved and prominent couples, Mr. and Mrs. Harper Campbell Bryson Sr. when they will keep "open house" at their home on Walton Way. At the same time Mrs. Bryson's sixty-ninth birthday will be observed.

Mr. Bryson and Miss Minnie Mozella Averett were married at a quiet ceremony November 11, 1885, the Rev. D. W. Marks officiating, at the home of the bride's paternal grandparents, the late Mr. and Mrs. William Averett, near Augusta. Of those present, other than the couple, but two are living. These are Professor Eugene Marks, of Augusta, and the former Miss Alice Averett, now Mrs. Pat Autrey, of Griffin.

Four sons were born of the union, two dying in early youth. The survivors are Captain Edward Bryson, of Augusta, and Harper C. Bryson Jr., of Atlanta. They, with the grandchildren, Miss Mozelle Bryson, of Atlanta; Richard C. Bryson, of LaGrange; Edward Bryson II and Kenneth S. Bryson, of Augusta, will have a place in the receiving line Monday evening. Mr. Bryson was retired April 1935, after 47 years' continuous service as postal supervisor.

Mrs. Bryson is known throughout the state for her active work in the King's Daughters, holding the office of president of the City Union. She is also president of the Children's Hospital Association, and only a short while ago a tablet dedicating a wing of the hospital to Mrs. Bryson for her years of arduous efforts in the interest of the institution was unveiled.

Miss Dixon Weds B. W. Sinclair

WOODBURY, Ga., Nov. 9.—The marriage of Miss Virginia Dare Dixon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Karl Dixon, to Brownlow Wilson Sinclair, of Waverly Hall, was solemnized Sunday evening at the home of the bride's parents. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. L. Sinclair, father of the groom.

A program of nuptial music was rendered by Miss Annie Wilburn, of Woodbury, who was accompanied on the violin by Steve Owen Jr., of Woodbury. Joseph Freeman, of Greenville, sang "At Dawning" and "Because." The living room, where the ceremony took place, was decorated with ferns and palms and floor baskets of yellow and white dahlias and yellow and white chrysanthemums effectively arranged to form a background for the floor candelabras, holding burning white tapers and rising from clusters of white chrysanthemums.

The candles were lighted by Miss Mabelle Gilbert, of Miami, Fla., and Miss Betty Alexander, of Macon. The matron of honor was Mrs. Joseph Freeman, of Greenville, and the maid of honor was Miss Josephine Langdon, of Woodbury, cousin of the bride. They were gowned alike in gold satin dresses and carried bouquets of Talisman roses, tied with gold and pink ribbons.

The bride was accompanied to the altar by her father, by whom she was given in marriage, and where they were joined by the bridegroom and his brother, Clyde Sinclair, who was his best man. Little Dan Grubb, nephew of the groom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan T. Grubb, of Manchester, was ringbearer.

The radiant beauty of the bride was enhanced by her wedding gown of silver mist satin, the skirt extending into a long train. Her bridal veil of tulle was caught to her hair in a halo effect. A note of sentiment was added, in the fact that the bride's veil was the one worn by Mrs. Arthur D. Jones, close friend of the bride's mother, at her own wedding 14 years ago. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception. The hosts were assisted in entertaining by Miss Julia Clark, of Greenville; Miss Caroline Ison, of Atlanta; Miss Wita Moreland and Miss Rose McRae, of Woodbury. The bride's book was kept by Mrs. Herbert Clay Smith, of Barnesville.

On next Saturday Miss Zachry will be honor guest at the bridge-luncheon to be given by Mrs. H. W. Finch at her home in Decatur and that evening Miss Zachry and her fiance will be complimented by Mrs. Richard Wright and Miss Ruth Kimball at a spaghetti supper. Yesterday, Mrs. C. W. Mr. and Mrs. Beers Given Farewell Party.

Among the interesting events of Saturday's calendar was the cocktail party at which Mr. and Mrs. Norman Cooledge entertained a group of 50 friends in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Beers, who will leave Tuesday to make their home in Norwalk, Conn. The party followed the Tech-Auburn football game and was given at the hosts' home on Huntington road.

A lovely arrangement of lavender chrysanthemums and pink rosebuds adorned the living room where the guests were received. In the sun parlor, yellow and bronze chrysanthemums were combined with brilliantly-tinted autumn foliage in effective arrangement. The table in the dining room was centered with a crystal bowl filled with long-stemmed red rosebuds.

For Miss Smith And Mr. Clarke.

In compliment to Miss Laura Payne Smith, whose marriage to Thomas Clarke will be a socially prominent event of November 23, was the party given last evening at the Piedmont Driving Club by Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Fisch.

Miss Walker Becomes Bride Of Temperance Sessoms Davis

The marriage of Miss Emily Walker, daughter of Mrs. Pressley Walker, to Temperance Sessoms Davis was solemnized yesterday morning at 11:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother on The Prado in Ansley Park. The ceremony was performed by the bride's cousin, Rev. John Moore Walker, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal church, in the presence of relatives and close friends.

The home was artistically decorated with ferns, palms and yellow and white chrysanthemums. The improvised altar in the living room was a stately arrangement of palms, ferns and candelabra bearing lighted white tapers. Music was furnished by Miss Ruth Dabney Smith, violinist, and Mrs. Holcomb Greene, pianist.

The lovely bride was given in marriage by her brother, William Walker, of Richmond, Va., and she was met at the altar by the groom and his brother, McKenney Janes Davis, who was best man. She was beautifully attired in a close-fitting gown of white satin with a yoke of rose point lace. The satin sleeves had tiny cuffs of rose point lace, and a row of tiny satin-covered buttons were fashioned down the back of the gown. Her veil was of lace and the skirt was made to form a flowing train from the skirt. She carried a bouquet of gardenias interspersed with lilies of the valley. The slender bride wore around her neck a tiny golden cross embossed with pearls and suspended upon a golden chain, to which much sentiment was attached, as it belonged to the bride's paternal grandmother, Mrs. Benjamin Pressley Walker, of Macon.

Mrs. Walker, mother of the bride, wore a becoming model of mauve crepe with a vest of pale lavender satin, and a shoulder spray of purple violets. Mrs. T. S. Davis Sr., mother of the groom, was attractively attired in black crepe trimmed with crystal buttons, and her flowers were a cluster of violets.

After the ceremony, Mrs. Walker honored Mr. and Mrs. Davis at a buffet wedding breakfast, to which intimate friends, relatives and out-of-town guests were invited. Little Miss Palmour Holmes kept the bride's book.

The bride and groom left for a short wedding trip and upon their return they will reside in Atlanta. Mrs. Davis wore a traveling outfit of brown Angora wool with faint threads of interwoven tan. The vest of the model was of costume velvet and her accessories were of matching brown.

Out-of-town guests included Mrs. T. S. Davis and Miss Peggy Davis, of Oakfield; Mr. and Mrs. McKenney Davis, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. William R. Walker and Miss Cora Walker, of Richmond, Va.; Mrs. Viola Napier and Miss Marian Napier, Mrs. Malcolm Ross and Misses Sarah and Martha Ross, all of Macon, and Mrs. John W. Blount and Miss Anne Blount, of Savannah.

Premiere of 'So Red the Rose' To Be Brilliant Event Thursday

The entrance to the Fox theater will resemble Grauman's Chinese theater in Hollywood, Cal., during one of its most brilliant premieres next Thursday evening when the management presents the magnificent film, "So Red the Rose," in a world premiere under the auspices of the Atlanta Better Films Committee. The film is the dramatization of Stark Young's popular novel of the old south, the adaptation having been made by Lawrence Stallings, former Georgian, in collaboration with Maxwell Anderson.

A gray-haired butler in colonial costume will open the doors of the guests' motors at the theater entrance and announce each member of the brilliant throng.

The guests will be received in the lobby by officers of the Better Films Committee, and presidents of the Atlanta chapters of U. D. C. The grinding of movie cameras will be heard as movies are made of the arrival of prominent guests.

The interior of the theater will be elaborate decorated with red roses in combination with Confederate flags, to carry out the ante-bellum atmosphere of the production. A specially constructed reproduction of an old southern mansion will provide a fitting background for the tableau presenting living characterizations of the players in the film.

E. E. Whitaker, manager of the Fox theater, will welcome the guests and present Governor Eugene Talmadge, who will outline the beautiful story of "So Red the Rose." The characters in the brilliant prologue will be introduced by loud speaker. Members of the Emory Glee Club will sing, and the Georgia Military Academy band will play a medley of old southern airs.

Miss Zella Brown, granddaughter and namesake of Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, who is chairman of the Board of Film Review, will take the leading role in the tableau, that of Valette. Others taking part will be Miss Jessie Hopkins as Mary Cherry; Mrs. Max E. Land as Sally; Albert Armstrong, as Duncan; J. W. Setze Jr., as Malcolm; Jimmy Tiller, as Middleton; Mrs. E. C. Bell, "Mammy;" Clarence Armstrong, William Veal, Dan Gibson, Edward and Alonzo Richardson, as Pendleton.

A number of important figures in the social and political life of the city have been invited as special guests at the premiere. A section will be reserved for members of the season's Debutante Club and their escorts who will also be special guests. A group of lovely Washington Seminary students, wearing old-fashioned costumes, will serve as ushers.

Miss Suttenfield and Mr. Candler Wed at Quiet Home Ceremony

Miss Pauline Suttenfield became the bride of Samuel Charles Candler at a quiet ceremony taking place yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock at the home of Bishop and Mrs. Warren A. Candler, on North Decatur road. Bishop Candler, the groom's great-uncle, performed the ceremony in the presence of members of the two families and a limited number of close friends of the bride and groom.

White and yellow chrysanthemums were used in effective arrangement to decorate the lower floor of the home. The ceremony was performed in the living room and in addition to the flowers, a background of palms and ferns were used.

Miss Virginia Suttenfield was maid of honor for her sister and wore rust crepe with brown accessories and carried talisman roses. Mrs. Margaret Howell was matron of honor and wore rust crepe with brown accessories and carried talisman roses.

The bride entered with her father, Warner Clyde Suttenfield, by whom she was given in marriage, and they were met by the groom and his brother, John H. Candler, who was best man. Her brunette beauty was enhanced by her model of olive green crepe combined with satin and trimmed in silver metal clips. Completing the ensemble was a wool coat of green, trimmed in blue fox. Her hat was a small model of green suede and she wore a cluster of orchids.

Miss Mary Ann Wesley Weds Mr. Lyman at Home Ceremony

A marriage of impressive beauty and sentiment was that of Miss Mary Ann Wesley and Osman Prouse Lyman Jr., which was solemnized yesterday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's aunts, Misses Wesley, on West Peachtree street. Dr. W. W. Memminger performed the ceremony. A program of appropriate music was rendered by Miss Ruby Baker.

The lower floor of the home was beautifully decorated with yellow chrysanthemums, while the parlor, the room in which the ceremony was performed, was banked with palms forming an improvised altar before the mantel with tall baskets of white chrysanthemums and lilies and candelabra of white tapers. The bridal party descended the stairs through the reception hall into the parlor.

The maid of honor was Miss Janis Richards and Miss Eula Miller was bridesmaid. They wore gowns fashioned alike of grape crystal velvet with matching hats made of bands of velvet and tulle. The gowns were made with fullness falling from a yoke extending into elbow-length sleeves, the floor-length skirts featuring a long tunic effect. They carried bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums tied with lavendar and silver ribbons.

The best man was Ralph Buxton Cole Jr., of Washington, D. C., and the groomsmen were Harry Overton, of Sylvester, Ga., and James Stroud, of McDonough, Ga.

Lovely Bride.

The blonde beauty of the bride was accentuated by her wedding gown of old ivory satin, fashioned along princess lines with an overskirt falling into a graceful train. The sleeves of the gown were of Duchess lace, having been used on the wedding gown of the bride's mother. The veil of exquisite lace and filmy tulle was caught to her hair with a band of pearls to a cap of lace, the tulle extending into a face veil. Her bouquet was of bride's roses and valley lilies interspersed with orchids. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Carl Wesley.

Following the ceremony Mrs. Carl Wesley and Misses Bannie, Emma and Rusha Wesley entertained at a reception. Assisting in receiving the guests with the hostesses was Mrs. O. P. Lyman Sr., mother of the groom.

Mrs. Wesley wore a model of sapphire crystal velvet trimmed with silver metal cloth with a bouquet of sweetheart roses and valley lilies. Mrs. Lyman, mother of the bridegroom, wore a gown of black chiffon velvet and a shoulder bouquet of sweetheart roses and valley lilies.

Colonel and Mrs. Bailey To Give Annual Party for Adjutant Generals

By Sally Forth.

TIME has rolled around for Colonel and Mrs. Mart Bailey's party that they give each year as a compliment to the national guard adjutant generals of the fourth corps area. The distinguished visitors will assemble at the Bailey residence on Peachtree street at 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon after their conference here with high army officials.

The hosts have invited some of society's most attractive feminine members to meet the adjutants general who represent eight southern states in national guard circles. A unique custom established at these yearly parties for which the hosts are noted, is that guests include wives of uninvited husbands and husbands of uninvited wives. In other words, the party permits a brief marital holiday for husbands and wives. But Sally suggests that the uninvited husbands and wives stage a similar celebration and have an opposition party.

Distinguished honor guests at this muchly anticipated party include General John C. Persons, General John C. Coleman, Colonel Robert L. Spragins and Colonel John T. Moore, of Alabama; General Albert H. Blanding, General Vivian Collins, Colonel Jacob H. Spengler and Colonel John L. Jenkins, of Florida; General Lindley Camp, General Henry D. Russell, Colonel Torrey B. Maghee, Colonel James H. Skelton, Major Robert K. Whitson and Major Miller G. White, of Georgia; General Raymond H. Fleming, Colonel Fernand H. Gouaux and Colonel Walter S. Fulton, of Louisiana; Colonel B. F. McClellen and Colonel Henry J. Dolton, of Mississippi; General John Van B. Metts and Colonel Gordon Smith, of North Carolina; General James C. Dozier and Colonel John F. Moore, of South Carolina; General Joseph H. Ballew, Colonel Walter H. Hyde and Colonel J. Frank Richmond, of Tennessee.

Officers from Fort McPherson, prominently connected with national guard affairs, who will attend Colonel and Mrs. Bailey's party will be General Percy P. Bishop and Colonel Lorenzo D. Gasser.

EVER since Susan Baker Jones and Ed Medlock announced their engagement, they have been the center of interest at many parties given in their honor. But one of the most unusual was the journalistic shower given them recently by Mrs. Berry Mobley at her home at the Biltmore hotel.

Invitations to the party carried out the newspaper feature, and were typed in news-sheet style, giving the time and place that the event was to occur and enlivened with personal observations about the guests. Guests included several members of the staff of the daily with which Susan is connected, and their gifts for the bride-to-be were most appropriate and unusual.

Frank Daniel presented her with a miniature shovel tied with a typewriter ribbon, which he proudly acclaimed as representative of the well-known journalistic "scoop." Mrs. Mobley's gift was a rollingpin bearing the following inscription: "When matrimony interferes with journalism, use this on your husband. But when journalism interferes with matrimony, use this in your kitchen."

Among the gifts Susan received were orange squeezers, can openers, and odds and ends for everyday use. Guests were Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Pope, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Mier, Mr. and Mrs. Angus Perkerson, Mr. and Mrs. Wright Bryan, Frank Daniel, George Brinson and the honor guests.

SEVERAL days ago, the fourth and fifth grades at Washington Seminary decided to give a doll show. A slight admission was to be charged to get in, and a larger one to enter a doll, and prizes were to be awarded for the most natural doll, the best-dressed American and foreign dolls, and the most beautiful doll. So Scott Meador, who is head of the kindergarten department, thought that her children might be interested in seeing it, and she wrote notes to their mothers telling them about the show.

The big day arrived, and all the children were quite excited at the prospect, when little Jeanette Hinkle, one of the kindergarteners, stepped out of her car. She was dressed in a dainty party frock, and looked exactly like a doll herself. She came running into the room and handed Scott a note. Her mother had written that she hadn't had time to dress Jeanette's doll nicely enough to enter it in the show, so she had dressed Jeanette, who wanted to enter it herself.

So, to the dismay of all the teachers, Jeanette entered the show, and proved to be not a walking and talking doll, but a singing and dancing one also. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred E. Hinkle, on Springdale road, and is quite talented in singing and dancing, and has been taking lessons practically ever since she was old enough to walk.

PRETTY Ellen Fleming staged what might be called a modern Cinderella act at the debut tea-dance of Virginia Merry and Mary Hurt on Monday at the Druid Hills Golf Club. This young person, you know, is combining school days at the Florida State College for Women and a debut in Atlanta. She came up to attend the Halloween ball and remained here until last Monday evening.

She attended Mary and Virginia's dance and, like Cinderella, kept an eye on the clock. Her train to return to school left at 9 o'clock, and in the true character fashioned she dashed away just before the clock struck, leaving no time to change her clothes. Sally hears she boarded the train in the handsome metal cloth dress she wore to the dance. Sally also hears that when one of the passengers heard she was returning to classes, remarked that she must be attending evening school.

Anent the Hurt-Merry party, many have wondered why the waiters carried trays of punch through the crowded ballroom during the afternoon. Here is why: Virginia instructed the waiters before the dance began to serve punch to the orchestra at intervals during the afternoon.

As the waiters would start toward the far end of the ballroom where the orchestra sat, the couples would pause in dancing, take a drink and dance on. Soon the glasses were empty and a return trip was necessary. This happened four times, but the orchestra played on and on into the night without benefit of punch, until the dance ended and it was then that they were served.

COLONEL DUNCAN K. MAJOR gave his Alanta friends a happy surprise yesterday when he arrived here. He is the guest of his lifelong friend, General George Van Horn Moseley, at Fort McPherson. En route to Washington from an extended trip throughout the country, Colonel Major timed his travel in order to spend this week-end in Atlanta.

Sally recalls with pleasure Colonel Major's gracious hospitality when he was stationed here several years ago. He maintained an apartment on Seventh street, where army and civilian friends were entertained frequently. Quite an oriental atmosphere was provided by the apartment's furnishings of rare treaures collected by Colonel Major in foreign lands where he was detailed. The presence of a Filipino domestique, ever ready to serve the colonel's guests, added just the proper background.

Because of the brevity of his stay here Colonel Major is obliged to forego the many social courtesies that friends desire to extend him. Among those who honored the popular army visitor informally on Saturday were Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Draper, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Graves and Mrs. William T. Healey.

West End Baptist Church Forms Setting for Purcell-Lilley Rites

Miss Ethel Purcell, lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Purcell, became the bride of Elmer Daniel Lilley, of Raleigh, N. C., at a beautiful afternoon ceremony solemnized yesterday at 4 o'clock at the West End Baptist church. The Rev. Dr. M. A. Cooper, pastor of the church, read the marriage service, which was witnessed by a throng of interested friends and relatives.

A massing of palms and giant ferns banked the rear of the altar in the church, and standing in relief against the background of green were tall floor baskets filled with calla lilies. Flanking either side of the altar were floor standards topped with seven-branched candelabra in which burned tall white tapers. The pews reserved for members of the bride's and groom's families were caught with huge tulle bows. A section of pews, also marked with tulle bows, was reserved for members of the bride's Sunday school class, the Joy Class of the West End Baptist church, who entered the church in a body, and assisted in entertaining at the reception.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Dr. Ben J. Potter, organist, and Glenn Sims, soloist.

Miss Stella Schillinger acted as the bride's maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were her sister, Miss Daisy Belle Purcell, and Miss Helen Copelan. Miss Jacqueline Purcell, niece of the bride, was the junior bridesmaid. The attendants were gowned alike in effective costumes of rust-colored velvet, with small, off-the-face hats of similar material. The gowns featured huge cape collars and two-tone sashes of rust and green velvet, which tied in the back, the ends extending to the floor and forming short trains. Their slippers were moire pumps, dyed to match their gowns. The maid of honor carried a sheath of yellow chrysanthemums, and the other attendants carried sheaths of bronze chrysanthemums.

Little Misses Mary Sue Chandler and Charlotte Harber served as flower girls. They wore cunning frocks of gold net and carried nosegays of small yellow and bronze button chrysanthemums.

The lovely young bride entered the church with her brother, C. E. Purcell, who gave her in marriage, and they were met at the altar by the bridegroom and his best man, Stewart R. Hardison, of Charlotte, N. C. The ushers included David G. Modlin, of Williamston, N. C., and John D. Hargrave, of Atlanta.

The bride's blond beauty was emphasized by her wedding gown of eggshell satin, fashioned with a redingote molded on princess lines and featuring a Queen Anne collar of satin which framed her face in effective manner. The sleeves were long and tight, ending in points over the hands. The coat opened in front over the princess gown and extended into a train in the back. The bride's veil of tulle fell from a becoming coronet of orange blossoms, with a shorter veil extended to shoulder length. Completing the bridal ensemble was a sheath of calla lilies.

Following the church ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Purcell entertained at a reception at the West End Woman's Club. The decorations in the club consisted of quantities of brightly tinted autumn foliage in attractive arrangement. The bride's table was covered with a lace cloth and centered with a handsome three-tiered cake, embossed in valley lilies, and resting on a mound of ferns. Crystal candelabra held white tapers.

The guests were received by Mr. and Mrs. Purcell, the bride and groom and the members of the wedding party. Mrs. Purcell was gowned in black crepe with which she wore a cluster of sweetheart roses.

Mr. Lilley and his bride left for their home in Raleigh, N. C., where they will reside at 1805 Fairview road. Mrs. Lilley chose for traveling a smart suit of dark blue woolen, collared in chinchilla fur and worn with black accessories.

Mothers!

In which of these classes do your children's feet rank?

NORMAL FIRST DEGREE SECOND DEGREE THIRD DEGREE

In General, There Are Four Conditions in Which Children's Feet Are Found

1. Normal. Here the foot is perfect in every way. The three arches are completely developed. There are no weaknesses and the entire structure of the foot shows the result of having been encased in accurately-fitted shoes.

2. First Degree Pronation. This is an early stage of malformation in the foot. There is a slight tendency of the ankles to roll in. The arches begin to weaken.

3. Second Degree Pronation. Here the arches become much weaker and there is a very decided tendency toward flat feet. Painful growths—callouses, corns and the like—begin to develop.

4. Third Degree Pronation marks the complete collapse of all the arches. Bones are thrown out of line and the feet assume abnormal position. Correct posture is destroyed and bad posture leads to hollow chest, curvature of the spine, lordosis (sagging stomach) and other ills.

Clothes with Individuality Bring Out a Lady's Personality

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1935

Trade Mark Registration Applied For.

WHILE THE WORLD WAITS

What to wear and where to wear it?
No girl can afford to flout it—
Yet that stupid League of Nations
Doesn't do a THING about it!

Now that "the season" is definitely "on," a femme who hopes to get places must look to her wardrobe. She must either fastidiously follow the fashions as decreed by the emirs of what-to-wear or she must create styles so individual to her own personality that she will be forgiven the heresy of a one-girl revolt. Either way, it's no minor matter—for the campaign that aims at romance and a desirable husband is in full cry at this period—and therefore the serious concentration pictured on the fetching face of this Van Buren stunner in the famous girl-artist's latest "clothes-up."

Mother-Love Broke the Calm of the "Glad" Ax-Murderess

Not a Word Said the Grim-Visaged Woman as Her Awful Crime Was Revealed—Then Her Little Boy Told a Tale of Horror, and She Proved to Be Human After All

GRIM WIDOW
The Dour-Visaged Woman, Mrs. Mary Morrill, Who Hacked Her Husband to Death With an Ax. Note the Stoical Determination on Her Features as She Listens to Testimony in the Courtroom.

CHIEF STATE'S WITNESS
"My mother said to me, 'I did it with this ax. I'm glad I did it. Our troubles are now over.' My mother told me to help her carry my father up to the attic but we couldn't do that because there are no stairs. . . . She told me to get my cart and we put my father in it. Then she hauled it to the cellar door and put my father in the cellar. She told me to throw some dirt on it. . . ." From 11-Year-Old Jimmy Morrill's Testimony on the Stand.

VICTIM
Nobody Knows Why Herbert L. Morrill, Above, Was Cut to Pieces by His Wife With an Ax. Jimmy Thought It Was Because He Complained of the Food His Wife Gave Him for Dinner.

DEATH WEAPON
Sheriff Henry E. Burnell, of Cumberland County, Maine, Examining the Ax Mrs. Morrill Used to Kill Her Husband. The Medical Examiner Said Morrill Died from Seven Frightful Gashes in His Skull.

THE wildly convulsive sobbing that wracked the gaunt frame of the woman on trial for her life broke upon the stillness of the courtroom like the booming of a storm-tossed surf upon a rocky shore.

After three months of dour stoicism, the silent Mrs. Mary Morrill, who had hacked her husband, Herbert Morrill, 62, to death with an ax, had finally "cracked". Enigmatic, glum and totally unperturbed from the moment the detectives came to her kitchen door, the 52-year-old woman broke down like a hysterical schoolgirl when her 11-year-old son, Jimmy, entered the courtroom and proceeded to take the stand and tell the terrible horror-narrative which was instrumental in convicting her.

Who knows what was running through her mind at that moment . . . a grim, gloomy mind that had fortified her against any show of emotion for years . . . as she saw her sturdy son move into the hushed courtroom. As little Jimmy strode forward firmly to reach the stand, the stillness seemed unendurable. Necks were craned and eyes switched from mother to son in an effort to catch any sign that might pass between the two.

Every maternal instinct in Mrs. Morrill's two hundred pound body came to the fore in the face of Jimmy's probably inherited composure.

Before her eyes was the child she had fed when he was too helpless to feed himself; the baby whose tiny wails brought her running to comfort him against some condition or force he was too young to cope with. She remembered the joy of his restrained, inarticulate signs of affection as he fell asleep after a day of unceasing play or work.

Out of the dim past came the delightful little errors he had made when he was first learning to speak; the slow corrections and finally the perfection of his first clear phrases. She recalled how she used to listen to his measured breathing long after he had gone to bed and how she used to tread softly into his room—not to kiss him, just to look at him in her grim way before she retired.

All these thoughts and more flew across the mother's mind in the split second while her boy was taking the witness chair. The crowd didn't see it. To the onlookers, the detectives, the jury, she was a figure as inhumanly cold and terrifying as a woman carved out of rock: an inhuman thing, an ax-killer.

Jimmy was the State's chief witness. He told his awful story in a clear, quiet voice to the jury that held his mother's fate in their hands. He told the truth.

He narrated how he had come into the bare little house, and what his mother had said to him, the morning he found his father dead, with crushed-in skull, in his bedroom in their isolated, two-room home at West Falmouth, Maine.

He described the tonelessness with which she said:

"I did it. I'm glad I did. Our troubles are now over."

Jimmy's eyes filled with tears after making that statement. He brushed them away with the sleeve of his light blue blouse and resumed his heart-rending story. Defense Attorney Nixon asked: "Did you see her kill him?" Jimmy replied sincerely, "No, I didn't and I'm glad I didn't."

When he was led into the courtroom, Judge Emery had asked the boy if he knew what it meant to swear to God to tell the truth and he replied that he did, adding that he never went to church or Sunday school. "I am 11 years old and am in the third grade in school," he said. "I have not been to school since this happened, though. If I don't tell the truth I know I will be punished."

Then Jimmy told of the events preceding the gruesome murder. "We played cards the night before I saw my father dead," he said. Again the tears welled up in the child's eyes and again he brushed them away with his sleeve. "I went to bed quite late. My mother and father stayed up after I went to bed."

"Tell us what happened the next day, Jimmy," County Attorney Tapley said, encouraging the boy.

"Well, I got up about 7 o'clock and got dressed," he answered. "Then I saw my mother boiling an ax in a pot of water. I then saw my father dead on the bed. A blanket and some burlap were wrapped around him and tied with a rope."

Mrs. Morrill moved her head slowly, from side to side, wiped her tears from her eyes with her handkerchief and began to mutter incoherently. The spectators were tense with excitement. The mother's actions were not at all like the stoicism she had shown so far. It was a drama the like of which they had never seen before.

"What happened then?" helpfully asked Tapley.

"Well, my mother said to me, 'I did it with this ax. I'm glad I did it. Our troubles are now over!'" These words were scarcely out of the boy's mouth before his mother abruptly burst out into wild, uncontrollable wails.

"My mother told me to help her carry my father up to the attic, but we couldn't do that because there are no stairs," Jimmy declared. "We then had breakfast. All the time Mama didn't say anything but just went on eating as though everything was all right. Then she told me to get my cart (a little coaster) from the yard.

"I got it and she put my father in the cart and made me help her lift it into the yard." Jimmy was sobbing now.

"She hauled the cart to the cellar door and put my father in the cellar. She told me to throw some dirt on him. I threw a few shovelsful, but I didn't want to. She made me."

He then identified the ax which was introduced as a state exhibit. He'd often chopped wood with it. He knew it from marks on the head. Jimmy told next he had fled from the cellar, leaving his mother working with a shovel. And how he and his mother stayed in the house for two or three days after that, then went to a house on Federal Street.

This was the home of Morrill's son-in-law, Guy Hamilton, and husband of his daughter by a former marriage. It seems Hamilton had come to the house asking for Morrill and Mrs. Morrill had told him he had "gone away." The next day Hamilton returned, with his wife, who said to her step-mother: "Why, Mary, father has been gone three or four days and you haven't reported it to the authorities?"

Mrs. Morrill had protested that she didn't have any money, but Mrs. Hamilton told her she didn't need any money to notify authorities. Then the murderess calmly had told Mrs. Hamilton that she was lonesome and didn't like to stay in her home alone with the little boy, so they were taken to the daughter's home.

Jimmy further related on the stand that shortly after they had moved to the Hamiltons the police and sheriffs came—and then the body was discovered. He said that his mother and father had frequently quarrelled. "He used to turn up his nose at the food," was his boyish explanation. "Mother was awful good to father, but he wasn't very good to her."

With that statements he concluded his testimony and left the stand. As he passed his mother, seated a few feet from him, his eyes sought hers to see if he had done or said anything wrong. As abruptly as they'd started, the loud outbursts of Mrs. Morrill were brought again under control. She didn't look at the boy. She became once more the stoical, undisturbed, grim woman who had astounded a countryside by her cold indifference.

Several neighbors took the stand and testified that they knew of no trouble between the Morrills. The son-in-law Hamilton and his wife said that they had heard the dour-visaged Mrs. Morrill call her husband a "dirty coward" and dare him to strike her, but to their knowledge the challenge had never been accepted. Morrill ran a small repair-shop; the couple had few friends; the real motive that drove that ax-blade through and through his skull remained a mystery.

The Medical Examiner, Dr. Wilbur F. Leighton, described seven fractures he had found in the bones of Morrill's head, and added that the man's larynx was crushed. His opinion was that Morrill had died instantly. He said that some of the injuries were caused by a sharp instrument and others by a dull one, evidently the edge of the ax and its blunt butt.

The jury was out slightly more than two hours and returned with a verdict of guilty. Mrs. Morrill received the sentence, sending her to the Women's Reformatory at Skowhegan for life, as calmly as she listened to the testimony of all the witnesses—except Jimmy. The little son whose testimony sent his mother to prison was ordered placed in a private home by the State.

"This Is Shocking News!" Said Mr. Worm

"MY word, this is shocking news!" exclaimed the worm as he emerged from his little burrow in the earth. "Really, young lady, I must protest! There I was resting peacefully in the ground when I was awakened by a strange tickling sensation. It was an entirely new . . . and annoying . . . sensation, so I decided to come to the surface and investigate. What is that strange thing you hold in your hand?"

Pretty Miss Ruth Nussbaum explained to the worm she had intended going fishing and that he was an essential part of her plans. She added that she had stepped into her neighbor's backyard and, with a new invention of his called the "Angleworm Accelerator," had baited her bait. It would only be a short time now before she would have all his brethren in a can, ready to feed to the fish.

"Is that the instrument that made me come out? How does it work?" asked the worm.

"You see," said Miss Nussbaum, "my neighbor, Mr. B. L. Hutching, loves fishing, but he dislikes to dig for bait. So he invented the 'accelerator.' It's a very simple device, consisting of a metal rod with an insulated handle. To this rod are attached electric wires which are connected with an ordinary light plug.

"The rod is pushed into the ground and the electricity turned on. Within a few seconds all your neighbors within a radius of two feet of the rod are seized with the same idea you were . . . to get to the surface!"

"I can see where we'll all have to move to country," said the worm.

"That won't do you much good," laughed Miss Nussbaum. "A connection enables the rod to be attached to automobile batteries!"

At these words the worm just turned over and died, making him, at least, no good for fishing.

Rochelle Hudson, the girl who signed a contract at the age of 13—and got a break, finally, when she was 19.

A glimpse at the picture that made her famous—Rochelle Hudson with the late Will Rogers and a character actress in "Dr. Bull."

Waited Six Years for Her Hollywood Break

But now Rochelle Hudson, who started as the "voice" for a cartoon character, is a star—and she is just 19

By Jeannette Meehan

SIX years is an awfully long time to sit around waiting for something to happen—especially if you are very young and ambitious, and happen to be in Hollywood where everyone but you is running off with all the money, the billing, and the prestige. It seems as though you might just as well have taken off for that trip of a million light years to the moon and a couple of planets. At least there would be a change of scenery. Anyway, that's the way it seemed to Rochelle Hudson.

You see, the idea of a screen career for her did not originate with Rochelle. It was literally dumped into her lap. And after the idea was encouraged, what did she have? Nothing but 72 months of waiting for a good break—six years, most of which was a vacation. Hollywood can sometimes be unreasonable about those things—and even vacations can be carried too far.

Rochelle was born in Oklahoma City, Okla. When she was 10 years old her family moved to Los Angeles—"for no earthly reason," states Rochelle, "other than moving."

In Los Angeles little Miss Hudson was placed in a public school and there she might have stayed, had not a friend of a friend of hers been looking for a wee small voice for a movie cartoon character. The friend suggested Rochelle and a test was made. Thus it happened that, at the age of 11, she received her first pay check as the voice for that cartoon character you know as "Bosko."

Everything was going beautifully until all of a sudden her voice began to change. Bosko was promptly provided with new vocal organs, and Rochelle again became a mere student. But having a taste of the camera, she wanted more.

FINALLY, at the age of 13, she made a test at Fox and was signed to a contract.

"That first year at Fox," says Rochelle, "they didn't do one darn thing with me except pay me to attend the studio school. I never even saw a camera. As a matter of fact I couldn't have directed a soul to any office on the lot because I'd never been to any of them myself. No one seemed to know I was around except the cashier who handed me my check every week, and I don't think he cared particularly."

One day, shrouded in gloom, she walked off the Fox lot and made a test at RKO, where she was signed to her second contract. RKO treated her with a little more respect. She wasn't exactly given the star dressing room, but she was blessed with several ingenue leads.

Here at last, she thought, was the chance for a real break, and so indeed it seemed. The studio placed her in its "debutante star" class and gave her a nice role just often enough to pacify her restlessness. Then, steadily, the whole affair began to slow down and finally pulled up short to a dead stop. The studio let her go.

Then followed a year or so of free lancing during which she worked at infrequent intervals. It was all very discouraging but she hung on to the uneven shreds of her career for dear life, and all the king's horses and all the king's men couldn't have made her let go. Things dragged along. They dragged along until Rochelle was 17.

Shortly after her 17th birthday, Fox, which had then moved out to its huge plant in Westwood, called her in for a test, and she signed with that outfit for a second time. The same old story began again, the only difference being that this time she did manage to make the acquaintance of a camera or two. But none of her assignments were anything to get very excited about.

THEN it happened. Two years ago Fox announced that it would star the beloved Will Rogers in a picture titled "Dr. Bull."

Production was to get under way immediately. The public was impatient for more Rogers pictures. Adaptations and scripts and screen plays were rushed through, and the picture went before the cameras.

The director was ahead of schedule when a terrible calamity occurred. Boots Mallory, who was playing the ingenue lead, was taken ill with a serious case of the flu. After holding up the company for four days, necessarily of course, Boots returned to work, but the rushes proved that she obviously was not strong enough to do justice to her role.

With the picture promised to exhibitors on a certain date, the company could not wait any longer. Boots had to be replaced and retakes made of all her scenes. Whom to get?

To borrow someone from another studio might be an indefinite process, so they resorted, strangely enough, to their own contract list. There they found Rochelle.

Rochelle gave everything she had to that first break, and she did rather well. She did so well that, after "Dr. Bull" was released, the studio executives took up her option, gave her a raise, and announced that hereafter they would groom her for stardom.

But the studio hardly got the chance. Other producers seemed suddenly aware of Rochelle's talents. They borrowed her all over the place. Among others she made "Harold Teen" for Warners, "Imitation of Life" at Universal, and "Les Miserables" at United Artists. What a great deal of satisfaction she must have felt after six years of taking it squarely on the chin.

NOW, at the age of 19, Rochelle is a star in her own right. She gets the top billing in her new 20th Century-Fox picture, "Snatched."

Besides being a star, Rochelle is also considered the most precocious young lady in pictures. In a city of manufactured personalities where she is surrounded with all types of bowing and scraping, she has managed to remain herself—in spite of her brief years.

When she opens her mouth you're confronted with honesty—in healthy doses. There's no slyness or offensive false modesty—if you get the point. For example, there is always the star-type who will retire coyly into her chair and coo sweetly—"Oh, but I can't understand why you want to talk to poor little me."

Then there is the type who will try to make you feel that you're keeping some royal personage from his most sacred duties of state—in language that hovers in terrible uncertainty between the king's English and a Texas drawl.

Then there are the godsends like Rochelle.

(Copyright, 1935.)

This little lady is sometimes given to rather profound remarks which a few Hollywoodites who are much bigger than she (both physically and cinematically) might do well to ponder over.

"Hollywood," says Rochelle, "is not the big bad wolf that it is pictured. All this talk about its 'dangers' and 'pitfalls' is silly. A level head is needed to take part in any big industry in the world, so why hang all the unlovely aspects on the motion picture trade?

"Yes, I know there's that old story. Someone comes out here and goes hog wild with pink limousines and several estates surrounded by back rent. They get 'tight' before 10 o'clock and tell off-color stories. They lose their perspective and their friends say they've 'gone Hollywood,' and they dwell at length on the horrors of the industry in general and of Hollywood in particular.

"Bosh. It's not Hollywod that's to blame—it's the individual. No one has to be changed unless he's weak enough to want to be changed. If you're looking for it you can find the same type of bad influence in New York, or Chicago, or San Francisco, or in any other city in the world. But if it's found in Hollywood everybody blames it on the picture business which goes down for a count of 10.

"LOOK," added Rochelle, "if a soldier were ordered over the top he'd naturally take along his gun, wouldn't he? Well, if a person feels he's not fit to 'survive' Hollywood why shouldn't he arm himself so he can survive?

"Some do, successfully. Others make a selection of weapons that could hardly be called a happy choice. Snobbishness. Sarcasm. Cynicism. Why doesn't it occur to them that they can defend themselves with common sense?

"My first advice," smiled Rochelle, "would be to steel yourself against your press agent. Once you start believing your press agent, whose job it is to boost you to the skies, you're sunk. Take all flattery and bowing and scraping with a shaker full of salt. Learn to distinguish between your really loyal friends and those who merely wish to bask in your sunshine.

"Cultivate friends outside the business who will keep you on your toes with fresh viewpoints. If I were just starting out in pictures I would, by all means, choose someone with a level head, a calm nature, and with a nose for business to advise me."

(There, take it or leave it—from a 19-year-old.)

"I feel that I can speak with some authority," concluded Miss Hudson, "because I've learned my own lessons. I made many foolish mistakes in the beginning. Many times I've been saved from a bad fall by some friend, notably my mother.

"I don't think whatever success I now enjoy is mere luck. I believe that I've got something I've worked and waited for. I've made no serious errors. There are no black marks against my character or conscience. I'm proud of that."

Rochelle lives in a lovely French Colonial house in Los Angeles with her mother. She has never been to a Hollywood party. She doesn't like them. She thinks that most of Hollywood's younger set are rather giddy and makes no attempt to play around with them—although that same younger set, it goes without saying, would be tickled to death to have her, if she wanted to.

She loves to dance and has a long list of handsome beaux, but steadily denies any rumors of wedding bells with any one of them. She insists she is purely a working girl and has no time for romance. But that probably won't last very long because Rochelle is too pretty. Sooner or later, some lucky gent is bound to make a romantic impression on her.

She stands five foot two and one-half inches in her stocking feet. She weighs 105 pounds. She has a very neat figure and doesn't have to diet to keep it that way. (Grrrrrrrr!) She can't sleep on anything but down pillows. She takes a cold shower every morning, and a hot bath every night. The ceiling directly over her bath is a huge mirror in which she makes faces at herself. It's also her favorite place for rehearsing dialog.

Her pet hate is crooked stocking seams.

Her greatest passion is fried egg-plant.

So there you have one of Hollywood's newest and most engaging young stars—a girl who worked hard for success and refused to give up in the face of disappointment and delay.

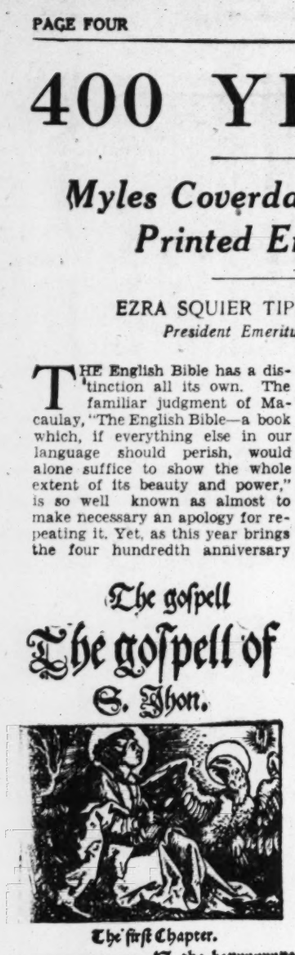

NEWS of the STARS—in a new magazine in brilliant colors and breezily pictorial, comes to you regularly, starting next Sunday. You'll be delighted with SCREEN AND RADIO WEEKLY—a regular part of The Constitution in future.

400 YEARS OF THE PRINTED ENGLISH BIBLE

Myles Coverdale and the First Printed English Bible

EZRA SQUIER TIPPLE, D. D., L. H. D.
President Emeritus, Drew University.

THE English Bible has a distinction all its own. The familiar judgment of Macaulay, "The English Bible—a book which, if everything else in our language should perish, would alone suffice to show the whole extent of its beauty and power," is so well known as almost to make necessary an apology for repeating it. Yet, as this year brings the four hundredth anniversary of the first complete printed English Bible, it will help to remind us of our precious heritage, and the man whose name it bears—Myles Coverdale. And who was this Myles Coverdale?

The gospell
The gospell of S. Jhon.
The first Chapter.
IN the begynnynge was the worde, and the worde was with God, and God was ye worde. The same was in the begynnynge with God. All thinges were made by the same, and without the same was made nothinge that was made. In him was the life, and the life was the light of men: and the light commeth in the darknesse, and the darknesse comprehended it not.

THE BEGINNING OF ST. JOHN'S GOSPEL
Coverdale's Bible

It is probable that his surname was taken from the district where he was born, Cover-dale, in what is called Richmondshire in the North Riding. The exact date of his birth uncertain. It is now given as "about 1488," though it may have been somewhere near 1485. He died in 1568-9 having come to a goodly age, well beyond four score years, much admired, and followed by all the Puritans.

From his childhood he was a student, given to learning, eager, diligent, having a sturdy purpose and a tenacious memory. He studied philosophy and theology at Cambridge, had an ever-growing circle of acquaintances, such as Sir Thomas More, Erasmus and Thomas Cromwell, who was long his influential friend.

Some time after Coverdale entered the convent of Austin friars at Cambridge the famous Robert Barnes became its prior. When the latter was later arrested on a charge of heresy, Coverdale went with him to London to assist him in drawing up his defense. Later, leaving the convent, he assumed the habit of a secular priest and began at once to preach against confession and the veneration of images. The intimate facts concerning the life of Coverdale are rather obscure. An undated letter to Thomas Cromwell, prior at least to 1527, gives a hint of his religious inclinations and perhaps of his activities. In this letter he writes that "I begyne to taste of Holy Schryptures." It is impossible to account for his movements between 1528 and 1535; but it is more than probable that most of the time was spent abroad. It has been asserted that, in 1529, he was at Hamburg, assisting Tyndale in his translation of the Pentateuch; but the evidence is of doubtful value.

He was writing, however, or translating these silent years; for, in 1534, he brought out two books, both translations, "Ye Olde God and the Newe" and "Paraphrase upon the Psalms." Beyond question he had begun the work of translating the Scriptures into English, which came to a glorious consummation in 1535 in the first complete printed English Bible.

In the history of the English Bible there are two outstanding names, William Tyndale and Myles Coverdale. While this article has to do primarily with the latter, the former has so large a place in the story of the English Bible that his name commands reverence, inasmuch as his was the first printed New Testament. Appearing 1525, it was so eagerly sought after that people went about saying that "the conscience of England has found a new king."

Coverdale, undoubtedly, owed much to Tyndale, building in large measure upon what had already been done by his predecessor. But he had genius and ability all his own. Nearly half a century ago, H. W. Hoare, an English writer, made this striking comparison between Coverdale and Tyndale: "If the latter be the Hercules among our Biblical laborers, the former is certainly the Orpheus. Diffident and retiring in disposition, of delicate susceptibility, literary dexterity and resource, with a wonderful ear for cadence and rhythm, it is to Coverdale we owe much of the beautiful music which seems to well up out of the perennial springs of our Authorized Version. 'Cast me not away from thy presence, and take not thy Holy Spirit from me;' 'Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the works of thine hands. They shall perish, but thou shalt endure; they all shall wax old as doth a garment; and as a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shall be changed: but thou art the same, and thy years shall not fail.'

"Where can we find anything more perfect, unless it be in passages scattered up and down in our prayer-book version of the Psalms, which is almost wholly, or in the Isaiah of our Bibles, which is very largely, from the hand of this beautiful translator? But, though contrasted with Tyndale in the main features of his character, he is also his indispensable literary complement, standing in relation to him as gentleness does to strength, pliability and grace to robustness and vigor, modesty to self-confidence."

To the study of the English Scriptures he gave practically his entire life. He wrote or translated numerous tracts and books, some 26 in all; but his chief distinction is that the first complete Bible printed in English bears his name. It is this achievement which the present year commemorates. It may be, as is often said, that his translation as a work of scholarship does not rank with that of some other translators; but he accomplished what no other person prior to 1535 had done. He translated and published a Bible in the English language. The publisher and place of printing of the 1535 Bible have always been a mystery. These facts are not of primary importance. Coverdale was the inspiring genius of the enterprise.

The place may have been Zurich, Frankfort, Cologne, or Paris, what matters it? The work of translation was probably done at Antwerp, and the volume was probably printed on the press of Froschover in Zurich. In the version there is no definite mention of the original Hebrew and Greek texts. Coverdale was not without some knowledge of both these languages, but was much less well-equipped in this respect than Tyndale, as Coverdale modestly acknowledges. He knew German and Latin extremely well, and a little French. The five "interpreters," which he said that he used, are thought to have been the Vulgate, the Latin version of Pagninus, part of Luther's translation, the Zurich version, and Tyndale's Pentateuch and New Testament.

DESCRIPTIVE INSET
of the title page of the Coverdale Bible

His knowledge and ability seem to have been unquestioned. He was employed by Thomas Cromwell to assist in the Great Bible in 1539, which was ordered to be placed in all English churches. The text of this is largely that of the Bible of John Rogers, brought out in 1537 under the name of Thomas Matthew, of which the old Testament from Ezra to Malachi and the Apocrypha were substantially Coverdale's own. The New Testament and the first part of the Old Testament were very closely Tyndale's.

In 1558, Coverdale may have had a share in the preparation of the Geneva version of the Scriptures but the evidence is not conclusive. In the remainder of his life he was actively concerned in the wider circulation of the Bible.

Myles Coverdale was one of the leading figures during the progress of the reformed opinions in England and on the Continent. By his marriage which naturally was regarded as a protest against the doctrines of celibacy of the priesthood, he became identified completely with the reforming party. He was appointed bishop of Exeter in 1551, and the vigorous Protestantism of western England in the reign of Elizabeth was undoubtedly greatly aided by his powerful preaching and influence. On Mary's accesion to the throne, 1553, he was deprived of his bishopric and ordered to London, though later he was permitted to leave for Denmark.

In 1554 he signed a remarkable confession of faith in conjunction with other Protestant bishops and martyrs imprisoned in London.

Note that Our Lord's Prayer appears on this page

Following the signature of the others, is annexed the following notable declaration: "To these things above said do I, Myles Coverdale, late bishop of Exeter, consent and agree with these, mine afflicted brethren, being prisoners. Mine own hand, M. C."

This man, modest, conscientious, laborious, a thoroughly honest and good man, who had a considerable share in the introduction of German spiritual culture to English readers in the second quarter of the sixteenth century, a consistently Protestant reformer, the church of the present day does well to honor both for the first Bible printed in English and for many of the most cherished phrasings of beautiful and tender passages of the Scriptures.

CONTRACT ACCORDING TO CULBERTSON

By ELY CULBERTSON.

I WAS once approached by a fluttery middle-aged lady who for a long time had been trying desperately but unsuccessfully to win at bridge. Said she: "I've always abided by three rules I was taught long ago—always cover an honor with an honor—never lead away from a king—always lead through strength and up to weakness. I know if you would give me three more rules it would help me to win. What do you suggest?"

I thought for a moment and answered, "Forget the three rules you know."

I don't know if anything would have helped the dear lady, but the advice was extremely sound—with reservations. The "rules" would have been highly improved if the words "always" and "never" had been eliminated from them. They're all right for some circumstances and all wrong for others. But the lady isn't alone—not even today. There are many players who obey those "rules" as though they were sacred cows, particularly the first—"always cover an honor with an honor." And it has cost a lot of valuable tricks.

There's only one reason or excuse for sacrificing an honor by covering another with it. That is when the sacrifice promises to produce some material benefit in the form of future tricks. An honor must be covered whenever a possibility exists that a trick might be promoted in your own or partner's hand. The player does not see declarer's or partner's hand, so he must assume that any ranking card which is not on the board may be held by his partner. But an honor led must not be covered when it is evident that by so doing you can promote no trick in your own or partner's hand.

If the four top honors are killed in the first round, the 10 controls the second round and the 9 the third. If any three of the four top honors are eliminated in the first round, the 10 controls the third round, and the 9 may control the fourth.

NORTH
♠ A J 9 8
WEST ♠ K 7 6 EAST ♠ 10 3 2
SOUTH
♠ Q 5 4

South, as declarer, leads the queen. West mentally visualizes that if he covers the queen with his king and North wins the first trick, the second trick will be won by the jack, in which case the 10, which may be in partner's hand, will go into the third round play as a trick. West does not know his partner has the 10, but if there is a mere possibility that he has, the queen should be covered.

NORTH
♠ A J 10 9
WEST ♠ K 4 2 EAST ♠ 8 7 6 5 3
SOUTH
♠ Q led

For West to cover the queen in this case serves no useful purpose, since no card either in his own or in his partner's hand can be promoted. On the other hand, if South's queen is a singleton, West's king will control the third round of the suit if he does not cover.

NORTH
♠ A J 10 8
WEST ♠ K 4 2 EAST ♠ 9 7 6 2
SOUTH
♠ Q 5

Now the queen lead should be covered with the king. If East holds four spades to the 9 spot, the 9 will control the fourth round and the sacrifice of the king saves a trick.

Usually it isn't even necessary to go into any brown study to arrive at a profound judgment in the matter. A quick look at the dummy will solve the question.

When I recently wrote the story of the renowned whist hand known as the Duke of Cumberland I had no suspicion that the great cycle of card probabilities had almost run its course. For a century and a half the hitherto unparalleled Cumberland unboudtedly has been the most famous deal in the annals of cards. But a few days ago an extraordinary hand was shown me which was actually dealt and played in a rubber game recently in New York. My first thought was of the amazing likeness between this up-to-the-minute 1935 deal and the celebrated Cumberland hand. In fact, the general characteristics were so similar and the playing results were so nearly identical that it seems worthy to be called the new Cumberland.

In his unfortunate experience his unfortunate grace of Cumberland held spade A K, heart A K Q J, diamond A K Q, club K J 9 7. The duke is reputed to have lost 20,000 pounds—$100,000—on the hand when his opponents proceeded to make a grand slam against him with clubs as trumps. How much would you have liked to risk on the West hand below?

It is extremely interesting to note how the situation was handled by modern contract players, since, unlike the game of whist, the partnership against the strong hand had to bid—and that most skilfully—to realize the maximum their cards offered.

The bidding (East-West vulnerable):

West	North	East	South
2 ♣	3 ♣	Pass	3 ♠
4 ♦	5 ♦	Pass	6 ♠ (final bid)

All four players were of high caliber, a fact which is particularly borne out by South's final bid, which revealed his implicit confidence that his partner had told him the truth with both his bids. With his 5 1-2 plus honor tricks, 12 of the 20 honors in the deck, including all the king-queens and an ace, and only three losers in his hand, West had a two bid in any language. Since the opening bid was in a minor suit, with his own extraordinary holding North felt fairly sanguine of a game in one of his majors and took advantage of the rare opportunity to make an immediate game forcing bid over an iriginal two bid by overcalling in the opponents' suit. East, relieved of the necessity of keeping the bidding open, naturally passed, and South now made the proper bid of three spades. Since he was vulnerable, West looked at his dazzling picture gallery and decided North and South were simply trying to throw a little dust in his eyes. So, still reaching for game himself, he bid his diamond suit. This gave North the perfect opportunity to show what his hand really was like by bidding five diamond, meaning he had no losers in either diamonds or clubs. So South, trusting his partner completely, took the plunge with his 9-high spade suit. West refused to double. After North's tremendous declarations all those beautiful honors had shrunk pitifully in value and there was danger of too great a loss at seven clubs or diamonds, while he still had hopes of taking a heart as well as a spade trick. As a matter of fact, seven clubs would have been defeated 800 points. The six spade contract was a lay-down, of course. West also proved he was far wiser than the Duke of Cumberland. He didn't bet on his holding. Times have changed—or perhaps we know a little more about cards today.

The 1935 contract team-of-four championship for the Harold S. Vanderbilt cup will begin November 6 in New York. This will be the eighth annual of the finest contract bridge tournament, outside of the blue ribbon Grand National event, held during the year, and as an actor in the original cast of this production I hold a certain amount of justifiable pride in its excellence.

Back in the days of 1928 I suggested to Wilbur C. Whitehead the idea of getting Mr. Vanderbilt, internationally known sportsman, to donate a suitable trophy for team-of-four supremacy. Mr. Vanderbilt agreed to do so.

In presenting the cup the donor organized a self-perpetuating committee and stipulated that it should act independently of any club or organization, thus attaining a truly national scope. The late Wilbur C. Whitehead became chairman; Ely Culbertson, secretary, with Walter Beinecke, Charles P. Cadley, Ralph J. Leibenderfer, George Reith, Harold C. Richard, Gratz M. Scott, Harral S. Tenney, Stuyvesant Wainright, Edwin A. Wetzlar, Milton C. Work and Vanderbilt. Commander Winfield Liggett Jr., Captain Alfred M. Gruenther and Waldemar von Zedtwitz have since been added.

The first contest for the Vanderbilt cup took place in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1928, and ended in a tie between Whitehead-R. R. Richards-Wetzlar-Scott and A. H. Brown-Nils M. Wester-Mrs. Rufus Taylor-Mrs. Sydney Lovell, of Chicago. In 1929 Harry B. Raffel, J. P. Mattheys, Lee Langdon and Michael T. Gottlieb, representing the New York Bridge Whist Club, carried off the coveted trophy. In 1930 Theodore A. Lightner, Von Zedtwitz, Mrs. Culbertson and myself, the Bridge World team, took it away from them. Then P. Hal Sims, Willard Karn, Osward Jacoby, and David Brunstine won the trophy in 1931. Sims and Karn repeated in 1932 with Vanderbilt and Von Zedtwitz as their teammates.

In 1933 Francis Rendon, Sydney Rusinow, Philip Abramsohn, and Benjamin Feuer, a dark-horse team, crashed through to victory, and last year Howard Schenken, Gottlieb, Jacoby, Burnstine and Dick Frey earned the right to defend the title in the forthcoming event.

Team-of-four competition is by far the fairest test of contract skill. As partial proof of the assertion we find that almost every one of the 14 first masters of bridge has played on a Vanderbilt cup winning team.

This year the event promises to break the record in participating attendance. There will be two qualifying sessions to select 16 teams for the ensuing four knock-out rounds. As usual, Captain Gruenther of West Point will be the tournament director.

It is too bad they will not allow kibitzers; otherwise I would invite you all to be there.

TODAY'S QUESTIONS.

Question: Against the opponents' no-trump contract my partner opened the ace of diamonds. Dummy held two little diamonds, and I held the jack, 6 and 3. Which card should I play?

Answer: You should play the jack. When your partner opens an ace against a no-trump contract he asks you to follow suit with your highest card of the suit. You should never vary this procedure except when dummy's holding (for example, 10 x x x) indicates that if you drop your highest card it will establish a stopper for dummy.

Question: My partner bid one diamond and the next player bid one spade. I held spade J 10 8 6 4 2 heart 8 7 6, diamond 3 2, club Q J. Should I double the spade bid?

Answer: No; it is best to pass and see what happens. A penalty double in this situation is about the same as a free bid, and partner will usually depend upon you for at least 1 1-2 honor tricks if you double. This may lead him to rebid his hand and be set.

Mr. Culbertson will be very glad to answer questions on bridge. Please enclose a stamped (3-cent), self-addressed envelope and address your questions to Ely Culbertson, in care of the Atlanta Constitution.

Bridge Problem

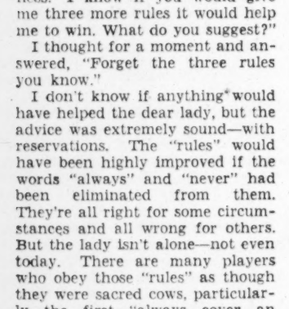

The declarer in the hand shown here ran into all sorts of trouble. He found all the opponents' trumps in one hand against him, and he tried a finesse and lost. But he did not give up hope, and by excellent play he made the slam he had bid.

The bidding (neither side vulnerable):

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♦	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 N. T.	Pass	4 N. T.	Pass
6 ♣ (final bid)

Opening lead, queen of hearts by West. South won with the king. How can he play to make six clubs?

SOLUTION: South won the first trick with the heart king and laid down the king of clubs. This is the proper first play with a nine-card trump suit of this type. South next led his diamond; dummy played the jack and East the queen. East led a heart and South took the ace. South led the club deuce, West played the 10, and dummy won with the club 9. South trumped another diamond with his last club. Then he led a spade to the ace and played dummy's ace of clubs, discarding a heart. His spade king, queen, and 10 won the last three tricks, and South made six clubs.

She Smiled—Smiled—Kept on Smiling—and It Got Her $180,000

INHERITED A SMILE
Good Old Doctor Louraine's Golden Spoon Held a Sweet Dosage for Gloria, Nine-Year-Old Daughter of the Cinderella Dancing-Girl Whose Smile Won a Fortune.

The Elderly Stranger (With a Big Bankroll) Smiled Back at the Gay Child-Dancer—and Now, Grown-Up and Married, She's His Heiress

There are smiles that make us happy,
There are smiles that make us blue,
There are smiles that steal away your sadness
Like the sunshine steals away the dew;
There are smiles that have a tender meaning
That eyes of love alone can see—
But the smiles that fill my heart with gladness
Are the smiles that you gave to me.

DR. HOWARD LOURAINE, bending over some important memoranda on his desk as he sat in his study late at night, paused in his labors, his pen poised tentatively. Of a sudden, the tension of his concentration relaxed, the furrows of a knotted forehead disappeared as if by magic—and he smiled.

It was a smile of recollection—and the memory that lingered was that of a smile. The music of childish laughter again assailed the old man's ears and through the dimming years he saw once more the little East Side type, whom he had affectionately dubbed "Little Miss Blue Eyes"—a little girl whom he had first seen romp as a graceful sprite at the Chrystie Street Settlement, New York.

He'd seen her dancing on the sidewalks there with other East Side youngsters and he'd watched her as, smiling and joyful, she grew into that magic age of wonder and discovery, the early 'teens. Now she must be a young woman, he thought.

Musing, moist-eyed, the aged physician recalled the tonic of those contacts with happy Hannah Gruber—for that was the real name of "Little Miss Blue Eyes." His own eyes heavy-lidded with weariness from long, dutiful rounds of hospitals and the homes of the suffering, Dr. Louraine in those days had never failed to include the Christie Street settlement house on his rounds of benevolence. People thought his interest in settlement work was purely philanthropic, but he knew better.

Fact was, it cheered his whole day to see this child, irradiated with a gladness that transformed all about her into a strange new estate, as if some conjurer had touched a magic wand to ugliness and brought forth beauty and brightness. It was always with a firmer step, a clearer eye, a sturdier spirit, that Dr. Louraine set forth on his now no longer wearisome rounds, after chucking the smiling youngster under the chin, patting her rebellious flaxen locks and encouraging her in her dancing lessons, which she was taking at the settlement house.

That had been many years ago. And now the hand that gripped the pen again descended, and Dr. Louraine scribbled rapidly, a happy smile wreathing his face.

Later, Dr. Louraine's attorney put the notes into proper legal form. And a little while after that, when Dr. Louraine ceased his earthly labors, the same attorney presented that same document to the court—the kindly physician's last will and testament.

Then it was found that Dr. Louraine had "endowed a smile"—for among its provisions was a legacy of $50,000 for the little East Side Cinderella who had unconsciously lightened his labors with her laughter — for little Miss Hannah ("Blue Eyes") Gruber herself!

Some fifteen years had elapsed between the filing of the will and the venerable Dr. Louraine's visits to the Chrystie Street Mission (he had transferred his practice to Chicago)—and little Hannah, who now must be 23, could not be found. So Miss Harriet Bates, representing the Louraine estate, went to New York, with only an old Rivington street address of the Grubers and a field-day photograph of little Hannah—a picture that had reposed all these years on the doctor's desk—to guide her in a search for the missing heiress.

Tiny as was the pictured likeness of Hannah in the field-day photo, there was no mistaking her cheery countenance. It was glorified with a heart-warming smile. And so, first of all, Miss Bates' task was reduced to the general proportions of a hunt for a smile—one that would match that of the little happy girl in the photograph. But, although many were willing enough to smile when they learned that an inheritance was at stake, of all Grubers or near Grubers (she'd never suspected that there were so many) none had the sparkle and brilliance of Hannah, as evidenced by the photograph. Miss Bates thought, once or twice, that she had run across the missing heiress—the smiles seemed almost as infectious as Hannah's—but, alas, these particular prospects didn't even prove to be of Gruber lineage.

Finally, after a two-and-a-half months' painstaking pursuit of clues, Miss Bates found Hannah, five flights up in a tiny 4-room flat in the Bronx. There she lived with her family, Philip and Anna Gruber, the father and mother, who hail from Rumania and Austria, and seven other children.

One can imagine how this large family must have skimped to get along—and how incredible sounded the tale that Miss Bates brought them! Hannah, who had managed to stay in school until her graduation at Washington Irving high school, had had her day dreams, including a romance with Charles Medoff, a brisk young man with an instinct for success, who already had a shoe store of his own full of slippers that weren't made of glass.

And when Miss Bates, by dint of legal documents and clippings from the newspapers, finally convinced the astonished family that her mission was not to sell them anything but to give them $50,000, Hannah, dazedly, and with the old smile that had dazzled Dr. Louraine turned on at top voltage, ran to Charles and told him the news. And he smiled too!

There really wasn't the slightest reason or even the shadow of an excuse for delaying their marriage, after that!

So Papa Gruber, a baker, concocted the most gorgeous wedding cake of his career . . . the happy bridegroom supplied the slippers . . . husbands of her sisters, who owned and operated taxicabs, naturally furnished the coaches. Cinderella was happy!

But a Cinderella yarn is not complete without a stepmother—or someone who would exercise stepmotherish tendencies toward the heroine. Wherefore it was in accordance with good fiction form that a wealthy spinster, Miss Francine McFarland, 75, of Chicago, a cousin and a co-heir of Dr. Louraine's $2,000,000 fortune, should fight the bequest.

With six other heirs, she shared the estate, her portion being $500,000; but the young Mrs. Medoff was among these heirs—a rank outsider, Miss McFarland considered her! All that for a smile? Absurd!

So she summoned the family lawyer to her sumptuous home, a Michigan avenue showplace, and began a suit to break the will, determined that the laughing little blonde girl should be deprived of her sunshine money—and to test Hannah and Charles' smiling capacities by a protracted lawsuit.

Finally, just as in the fairy tale, the tables were turned on Miss McFarland. She lost the suit—but a more bitter pill to swallow was that her fight tied her hands in the collection of her own share of the doctor's estate. So that when she died, shortly after the litigation ended, she had been unable to make a will specifically forbidding any part of her share from going to the girl who had smiled her way into a tired old man's heart and unwittingly won part of his fortune.

And the effect of that technicality was—

Under the terms of Dr. Louraine's will, Miss McFarland's big share of the $2,000,000 estate now goes to the other heirs named in the will—laughing Hannah Medoff included!

Thus the original bequest of $50,000, because it was contested and its settlement delayed, now has been increased to $150,000—which amount, through the accumulation of interest, says her attorney, will approximate $180,000 by Christmas Day!

That day, too, as it happens, is Hannah's birthday. A fine present, either way you take it! And what a temptation for moralists and the makers of epigrams to draw fresh lessons from an age-old text, based on the rather crude simile of biting off one's nose to spite one's face—and to manufacture a flock of new ones that deal specifically with that agreeable and inspiring human manifestation called a smile!

In the meantime, there has been not only an increase in the material fortunes of the Medoffs (there is a plan for a whole chain of shoe stores) but a considerable expansion of its lucrative smiling propensities. Baby Gloria Medoff, who arrived not so long after the ghostly fingers of benevolent Dr. Louraine tipped a cornucopia of gold into smiling Hannah's lap, is now nine, and can she smile!

The "Perfect Couple" Cracked Up—and Even Science Couldn't Find the Answer

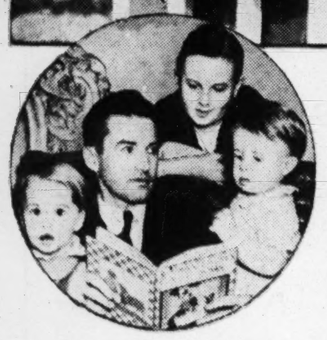

When Even the Young Haley Fiskes Hit Alimony Trail, It's Easy to Believe the Two Wise Professors Who Deal a Smashing Blow to the Old "Happy Marriage" Rules

"NOTHING IN COMMON"—?

OLD RULE GOES SMASH
So Children Bind Married Couples Together, Do They? Here's Walter N. Emerson, Former Screen Dancer, With His Three Children, Edmund, Walter and Frank. Yet Emerson and His Wife Figured in the Very Mixed-Up Emerson-Sewell Quadrangle Divorce Affair.

AGE DIFFERENCES DON'T COUNT
The Old May-December Proverb Notwithstanding, Mrs. Harry Wils, Some Years Her Husband's Senior, Proved That Dissimilarity in Ages Is No Bar to a Thoroughly Happy Marriage.

IF marriage is a gamble, surely the svelte, socially elite Helen Lowe Rice and the handsome, wealthy Haley Fiske, Jr., very eligible young bachelor, had every card stacked in their favor. They held all the aces and trumps. They couldn't lose—so vouched their friends.

When they marched down the middle aisle of swank St. Thomas Church on Fifth Avenue 11 years ago, the Goddess of Fortune seemed to march with them, smiling. Helen, the youngest daughter of that redoubtable matriarch, Mrs. William Lowe Rice, was beautiful, popular, well-bred and rich. The groom, son and heir of the distinguished founder of a great life insurance company, was six feet tall, red-haired, dashing, considered the catch of the season. The world was this young couple's oyster. It was a fiction love story set-up. It couldn't miss!

To their marriage accrued all the delights and privileges calculated to knit young love more closely together. Young Fiske became vice-president of his father's company, with a yearly salary of $10,000, an estate, and the promise of a great fortune. His wife became one of Mayfair's most influential society matrons. And there were two children, Helen and Phyllis—children such as are popularly supposed to make marriage more binding. They had everything, but—

The other day, still-beautiful Helen came into court in Newark, N. J., and got her divorce—on cruelty charges. Haley would insult her in the presence of friends, accusing her of misconduct with a number of them, she testified. He would "yell and shout" at her, strike her in public, "persisting on such occasions in bending my fingers back," her evidence stated. He'd sprained her wrist by the finger bending process, she declared.

Mrs. Fiske's divorce petition read: "Despite his temper, insults, false accusations of impropriety and the beatings to which I was subjected, I continued to reside in the same house with him until I realized he had become physically and mentally ill."

Mrs. Fiske declared that she consulted doctors about her husband to no avail. Some scenes from the life of this "ideal couple," as pictured in the divorce testimony:

In the latter part of August, 1934, she stated, she and her husband had invited friends to their Rumson, N. J., home for dinner. Haley came home late intoxicated, while they were eating. He slept on the porch throughout the meal and when she got into her car to go to the movies with their guests he ran down the steps, dragged her out and beat her while the others looked on.

"He seemed to loathe the sight of me," said the young wife. "I was almost his worst enemy. Everything he could do to hurt me and be cruel he seemed to take pleasure in. . . .

"He struck me and gave me a bloody nose, many times he gave me black eyes. He strained my hands and pushed me around as often as he could get near me when he was in that condition. He knocked me on the floor any number of times and knocked me out of cars."

But the crowning injury occurred one night when Mrs. Carol Coddington, of New York, was visiting the Fiskes. According to her testimony in favor of Mrs. Fiske, the society woman said that in the middle of the night Fiske entered her room, woke her up, and asked whether she wanted to "come in and watch me beat my wife!"

She put on a negligee she testified, and, helplessly, followed him. He threatened to strike her, too, she said, but her own husband entered the room and quieted the enraged host. She stood horrified in the doorway and watched the beating administered, she declared.

When Advisory Master Dougal Herr heard this evidence, he awarded Mrs. Fiske a decree in record time—12½ minutes. And Helen was awarded custody of the two children and $275 monthly towards their education and support.

Thus ended the "perfect marriage" of two of the brightest stars in the social firmament. Baffled, incredulous, their friends found it hard to believe that so promising a union should end in such disaster. All the proverbial elements supposed, by tradition and convention, to make for a happy marriage were there, abundantly. All the old sayings about marrying young—being of about equal age—having money—having children—having culture—applied to the Fiskes.

But out in Stanford University, California, are two scholars in psychology who are not even mildly surprised by the outcome of this marriage and hundreds of others like it. In a way, it is only what they might have expected. You see, they'd made a survey—the first searching, scientific inquiry into the REAL causes of marital disaster.

For several years Professors Lewis M. Terman and Paul Buttenwieser have conducted an investigation into the causes and results of marriage and divorce. Their findings, published almost simultaneously with the recent Fiske domestic debacle, proved startling, upsetting virtually every accepted axiom and proverb regarding marriage.

Six hundred couples, divided into three groups—happily married, unhappily married and divorced—were selected for "laboratory" purposes. Each couple was asked to fill out an exhaustive questionnaire, designed to determine the principal points of agreement and disagreement in their homes.

If friends of the Fiskes were surprised to observe that their lovely children hadn't healed the rift between them, Professors Terman and Buttenwieser were not. They found that there was no significant difference between possession of children by the 100 most happy and the 100 least happy matched couples. They concluded that while the presence of children may sometimes render actual divorce less likely, it has no effect at all upon marital happiness. A body-blow to pet tradition No. 1!

What they established as to children was that husband and wife must agree about them—about having them in the first place, and about how to bring them up. Children aren't the key to happiness—agreement is!

In the former group, 46 per cent always agree on finances, 43 per cent on recreation and 61 per cent on religion. The remaining percentage "almost always" agree on these subjects.

But in the group of unhappily marrieds, only 15 always agree on finances! The majority disagree. And the ratio is similar for other topics in a long range of common domestic issues.

On more vital subjects, such as friends, intimate relations, demonstration of affection, care of the children, table manners, conventions, philosophy of life and in-laws, the proportion of agreement and frequent agreement is extremely high for the happily marrieds and correspondingly low for the unhappily marrieds. This in the face of those ultra-modern psychiatrists who insist that only "diversity of opinion" can prevent marriage from becoming stale and boresome.

One of the most surprising statistics completely upsets the old vaudeville conception of the role of mother-in-law in the menage. Of 100 happily marrieds, it actually came out that 57 couples were in perfect agreement about their in-laws; even among the less happy ones, the in-law situation didn't count heavily. The professors further suggest that far from causing friction in the home, in-laws more often help. The whole finding was, mothers-in-law are very popular!

Research into the percentage of husbands who gave in to their wives after disputes, revealed that in 27 out of 100 marriages in the unhappy class, the husband allowed the wife to wear the pants around the house; but this was true of only 4 happily married husbands. On the other hand, happy husbands didn't boss, either. It was found that 92 out of 100 happy couples maintained a give-and-take relationship. Moral: the husband as the pater familias, the strong, silent dictator of the home, is an outmoded conception. So is the dominant wife.

And if you want further proof that a new deal is pending for married couples, consider other and more startling conclusions reached by the professors:

You've heard people say that "little things like table manners" are unimportant if a couple are really in love. Aren't they? They are indeed! Dislike of the other party's table manners loomed large in the "unhappy" statistics—and husbands disliked their wives' way of eating more often than the wives disliked theirs!

"Money doesn't count. All that counts is true love." Wrong again. Professors Terman and Buttenwieser in their statistics indicate agreement over money is mighty important.

Particular stress is laid, finally, on the most startling indication of all—the fact that petted and even spoiled boys and girls DO grow up to be good husbands or wives. Contrary to every preconceived idea on the subject, the professors found that with happily married couples the percentage of exceptional fondness for parents on the part of both husband and wife was 40 per cent. For unhappy couples, it was only 23 per cent. Fact is, petted sons and daughters have better dispositions than other kids, and carry them on through life!

"The essential fact," the professors state, "to be explained is why happily married persons, both men and women, report more attachment for and less conflict with both their parents than are reported by the unhappily married.

"It seems to us that the most reasonable explanation is that members of the happy group are by inherited and early-acquired disposition a little more amiable and affectionate, on the average, than the members of the less happy group. This disposition would account for the satisfactory relationship both with parents and with spouse.

"Another possible explanation is that the mere fact of present marital happiness or unhappiness tends to affect the subject's report of his relations to his parents, favorably if he is happy, unfavorably if he is unhappy, as though these states were colored glasses lending their own distinctive hues to whatever is seen through them."

So, in the light of science, the unhappy marriage of the ideal couple who "had everything," is not so surprising. Modern psychologists are beginning to discover that none of the elements hitherto thought to be vital to happy marriage is so important after all. Outwardly, "perfect marriages" continue to crash, while those in which couples agree on a wide variety of issues stand every test of the years. ●

Justice and the Tribune Murder

By PETER LEVINS.

ONCE in a while we have referred to certain murder cases as classics—and here is another celebrated tragedy which merits the rating. It happened a long while ago—so long that to most New Yorkers the names will mean nothing. However, there is one citizen of this town in whose mind all these events are as fresh as though they happened yesterday. This New Yorker is Daniel Frohman, dean of American theatrical producers, who was an eyewitness of the crime.

Two men and a woman were the principals in the drama, and the minor characters included some of the most prominent people in the newspaper, literary and theatrical world. The woman was Abby Sage McFarland, talented, beautiful; the two men were her husband, Daniel McFarland, lawyer, promoter and would-be politician; and Albert Dean Richardson, one of the leading journalists in the country.

Abby Sage, a native of Hingham, Mass., married McFarland in 1857, when she was 19 and he 37. She had been a teacher and had begun to contribute stories and articles to the press. McFarland swept her off her feet—she married him without knowing whether or not she was in love with him. A convincing talker, he had courted her ardently and had told her in glowing terms of his law practice in Wisconsin, where he also owned considerable property.

But within a few weeks of the marriage she began to find out things about the fiery McFarland. As a suitor he had been charming, as a husband he was a fiend. Always broke, he borrowed money right and left, and worst of all he was a jealous maniac, particularly when drunk. He apparently took delight in abusing her for no other reason than that she was gentle and forgiving.

The newlyweds lived from hand to mouth, moving from one boarding house to another, most of the time in New York city. Eventually Abby was supporting him and their two babies by giving public and private readings, and by contributing to newspapers and magazines. Had this not been the Victorian age, she would probably have left him before the first year ended, but in those days respectable women did not leave their husbands. It wasn't done, that's all.

One of McFarland's favorite practices was to come home with a quart of liquor, place it at the bedside, and drink the whole bottle before morning. His excuse was that his "brain was on fire" and the whisky made him sleep. As this business started only two or three months before the first child (which died in infancy) was born, all her senses were nervously acute, "and as I was also, as I believe (she stated years later), a woman of refined taste and feeling, his breath and whole body steaming with the vile liquor which he drank during these nights while I lay awake beside him very odious to me, so that before I had been married to him a year my affection for him was very much chilled, I might even say destroyed."

When he sobered up he would be overcome with remorse and for a while would be kind to her. But these pleasant periods were all too brief. Again the furies would possess him, he would go into jealous tantrums, threaten to cut her throat, and to take his own life. Many times he appropriated money which she needed for food and rent. He always opened all her mail before bringing it to her. Yet there never was the faintest scrap of evidence that she was anything but a faithful wife.

The years passed. She told no one of her unhappiness, not even her own family, and she stuck to McFarland.

The beautiful, soft-spoken wife made some lasting friends in New York, among them Mrs. John F. Cleveland, a sister of Horace Greely, owner of the New York Tribune; Mrs. Samuel Sinclair, wife of the publisher of the Tribune, and Mrs. Lucia Calhoun, who wrote for the same paper.

Abby met Albert Richardson in the Cleveland home in 1866, during one of his flying visits to New York. He was then 33 years old, a tall, good-looking, quiet man, deeply immersed in the writing of his second book, "Beyond the Mississisippi." He had been a reporter since he was 18, had risked his life to serve as a Tribune correspondent in the south just before and during the Civil War, and later had spent twenty months in Confederate prisons. His first book, "Field, Dungeon and Escape," sold 90,000 copies.

It should be noted that, so far as Richardson was concerned, there had been but one woman in the world—his wife, who had died while he was in prison, leaving three young children.

In the fall of 1866 Abby McFarland, through the influence of her good friends, received work, at $20 a week, in Edwin Booth's Shakespearean company at the Winter Garden. Though untrained as an actress, she was able to play small parts. Mrs. Calhoun also interested the managing editor of The Independent in her writing, with the result that she began writing children's stories and verses for that publication.

Her landlady on Macdougal street was shocked when Abby told of her new work at the Winter Garden. Nothing would do but Mrs. McFarland must give up her attic rooms—McFarland was out of town most of the time—because this was a respectable house, and what would the other tenants think if they knew an actress resided under the same roof? Abby said she would need a little time to look around for new quarters.

She visited the Calhoun home and found them all at luncheon, along with Richardson, who was treated there like a son and brother.

Mrs. McFarland told them of the landlady's ultimatum, and asked their advice. Richardson, whom she had seen at the Calhoun home only once or twice before this, suggested that she advertise for a boarding house. Then he recalled that there were some vacant rooms at the house where he lodged on Amity street. He said that if she liked them he would convince the landlady that Mrs. McFarland, though an actress, was really quite a respectable lady.

She inspected the rooms the next day but the rent was more than she could afford. However, she found quarters in a house near by, at 86 Amity street.

Meanwhile McFarland had been angling for some sort of city or government job, and his wife's friends had been putting in a kind word for him. Late in December he sent Abby to see Richardson, hoping the latter might be able to get him a job with the Pacific railroad. Several notes pertaining to this, all written by Richardson's secretary, passed between the writer and her.

Mrs. McFarland again moved early in January. She found much more comfortable quarters at 72 Amity street, almost directly across the street from Richardson's lodgings. Here, when she wrote during all her spare moments, and also did all the cooking, much of the washing and ironing, and all the sewing, mending, etc.

The hand of fate moved these two somewhat closer late that month of January, 1867, when Richardson rented a large room in the front of the house in which the McFarland's lived. He used this as a workroom during the day, along with a secretary, an artist and a messenger.

On February 1 McFarland started work as a clerk in the custom office. The job had been obtained for him through the Sinclairs. A few days later Mrs. Sinclair and Mrs. Calhoun went to Washington, D. C., on a visit, and they were still there on February 19 when events piled up to a nerve-shattering climax in the life of Abby McFarland.

On the afternoon of that day, when McFarland entered the house on Amity street, he saw his wife standing at the door of Richardson's workroom. Richardson was handing her some manuscripts which he had offered to lend her to make use of, if she could, in some literary work. Though the door was open, and three other persons were in the room at the time, McFarland was immediately seized with a jealous fit.

Back together in their own quarters, the husband began to work himself into a tantrum. Abby denied that she had been in Richardson's room, denied that she was in the habit of going there. Even if she had been in there, she added, it was not a private room but an office during the daytime.

McFarland's fury was not to be silenced. His angry accusations embarrassed her greatly, for she feared that Richardson and his assistants must be hearing every word. She left after a while for the theater, and she returned to find him drunk, and in a more abusive temper than before.

It went on for hours. In the presence of their 7-year-old son Percy (the other boy, Danny, was at this time with her parents in New Hampshire). "He used expressions and asked questions which I could neither forgive nor endure."

And Albert Richardson, in his adjoining quarters, could not help but hear.

Before going to the theater she had secreted her husband's razors, pocket knife, her scissors, and various other articles she considered dangerous—she had done this on other occasions. At about midnight McFarland announced solemnly that he was going out to destroy himself, but he had done this so many times before that she said nothing. At the door he asked her if she had nothing to say "in this last parting."

She replied quietly, "I can only say that I am hopelessly sorry for you."

She Leaves Home, Taking Her Child.

McFarland left but returned presently, cooled and sobered by the night air, and she began to talk to him as mildly and firmly as she could. She told him that she was going to leave him forever, that she could endure it no longer. Immediately he groveled at her feet, begged for forgiveness, sobbed that he loved her. At about daylight he fell asleep, exhausted.

When he got up she did not again mention her intention but as soon as he left for his office downtown she went with her child to the Sinclair home on Washington place, and placed herself under the protection of that family. She never saw Daniel McFarland alone again.

Richardson was at the Sinclair residence when she entered. The only other person present was Miss Lutharia Perry, Mrs. Sinclair's eldest sister. Abby, her emotions at the breaking point, burst into tears as she ran in. Miss Perry put her arms around her, and Richardson stood by, waiting for her to speak.

Abby told what had happened, and said she was now fully resolved never to go back to her husband.

Richardson, knowing how easily women change their minds in such situations, said very little at this time beyond asserting he would be glad to help her in any way he could. In the absence of Mrs. Sinclair and Mrs. Calhoun, she depended upon Richardson in this crisis, and it was he who helped her make arrangements to send Percy to her parents' home. He also got in touch with her friends in Washington.

Mrs. Calhoun wrote a letter to Abby after she received word from Richardson. We quote the following excerpt from her letter because it is important in this story:

"My darling:

"We just received Mr. Richardson's letter. I am so glad that you have left M.; do not. I beseech you, return. Do not let any weakness of mercy possess you. It is happy that the stroke has fallen, no matter what heartbreak will come with it. I could be glad that you suffer, if your suffering would keep you away from him. My darling for whom I would die, do not so wrong your womanhood as to go back. You must not; shall not."

Richardson also saw McFarland. He informed the husband that he was Abby's friend in this matter, and that he had telegraphed her father to come on to New York.

Sage arrived on February 23, and the next evening, in the presence of her father and several friends, Abby announced to McFarland her absolute determination to leave him. He replied in his best manner that he accepted her decision as final, adding, "I bow to it and submit to it." When the conference was over the wife urged her father to go along with McFarland and remain with him through the night to see that he did nothing desperate.

Richardson called at the Sinclair residence the next evening. He remarked that he was going to his publishers at Hartford, Conn., in a few days to finish his book. As Abby expected to go to her father's home on April 7, when her engagement expired at the theater, she realized that very likely she would not see Richardson again before she left. Accordingly, when he arose to leave, she went with him to the door to say—what she could not say before the others—that he had been extremely good to her, that she could never repay him for what he had done, but that God would surely bless him for it.

She wrote in that statement of hers, "I could not say this without strong emotion."

Richardson said, holding the hand she had held out to him, "How do you feel about facing the world with two babies?"

"I am sure I can get on better without that man than with him."

He stooped down and spoke in a lower tone. "Before I go there is something I want to say. I wish you to remember that any responsibility you choose to give me in any possible future, I shall be very glad to take." Then he left.

Two days later he saw her again at the Sinclair home. He told her in a typically Victorian scene in the parlor that during the storms of the past few days he had become interested in her and very fond of her; that she was the woman of all the world to whom he would gladly intrust the care of his children; that her prudence and reserve had won him greatly; that in fact, he loved her.

"I want to marry you when you are free to marry," he said. "What have you to say, Abby?"

"I am wondering whether you are mistaking sympathy for—for a warmer feeling."

He laughed, for her answer amounted to acceptance. Then he told her to tell her friends all that he had said, and to take their counsel.

A few days later Richardson went to Hartford. He wrote her several letters—love letters. One of them, written March 9, and addressed to her in care of Samuel Sinclair at the Tribune, never reached her.

McFarland intercepted it.

Meanwhile Abby went back to her old quarters on Amity street, where her trunks and wardrobe still remained. A woman friend spent the nights with her there. Two nights after she went back to Amity street Richardson stopped off in New York on the way to Washington. He arrived on March 12 and on the following evening, when she left the theater, she found him waiting for her.

The two had walked away from the Waverly theater, and were on Amity street, near Broadway, when McFarland crept up behind them and fired three shots. One bullet struck Richardson in the thigh but he was nevertheless able to grapple with his assailant and hold him until a police officer arrived.

McFarland was taken to a police station but was released the next morning. Richardson preferred not to make any complaint.

Abby nursed Richardson at the Sinclair home until he was out of danger, then went to her parents' home in Massachusetts. She wrote a letter to Richardson, releasing him from any allegiance, or fancied allegiance, but he replied that he had been "in rougher waves before and ridden them safely." He concluded his letter, "I think I see a happy future, sunny days, loves of children, loves of home, good to others. I know I see a loyalty nothing can shake, a trust that is absolute, a love that is utter and vital."

Abby remained with her family until the spring of 1869, then went to Indianapolis, Ind., where she filed suit for divorce. She was there sixteen months, supporting herself with her writing and readings. Richardson meanwhile journeyed about the country gathering material for his "Personal History of Ulysses S. Grant."

The woman returned home with her decree of divorce on October 31, 1869. On November 17 Richardson went to his mother's home at Medway, Mass., for Thanksgiving. (This was before the holiday was fixed for the last Thursday in November.) On Thanksgiving evening Abby met him at the railroad station as he came from his mother's. For the first time since he was shot in 1867, she walked with him on the street.

The day after Thanksgiving Richardson went back to New York. She was to come in a few weeks, and they were to be married.

On the morning of November 25 Richardson visited the office of the Tribune, at the corner of Spruce and Nassau streets, to see if there was any mail for him. Young Frohman, who was behind the subscription desk, remarked that "Mac" had been around, had been hanging around the place for days. Richardson said that he did not expect to be back again that day.

But he did return shortly after 5 p. m.

He had just asked if there was any mail when McFarland pushed a pistol past George W. King, another clerk, and fired one shot. The ball struck Richardson in the abdomen. McFarland dashed out into the street. Richardson staggered out of the office, climbed the stairs to the office of the managing editor, Whitelaw Reid, and lay down on a couch.

Soon Dr. Charles J. Swan arrived. Richardson was removed to the Astor house, across the park.

McFarland, meanwhile, walked up Centre street, stopped at a restaurant for some stew and coffee, then continued uptown. He was getting ready for bed three hours later when Captain Anthony J. Allaire took him into custody. Allaire rushed him to the Astor house, where the wounded man identified him as his assailant, then he was locked up in the Fourth Precinct station house.

Anti-Greely papers—and there were plenty of them in those days—seized upon the story gleefully. All the forces of Tammany Hall, which Greely and his associates on the Tribune had been fighting tooth and nail, went to the defense of Daniel McFarland, the outraged husband. James Gordon Bennett's Herald was particularly biased in its accounts.

The consequence was that newspaper readers of New York, or at least those that did not read the Tribune, gathered the impression that Abby Sage McFarland and Albert Richardson had been having an affair, that Richardson had obtained an illegal divorce for her, and that McFarland had done no more than his duty in shooting down this libertine, this protege of Greely, who had led the wife astray.

Abby had hastened to New York as soon as the dreadful news reached her, remained at the bedside in Room 115 as the patient gradually lost ground. On the third day Richardson asked her if, should there seem to be no hope of his recovery, she would marry him. She replied at once that she would. By Tuesday, November 30, the doctors knew that he could not survive.

Greely and other friends summoned the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, of Brooklyn, and the Rev. Octavius Brooks Frothingham, pastor of Richardson's church. So Abby and the dying man were married in a brief ceremony. Abby, as the Herald put it, "held the hand of her rash and prostrate lover" while the Rev. Frothingham uttered a short prayer, ending with the words, "Father, we thank Thee for what these two have been to each other, for what they may yet be."

Immediately the floodgates of publicity were thrown wide open. Newspapers all over the land told of the tragedy and commented upon the moral issues. With Bennett's paper shouting about that "disgusting ceremony." Recorder Hackett added fuel to the fire on December 8 when he instructed the grand jury to discover whether the two clergymen had "given benediction to infamy, or consecrated lechery by prayers at the bed of death."

McFarland's trial began on April 4 before Recorder Hackett and a jury. District Attorney Garvin, Assistant District Attorney Fellows, Special Prosecutor Noah Davis represented the state. The anti-Greely forces saw to it that the defendant was well represented by John Graham, the Clarence Darrow of the period; Charles Spencer and Elbridge T. Gerry.

Press and public were definitely on McFarland's side, for he had been painted for months as a long-suffering, hard-working and devoted husband driven mad by his wife's passion for another.

Attorney Spencer, for the defense, told the jury that the McFarlands' home life had been ideal until Richardson, the adulterer, entered the scene. Spencer, referring to Mrs. Calhoun's letter from Washington, decribed the woman as "the plotter, the panderer and procurer" for Richardson. There was a great deal of this.

Spencer publicly apologized for his virulent address a few days later and resigned from the defense.

But by this time the damage was done. All the defense attorneys made the most extravagant accusations against Abby and Richardson, and predicted that they would prove this and that. But never once during the whole trial were they able to substantiate a single charge. There was not a scrap of evidence to prove that Richardson had done anything wrong, or that the wife had been betrayed.

The final arguments to the jury began May 6. Four days later the jury took the case and after an hour and a half returned a verdict of not guilty.

The courtroom crowd went wild with delight. Women rushed forward to hug and kiss John Graham and the defendant. The Herald's jubilant five-column story the next morning began:

"The end has come at last. Joy and suffering have a common ending in this, that both have a terminal point. The poet truly said, 'Time at last makes all things even.'"

(Nuts!)

Immediately after the trial Abby prepared a detailed sworn statement—"the first and last word I shall ever speak for myself." It concluded with these words:

"There is but one word more to say, and I will say it briefly. It is well known that I have been on trial before a New York court as much an Daniel McFarland, and for a crime more heinous and more bitterly punished in a woman than murder committed by a man. And it is clearly seen, by all who see dispassionately, that wherever a loophole was opened for any truth about my conduct or Mr. Richardson's, it was immediately stopped.

"I have tasted to the dregs the cup of justice, which, in the nineteenth century, men born of woman mete one to one whom worst crime was the mistake of marrying a man who was half madman from natural inheritance, half brute from natural proclivity. Of the justice I have received, let those who read my story be witnesses."

McFarland appeared in the newspapers several times thereafter. On the evening of October 18, 1870, a cop found him, dead drunk, trying to batter down the wall of the Wood museum with his head. Eight years later he was fired from the Studebaker wagon works at South Bend, Ind., because of his drunken habits. In 1887 he was again discovered in New York, begging pennies with which to buy liquor.

He died in Colorado in the early 90's.

Abby Sage Richardson, meanwhile, lived a very useful life. She wrote several books, compiled a book of Richardson's writings, and in her later years translated many French plays. She adopted Daniel Frohman as one of her sons, and when he became one of the leading producers in the country she did a great deal of work for Frohman, reading and translating plays.

She was engaged in dramatizing a popular novel by her son, William Sage (whose name had once been Daniel McFarland Jr.), when she died in Rome, Italy, of pneumonia, December 5, 1900.

She never remarried.

Mr. Frohman said recently, when the material for this story was being gathered, "Not grander persons ever lived than Albert and Abby Sage Richardson."

Solution of Last Week's Puzzle

The Planets--Your Daily Guide

By BERNICE DENTON PIERSON

NOVEMBER 10 — SUNDAY: Previous to 7:11 a. m. you are likely to feel a harmony that will give you added inspiration in religious, educational and literary works. Between 7:11 a. m. and 8:43 a. m. avoid a feeling of friction or antagonism towards others. After 8:43 a. m. and continuing throughout the day, you are likely to have plenty of movement and action around you, but guide this activity along calm channels, for you may want to attempt too much. Use caution in travel and care around liquids.

NOVEMBER 11 — MONDAY: During the morning hours you are likely to have a cramped feeling in the things you are attempting, and in the afternoon a strong desire to do something about it all. If you give way to either of these impulses and start into new endeavors, you are likely to encounter many hindrances. This is not an auspicious day to make drastic moves—rather go along the path you have already started.

NOVEMBER 12 — TUESDAY: Family affairs, heart interests, or intimate friends may be disappointing today. Today is not an auspicious time for dealings in matters of beauty or where women are involved. Be very careful in signing papers or where contracts are involved, and give yourself time to think before you act.

NOVEMBER 13 — WEDNESDAY: Concentrate your thoughts today upon substantial ideas and affairs of an humanitarian and original nature. Today favors serious pastimes, affairs connected with ground and mining, dealings with older people, and ideas of an ingenious and original nature. It will be better to avoid ideas of a strictly social design, or at least do not expect too much from them.

NOVEMBER 14—THURSDAY: Before 9:05 a. m., avoid changes, look out for quick action that may lead to accidents, and hold on to your temper. If you will do this, you will be able, to accomplish things quickly. This period is not favorable for dealings in machinery or tools, or in military ideas. Between 9:05 a. m. and 4:05 p. m., you may have a peculiar turn in your affairs for good, but see that you do not overspend, or overestimate where finances are concerned. This is an auspicious time for dealings in liquids, oils and drugs. After 4:05 p. m. and continuing through the afternoon and evening, if you will go to the one who is at the head of affairs, you should receive much satisfaction, in most all lines of business with the exception of real estate, mining and property.

NOVEMBER 15—FRIDAY: The entire day through 7:48 p. m. should result most satisfactorily in almost all lines of endeavor. This will be especially true of people born the latter part of July. After 7:48 p. m. favors ordinary business matters, but suggests caution in making sudden and unpremeditated moves.

NOVEMBER 16—SATURDAY: Keep as quiet as possible today, for you may have a strong desire to rash and indiscreet speech. It will be very easy to sign the wrong paper today, so postpone signing any deeds or legal papers. You should also be careful of your expressions in correspondence, for your mind will be easily disturbed.

If you wish an astrological chart covering your sign of the Zodiac, Bernice Denton Pierson will be glad to send it to you. State your birth month and date (year unnecessary). Write your name and address plainly. Accompany this with 10 cents in stamps or currency to cover clerical expenses, together with self-addressed, stamped envelope. Paris Presents— FOX GLOVES—AND A TROUSERED EVENING GOWN

PATRIOTISM is the keynote of the latest Schiaparelli collection, with a strong political note brought out in Royalist and Republican trends. The fashion motifs inspired by this theme are evidenced on the one hand with gowns of regal elegance, rich fabrics and royal colorings and, on the other, with daring new adventures in simplicity. Among the new colors, Schiaparelli uses a violet called "Imperial" and a new blue called "Royal."

A new satin is called "Altesse," and other materials which dominate her collection range from the "Horse Guards," a new woolen weave, cobweb wools and rough-textured tweeds to brocaded lamés, heavy ottomans and moires; also, Simoun velvets, courduroy and stiffened silks ribbed with velvet.

As usual, the talented Italian coutouriere uses the utmost originality in trimmings, featuring long silk fringes, glass and steel mirrors edging boleros, zipper fastenings and gold franc pieces used as buttons.

The line, in general, is sculptured and follows the natural silhouette. Skirts are shorter and necklines higher. Shoulders are broad and sleeves are important.

IN HIS DRIVE TO CLEAN UP CRIME IN HOMEVILLE, DICK TRACY HAS FINALLY CENTERED HIS ACTIVITIES AROUND THE FAMON BROTHERS WHOM HE SUSPECTS OF BEING THE RINGLEADERS OF A VICIOUS GANG OF RACKETEERS.....

MR. JEBBS, THE GROCER, IS HERE TO SEE YOU.

MR. TRACY, I HAVE A SMALL GROCERY STORE DOWNTOWN ON MAIN STREET THAT I'VE CONDUCTED HONESTLY FOR 15 YEARS. UP TO ABOUT A WEEK OR SO AGO I NEVER HAD TROUBLE OF ANY KIND.

YES- GO ON, MR. JEBBS.

WELL, ABOUT A WEEK AGO-A MAN I DIDN'T KNOW CAME IN AND ASKED ME IF I WOULD LIKE TO ENGAGE A WATCHMAN TO WATCH MY STORE AT NIGHT.

AND YOU TOLD HIM NO?

OF COURSE! I'VE NEVER NEEDED A WATCHMAN AND I TOLD HIM SO. ABOUT TWO DAYS AFTER THAT MY STORE-FRONT WINDOW WAS BROKEN WITH A BRICK.

THE FOLLOWING DAY, THE SAME MAN CAME AROUND AND ASKED ME IF I'D CHANGED MY MIND. I SAID NO, AND THAT NIGHT THE SHED AT THE REAR OF THE STORE WHERE I KEEP MY OIL WAS SET AFIRE.

DESCRIBE THIS MAN WHO CAME TO YOU, MR. JEBBS.

I WAS JUST GOING TO DO THAT.. HE WAS —

MEANWHILE...

WELL-WHAT HAVE YOU GOT TO SAY FOR YOURSELF, GORDON?

HOW ABOUT BERMUDA FOR OUR HONEYMOON? ANYTHING YOU SAY, DARLING. YOU'RE STILL THE BOSS... THANKS TO COLGATE'S!

MOST BAD BREATH BEGINS WITH THE TEETH!

RECENT statements by dental authorities throw new light on bad breath . . . make you realize that the usual precautions may not be effective!

"Most bad breath," these dental authorities explain, "is caused by improperly cleaned teeth!"

Decaying food particles and acid deposits collect in the hidden crevices between the teeth . . . decay . . . and thus become the main source of unpleasant breath.

The sure way of getting at this cause is to use Colgate Dental Cream. Its special penetrating foam gets into every tooth crevice . . . emulsifies and washes away the odor-breeding deposits that ordinary cleaning methods fail to reach.

At the same time, a gentle, grit-free ingredient safely, thoroughly polishes tooth enamel. Teeth shine and sparkle as they never have before!

Why not get Colgate Dental Cream today? Use it regularly. And be sure of having cleaner, brighter teeth . . . and a sweeter, purer breath!

SIGREDA'S LOVE

THE LION ROSE ON HIS HIND LEGS AND FELL FIERCELY UPON HIS VICTIM; AND THUS DIED RABOLD THE VIKING.

BUT BEFORE THE BEAST COULD DEVOUR HIS PREY, A SUDDEN FLIGHT OF ARROWS RAINED FROM THE PLATFORM AND ENDED HIS LIFE.

TARZAN TURNED TO THE CANNIBAL CHIEF, SURPRISED THAT THE VENERATED LORD SIMBA SHOULD BE SLAIN. MENGO EXPLAINED:

"WE FAVOR SIMBA BY KILLING HIM AT THE HEIGHT OF HIS TRIUMPH. HIS HAPPY WORK IS DONE. HE HAS GIVEN US A VICTIM FOR OUR FEAST."

NOW MENGO ORDERED THAT TARZAN BE UNBOUND FOR ENTRANCE INTO THE FATAL ARENA, FROM WHICH NO MAN EVER RETURNED ALIVE.

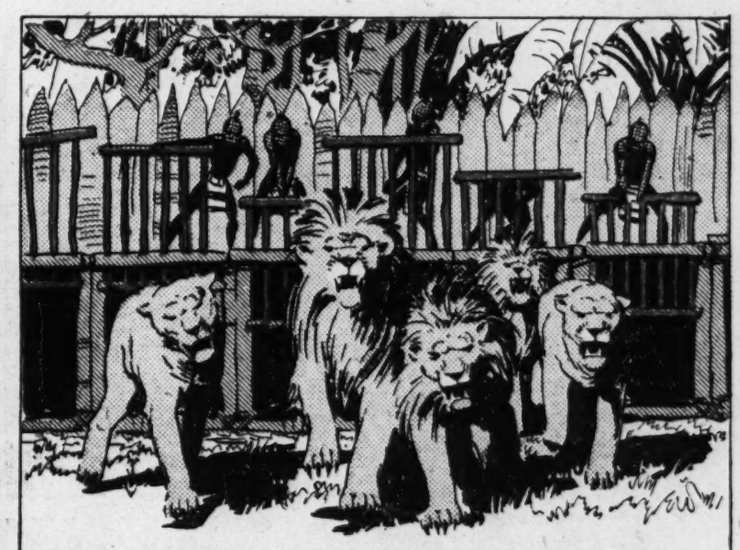

SHARP SPEARS WERE PRESSED AGAINST HIS FLESH. ONE FALSE MOVE, AND THE LANCES WOULD PENETRATE HIS BODY!

TEARS STREAMED NOW FROM SIGREDA'S EYES AS SHE WHISPERED: "FAREWELL, BELOVED. WE SHALL BE UNITED IN DEATH!"

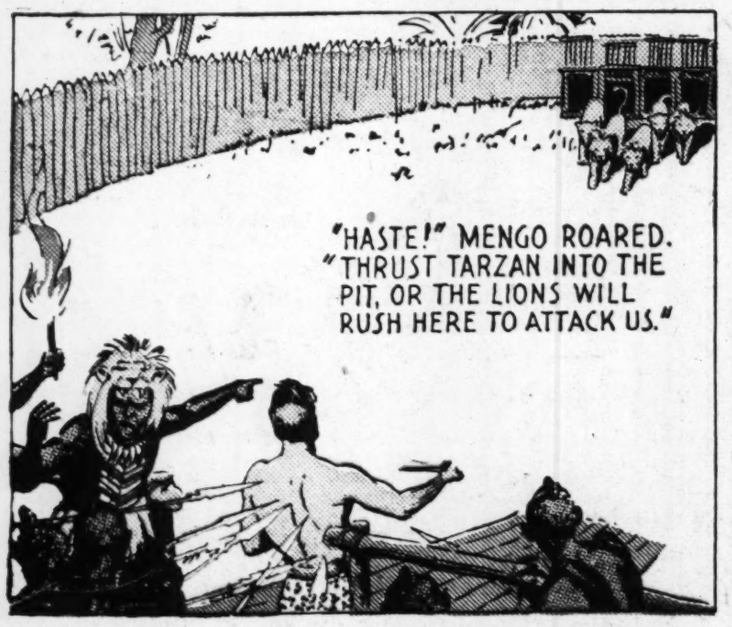

MENGO RETURNED TARZAN'S HUNTING KNIFE; BUT OF WHAT AVAIL WAS THAT SMALL BLADE IN THE COMING COMBAT!

NOW THE CANNIBAL CHIEF SIGNALED TRIUMPHANTLY AND FIVE RAGING LIONS LEAPED FROM THEIR CAGES.

"HASTE!" MENGO ROARED. "THRUST TARZAN INTO THE PIT, OR THE LIONS WILL RUSH HERE TO ATTACK US."

AS THE SPEARMEN DROVE THE APE-MAN INTO THE ARENA, A CRY AROSE BEHIND HIM. IT WAS SIGREDA, SCREAMING!

"RATHER THAN WITNESS HIS DEATH, I SHALL DIE," AND THE DISTRAUGHT MAIDEN RAN PAST TARZAN TO FACE THE RAGING LIONS!"
